MT. LAKE PARK

The only excuse a county paper has for its existence is to disseminate information and to broadcast local, state and national news. And the editor works hard and long to do that very thing. Did you ever stop to think that if all the happenings in your community are not reported in the various letters, that it is partly your fault? In the case of the Park, where winter residents are more or less widely separated and the streets and side walks necessarily in bad condition, "calling" and social intercourse is somewhat restricted. Especially during bad and stormy weather about the only meeting places are the stores and postoffice. This writer will welcome items concerning happenings in this community. Those living elsewhere in the winter like to know what is going on here and are disappointed when but few items are reported. Just ring 110 if you know of anything of interest. We would like to know what you know so that other people may know what we know.

Mr. William T. Burch has returned from a few days' business trip to Washington.

Mr. J. W. Traver, who has been engaged in business in Virginia during the winter, is expected to join Mrs. Traver here this week.

Announcement of the wedding of Miss Mary Katherine Babb, of Keyser, and Jennings Randolph, Congress-elect from the Elkins, W. Va., district, has been received in the Park. Both are well known here, having been frequent visitors at the various tennis tournaments during the past few years.

Bill Garrett, son of Pat. Garrett, of Deer Park, was among the injured in a bus accident near Fairmont. We are advised that he was not seriously injured.

Letters have been received at the Park in regard to the recent entering of some houses, reported in this column. We take this opportunity of advising absent property owners that the town authorities have been active in the matter and report that no serious damage has been done. We do not believe any thing of the nature will again occur. Organization and publicity constitute good police protection in connection with the watchfulness of the bailiff.

"Little Fuzzy" Knight, who plays opposite Mae West in one of her latest pictures, is a Fairmont, W. Va., boy, a brother of Jimmie Knight, a frequent visitor in Oakland and the Park.

A citizens' meeting has been called for the evening of February 20 in Loch Lynn for the purpose of nominating candidates for the coming town election in March.

The 83rd birthday anniversary of Mr. J. A. Enlow was celebrated St. Valentine's Day quietly at his home. Mr. Enlow has not been quite in his usual good health for the past few weeks, but is now able to attend to his usual out door duties. He has the best wishes of his many friends for a long continued activity.

Dried Fruits in the Winter Diet

Of the dried fruits, prunes, apricots, and peaches are entitled to special mention. It is in the cooking of dried fruit at home that food values are most likely to be lost, the specialists say. To avoid this as far as possible, and at the same time to get the best flavor and texture, the Bureau of Home Economics suggests: (1) Use dried fruit uncooked when you can; (2) if it is to be cooked, shorten the cooking time to allow the fruit merely to become plump and tender; (3) if the fruit is soaked, cook it in the soaking water; (4) serve the cooking water with the fruit.

Prunes and apricots can be used without cooking if put to soak in hot water and left until plump and tender. Dried peaches are best if cooked. Soaking the fruit before cooking reduces the cooking time, but it is not necessary to soak over night. For serving as stewed fruit, the flavor and texture are better if the soaking time is much shorter. Different lots of fruit may require somewhat different treatment, but half an hour of soaking in hot water will be found sufficient, as a rule, for dried peaches, and an hour for prunes. Dried apricots need not be soaked at all. For puddings and whips, however, where pulp and juice are combined, the fruit may be soaked for several hours, or over night, in order to make the pulp go through the colander more easily.

RECIPES

Prune and Apricot Pie

One-half pound prunes, ½ pound apricots, 2 cups water, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon butter, pastry.

Soak the prunes and apricots, drain and save the juice. Remove the seeds from the prunes, and cut the fruit slightly. To the fruit juice add the cornstarch, sugar, and salt, and cook for a few minutes. Add the fruit and cook until it is heated through. Pour the mixture into a deep pie pan lined with pastry. Dot the top with fat. Cover with a layer of pastry dough. Bake about 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven (400). Sprinkle with powdered sugar while hot and serve the pie hot or cold.

Jellied Prunes

One-half pound dried prunes, cooked and pitted; 2 tablespoons gelatin, ½ cup cold water, 1 cup sugar, 1-8 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup lemon juice.

Heat the prune juice, and if necessary add water to make 2 cups. Meantime soften the gelatin in the cold water and add with the sugar and salt to the hot fruit juice, stir until dissolved, and set aside to chill. Cut the prunes into small pieces and when the gelatin mixture has partly set, stir in the prunes and lemon juice and put in a cold place for 3 or 4 hours or until set. Serve plain or with milk or cream.

GRANTSVILLE

The home of McKinley and Nellie Beachy was completely destroyed by fire last Thursday morning. Miss Beachy was away teaching school and Mr. Beachy was busy at the barn. When he discovered the flames it was impossible for him to enter the building. Neighbors were summoned and also the Grantsville Fire Department but they were unable to save anything.

The Fire Department was again called Thursday night when an oil stove in the cellar of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith burned too high and set fire to the floor. The flames were soon extinguished and the damage was slight.

Russell Shearer, youngest son of Mrs. Thelma Shearer, took a cold plunge Sunday afternoon. He with several other boys, was skating on Shade Hole Creek, south of town. Russell skated onto thin ice and plunged through into the icy water. He clung to the edge of the ice until one of his playmates, Woodrow Custer, pulled him out and hurried him home.

The new bridge across the Casselman River, east of town, has been completed and opened for traffic, giving to the National Highway a straight course from Negro Mountain to Meadow Mountain. This bridge replaces the old historic arch bridge, which has been a land mark for many years.

The Missionary society of the Reformed church held its February meeting at the home of Mrs. J. A. Beachy last Wednesday evening, with eight members present, and Miss Fern Folk as leader.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Folk announce the birth of a son at their home near Grantsville on Sunday, February 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Ross are the parents of a son born on Tuesday, February 7, at their home in Jennings.

Mrs. B. H. Bender entertained the bridge club at her home at Little Crossings, last Tuesday evening. The prize was awarded to Mrs. T. O. Broadwater.

The Teachers' bridge club was entertained by Mrs. Harley Spoerlein Thursday evening. Miss Helen Folk won the high honors.

Mrs. Byron Bender and Miss Ethel Broadwater, members of the Hood college club jointly entertained at a contract bridge party at Mrs. Bender's home last Saturday afternoon. The room was prettily decorated in Valentine colors, and Valentine tallies and favors were used. Five tables were in play and prizes were awarded to Mrs. T. O. Broadwater, Mrs. N. R. Davis, Miss Viola Broadwater, Mrs. J. R. Gnagey, Mrs. C. O. Keller and Miss Eileen Petry.

MYSTERY STILL VEILS THE DEATH OF NELSON GREEN

Continued Probe Fails To Unearth Any New Evidence Concerning Bloomington Miner

TWO ARE STILL IN JAIL

Although the probe into the cause of the death of Nelson Green, Bloomington miner, who was killed sometime late Saturday night, February 11, and whose body was found along the B. and O. tracks, has been continued uninterruptedly throughout the past week, no new clues have developed, according to W. W. Dawson, state's attorney.

Charles Foreback, aged 23, and Benny Upperman, both of Bloomington, were brought to the Oakland jail by Corporal Thomas Currie of the Maryland State police and Deputy Sheriffs Clarence Spear and S. C. Cole the latter part of last week, but Foreback was released from custody yesterday when nothing was found to hold him. Upperman and Irvin Sherman, a boarder at the home of Green, who was taken into custody last Wednesday evening, are still held.

Sherman, a cousin of Green's wife, Mrs. Dessie Green, has been held for questioning but no charges have been placed against him. Blood stains were found on Sherman's trousers. Sherman is said to have been out of work for some time and stayed with Green who is said to have told friends with whom he worked that he thought a great deal of Sherman as he was very handy about the house.

Upperman is said to have told two different parties that he shook hands with Green at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning, February 12, but he now denies these statements. He also states that he was at the Green home on Saturday night and left ten minutes after nine but two other parties at the house at the time Upperman left declares it was about 11 o'clock.

After the discovery of the body the officers thought that Green had been hit by a train. His arm was crushed and his head battered. There was no indication that the body had been run over, but that it had been dragged.

Blood and hair were found, the officers said, in the coal house in rear of Green's house. Sherman is said to have told the officers he did not know how the blood-stains got on his clothing. Conflicting statements are reported to have been given by the group, as to what transpired Saturday night, although all denied there was any fight. Continuation of the investigation up to today has failed to produce any new evidence.

Funeral Services Held For Victim of Accident

Funeral services for Bernard Cyrus Younkin, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Younkin, Grantsville, who died Sunday night, February 12, at Miners' Hospital, Frostburg, from injuries he received when a 35-foot electric light pole struck him on the back of his head, were held from St. Stephen's Catholic church, Grantsville, on Wednesday morning, February 15.

Pallbearers were members of the Woodmen of the World, Camp 41, of Grantsville, and also of the Grantsville Fire Department, to which the deceased belonged, Harry J. Bender, Harold Glotfelty, Charles Stanton, C. O. Bender, Ralph Glotfelty and Chas. Schaefer.

A high requiem mass was conducted by Rev. Fr. Michael, assisted by Rev. Fr. Boniface, both of Cumberland. Interment was made in the cemetery at Grantsville.

Farmers Preparing For Maple Sugar and Syrup Season

Many farmers are now preparing for the maple sugar and maple syrup season, according to correspondents of The Republican in various parts of the county.

The sugar camps, the keelers and other necessary accessories are being put in condition for the first run of the season. While a few producers have already tapped the sugar trees, most of the farmers have spent the week in preparation.

Warm days and cool nights are ideal in order to make the sugar water run, and with this kind of weather now prevailing, it is expected they will begin the season's output in the near future.

APPROXIMATELY 250 ARE PRESENT AT ANNIVERSARY

Knights of Pythias Hold Celebration Last Friday Night

Approximately 250 persons attended the anniversary celebration and Ladies' Night last Friday evening at the Knights of Pythias hall at which C. Thomas Summers, Frederick, the Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of Maryland made an address.

The meeting was opened with a flag ceremony and the singing of "America." Walter W. Dawson, master of ceremonies, also gave the address of welcome.

Addresses were also made by Mr. F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools; Mrs. Ernest Townshend, Grand Mistress of Records and Seal of the Grand Lodge of Pythian Sisters; A. Elwood Martak, Grand Keeper of Records and Seal of the Grand Lodge of Maryland, and Mr. Summers.

Community singing was led by Cecil Smith, with William Gibson at the piano, and one of the features of the entertaiment was an impersonation of radio stars by Ross Y. Stup. The invocation was offered by Rev. C. A. Shilke and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. D. C. Trimble.

Refreshments were served the assembled members and guests of the Knights.

OAKLAND QUINT TO PLAY DAVIS HIGH HERE TONIGHT

Locals Win Double Header from Kitzmiller Tuesday Night

The O. H. S. basketeers expect to even accounts with the Davis quint for a defeat suffered on the latter's floor early in the season, when the two teams meet tonight in the Oakland High gym. With five straight wins the O. H. S. boys hope to continue their work.

Led by Rice, Wolf and Peddicord, Oakland High trounced Kitzmiller Tuesday, 39 to 12. After the first quarter which ended 10 to 6, Oakland started dropping them in from all angles. The score at the half was 27 to 8 and shortly after Coach Thayer inserted his second team and finally the reserves. Walatkus and Bender each scored three field goals for Kitzmiller while Rice led the Oakland scoring with nine field goals.

The lineups:

Oakland—39		Kitzmiller—12
Wolf	F	Walatkus
Peddicord	F	Mosser
Rice	C	Bender
Lohr	G	Barrick (C)
Compton (C)	G	Sowers

Subs—Oakkland, W. Turney, H. Turney, Lawton, Hoye, Frazee, DeWitt, Kerins, Wooddell, Davis. Kitzmiller, Strachan, Strah, Sullivan, Craver.

Field goals: Wolf 4, W. Turney 1, Peddicord 3, Frazee 1, Rice 9, Kerins 1, Walatkus 3, Bender 3.

Fouls: Peddicord 0-2; Hoye 0-2, Rice 0-2, Lohr 1-1, Davis 0-1, Mosser 0-2, Strah 0-2, Bender 0-1, Sullivan 0-1, Sowers 0-1.

Referee, Getty.

The Oakland High reserves defeated Kappa Sigma Phi club of Cumberland Saturday night 36 to 10, on the local floor. Hoye and DeWitt led the reserves with four field goals each. Kerins and Frazee had three each. Kenneth Graves, referee, called a total of 20 fouls, 11 on the locals and 9 on the visitors.

People Moving Back To Farms, U. S. Department Shows

The farm population of the United States was approximately 32,000,000 in January, 1932, a compilation of the Bureau of Agriculture Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, shows. This total was close to the peak farm population of 32,077,000 people as of January 1, 1910.

A net increase of 263,000 persons in the farm population is estimated for the first three months of 1933, and this gain suggests the possibility of an increase for the entire year equal to that in 1931, when the bureau estimated the farm population was increased by 656,000.

Net gains in farm population in 1930 and 1931, plus the projected gains of 1932 will more than offset the decrease of approximately 1,500,000 people in the farm population from the years 1920 to 1930. The farm population as of January 1, 1930, was 30,169,000 people—the low point since 1910.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION TO BE HELD ON MARCH 13TH

To Ballot For Three Councilmen And City Treasurer—Mayor Has Another Year

TO HOLD MEETING SOON

Three persons to be members of the City Council and one person to be City Treasurer, will be voted for at the annual municipal election to be held in Oakland this year on Monday, March 13, when the polls will be open in the City Council Chamber on Third street. Notice of such election appears in The Republican today.

The members of Council will be chosen for terms of two years and the treasurer for one year. The retiring members of Council are J. W. Whorton, C. H. Browning and George Kerins, and Miss Frances Hamill, who has been elected each year without opposition, is the retiring treasurer.

Thus far there have been no avowed candidates, although it is supposed that some of the retiring councilmen will aspire for another term.

A public meeting will probably be arranged in the near future when candidates will be selected and their names placed on the ballot. For the past several years party differences have been buried and a municipal ticket selected, and this practice is expected to be in vogue this year.

The hold-over members of Council are Walter Hardesty, R. C. McComas and Ralph Thayer, they having been elected last year for terms of two years each.

All services will begin at 7:30. The offering will be received for the Daily Vacation Bible School which is held each year.

Young People's Activities Explained at Mothers' Club Meeting

Young people's activities were explained to members of the Mothers' Circle at the regular monthly meeting last Wednesday evening by members of the various junior organizations of Oakland.

At the January meeting Miss Margaret K. Burtis, home demonstration agent, spoke of young people's activities and how to make young people happier human beings, and the meeting this month was for the purpose of hearing directly from the members of the various organizations.

Entertainment included songs by Mary Catherine Treacy, Estelle Treacy, Margaret Rudy and Sarah Jane Riley; clarinet solo, by Bond Weber, accompanied by Jack Weber; scarf dance by Mary C. Treacy, Estelle Treacy and Margaret Rudy; readings by Glenn Moon.

THIRTY-TWO TRESPASSERS BROUGHT BEFORE JUSTICE

Baltimore and Ohio Police Attempt To Stop Coal Stealing—Heavy Shortage Discovered

FIVE ARE UNDER TWELVE

In an effort to curb train riding, trespassing and the theft of coal from cars on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, thirty-two men and boys of Oakland and vicinity were arraigned before Justice W. A. Gonder last Friday and Saturday on charges preferred by two B. & O. policemen, and with the exception of four of those arrested all were released with a reprimand. Pleas of guilty were entered by those under arrest.

The investigation began when it was apparent that a number of coal cars were short of weight when delivered to various coal dealers in the eastern cities. A check-up was made on 275 cars, according to a railroad report, and on 268 of these there was an average loss in the cargo of $3.45. This did not take into account cars of coal shipped from the Stanley Coal Company's mines in this county, which were not weighed until they were delivered to the Cumberland yards. On these cars, or at least ten of them, according to Chas. W. Ream, President of the Stanley Company, an average shortage of some ten to fifteen tons was apparent when the weights at the mine and the railroad weights were compared.

The four men who were charged with train riding and trespassing and given five days in the County Jail were Fred Collins, Darby Collins, Jas. King and William Wilson. The others arrested were charged with trespassing only and the sentence was withheld, pending their behavior in the future. Five of those caught were between the ages of 7 and 12 years, who were dismissed after they had been told of the dangers of train riding and loafing about the railroad tracks.

For the most part, those implicated in the general round-up were victims of the times and of circumstances in so far as buying their coal supplies was concerned and were driven to it in order to keep the members of their families comfortable, it was said. It was for this reason that only the charge of trespassing was preferred. The charge could have been larceny, it was stated by the State officers.

Five others were arrested on Monday and brought before Justice Gonder charged with train riding and breaking and destroying property. It was stated that these men were caught riding in empty passenger coaches and were charged with destroying the seats, breaking locks and stealing tools. The five were Patrick Harvey and Frank Felda, of Altamont; H. F. Farmer, Farmington, W. Va.; Clarence Bucklew, of Rowlesburg, W. Va., and Harry Terry, of Harrisburg, Pa. They were each sentenced to be confined in the County Jail for a period of five days.

Meeting of County Council of Religious Education Called

A meeting of the executive committee of the Garrett County Council of Religious Education has been called by Prof. O. P. Jones, Kitzmiller, the president of the organization.

Mr. Jones is also inviting all pastors, Sunday school superintendents, department heads, etc., to meet in St. Mark's Lutheran church in Oakland on Monday evening, February 27, at 7:30 o'clock.

Plans will be made at the meeting for a young people's rally for Tuesday, April 18, and a Children's Workers' conference to be held in May under the direction of Miss Lillian McCormick, Baltimore. Harry Wilson, Kitzmiller, is superintendent of the young people's division of this county, while Mrs. Paul Naylor is head of the children's division.

George Washington Becomes "Forgotten Man"

George Washington became the "forgotten man" in Oakland yesterday, for a time at least. During the greater part of the morning on Second street there were but two flags flying in memory of the birthday of the "father of our country." At first there as only one flag placed on the street, that of Owen Treacy. H. C. Sincell followed suit shortly afterwards, and later in the morning others began to appear.

Banks were closed all day yesterday, it being a legal holiday.

FUNERAL OF AUTOMOBILE VICTIM AT NEW GERMANY

Henry Poleman, 25, Killed Saturday Evening Near Canton, O.

Funeral services for Henry Poleman, aged 25 years, of Canton, O., son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Poleman, of New Germany, Garrett county, were held at the Reformed church in New Germany on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Poleman was the victim of an automobile accident when his automobile collided with a moving freight train near Canton, Ohio, on Saturday evening, February 18. The automobile caught fire following the collision and the driver was burned to death before his body could be removed from the wrecked vehicle.

He is survived by his parents and six sisters. Rev. Wright, of Salisbury, Pa., officiated at the services. Interment was made in the church cemetery.

FROSTBURG NORMAL TEAM TO BE MET HERE FRIDAY

Oakland Team Defeated by St. John's of Cumberland, 32 to 31

Oakland Firemen will attempt to win their twelfth game of the season on Friday evening when they meet the Frostburg Normal Barnstormers in a game on the Oakland High court.

Frostburg Normal was defeated twice last year by the Oakland team, but boasts a stronger quint this year. Joseph Sollars, of Oakland, and Bruce Jenkins, of Friendsville, are two Garrett countians on the Frostburg squad.

On account of a dance at 9 o'clock the game will be called at 7:30. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents, as usual.

Defeated by One Point

Failing to make good several free throws in the closing minutes of play, the Oakland Firemen were defeated by St. John's Club of Cumberland, last Thursday night on the local court, 32 to 31. Although St. John's was outscored 10 points to 8 in the last quarter, it was not enough to overcome the lead piled up in the first quarter of the game.

St. John's cagers held 12-8, 14-13 and 24-21 leads at the periods, but were never able to get away to a commanding lead.

McComas, with five field goals, led the scoring for Oakland, while Nally made four goals. D. Gainer and Hamilton each made nine points for Cumberland.

The victory was the second of the season for St. John's over the Oakland team and one of the few defeats to be charged against the local team on the home court this season.

The lineup and summary:

Oakland—31		St. John's—32
McComas	F	Gerard

Hanst	G	Hamilton
Nally	G	Bittner

Another Patrol Formed To Take Care of New Scout Members

With eight new applications for membership during the past two weeks, a new patrol is being formed in the Oakland Boy Scout troop to accommodate them. When all Tenderfoot requirements of the new members have been passed, the troop will number 57. A full-sized troop is composed of thirty-two members.

Decision to form the new patrol, which will be known as the Tenderfoot patrol, was made at a meeting of the officers of the troop Monday evening. Officers present included Robert Altstetter, Schell Hoye, George Stuck, John McIntire, Eugene Nordeck, Walter Dawson, Hopwood Wooddell, Kenneth Lawton and Horace O'Donnell. The program for Friday was also outlined at the meeting.

New members who have joined since anniversary week are Hal McNemar, Irvin Feld, Robert Tibbetts, Edward Lauer, William Glotfelty, John Sharps, William Johnson and Ralph Lewis.

Requests for information concerning the formation of scout troops have been received at the Cumberland Council headquarters from Vindex and Friendsville, in Garrett county, and if new troops are formed there will be five within the county, probable necessitating the appointment of a field commissioner here.

HOUSE FAVORS RITCHIE'S GASOLINE TAX PROPOSAL

County Commissioners' Plan for Distribution of Fund Is Rejected by Lesser House

ROADS COMMISSION WILL DIRECT EXPENDITURE

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22.—Final House approval of the administration bill for distribution of the gasoline tax revenues before the Assembly adjourns this week, was predicted by leaders tonight.

The day's activities in the House was featured by adoption of the favorable report on the measure by the Ways and Means Committee and rejection of the county commissioners' measure for that purpose.

By an overwhelming vote—86 to 27—the House sanctioned the slightly amended bill which was classed as embodying the plan of Governor Ritchie. It was the first major battle waged in the House this session and the first test of administration strength in that body since the 1933 session convened.

Amendments Defeated

Attempts by sponsors of the county commissioners' measure to amend the administration proposal so as to take away some of the power of the State Roads Commission proved futile, following their attempt yesterday and today to put the commissioners' recommendation through the House.

Only two amendments—both approved by administration forces—gained approval by the House, and both of these were written in by the Ways and Means Committee before that body presented its favorable report to the House.

One of the amendments approved would permit Baltimore City—which would get 30 per cent of the cent and a half tax for road and bridge maintenance—to use its funds for debt service, while the other would clarify the provision, already in the bill, that its provisions would be in force for only a two-year period.

Commission to Supervise Work

The bill, which is conceded to find House approval when it is brought up for final passage, provides that the remainder of the cent and a half tax revenues beside that which Baltimore City would get, shall be spent in the counties under the supervision of the State Roads Commission, with a provision that the county commissioners shall recommend to the State roads body where the money should be spent.

The remainder of the gasoline tax revenues, under the bill, would be

Lesson for February 26

JESUS SHOWS HIS POWER

LESSON TEXT—Mark 4:35-5:20.

GOLDEN TEXT—For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is nble to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day. II Timothy 1:12.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Stilling a Storm.

JUNIOR TOPIC—With Jesus on a Stormy Night.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Power of Jesus to Help.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Power of Jesus in the World Today.

I. Jesus Calms the Storm (4:35-41).

1. Crossing the sea (vv. 35, 36). Weary with the teaching of the day, Jesus proposed that they take a ship to the other side of the sea, doubtless to escape the crush of the multitude.

2. Overtaken by a storm (v. 37). Violent storms are of frequent occurrence on the Sea of Galilee. Even though Jesus was in the boat with the disciples they were overtaken by a storm. It is not God's will that we should escape the storms, but those who have Christ in their boat are safe in any storm.

3. Jesus asleep in the storm-tossed boat (v. 38).) In the midst of the turbulent elements he was resting in sleep. He who made the sea could well lie down and sleep, though the storm violently raged. The believer who has committed his life, his time and eternity to the will of God should be able to be at peace in the midst of all disturbances.

4. The terrified disciples (v. 38). In their minds disaster and death awaited them. They were not only terrified but ebided Jesus for sleeping while all were in such great danger.

5. Christ's rebuke (vv. 39, 40).

a. To the wind (v. 39). The ceasing of the wind demonstrated his power over the elements of nature.

b. The disciples (v. 40). He rebuked them for their lack of faith.

6. The effect upon the disciples (v. 41). A little while ago they were afraid in the face of the storm; now they are afraid in the presence of the Lord.

II. Jesus Heals the Gadarene Demoniac (5:1-20).

Having calmed the storm-tossed sea, he now proceeds to calm the storm-tossed soul.

1. Met by a demon-possessed man (vv. 2-5). This man was in a desperate condition. He was so fierce that travelers could not safely pass that way. He wore no clothes (Luke 8:27). No chains were strong enough to hold him and no one was able to tame him. In the night time his hideous cries could be heard while he vented his rage by cutting himself with stones. Demon possession is common today. As the coming of the Lord draweth nigh these things will increase (I Tim. 4:1).

2. What the demon knew about Christ (vv. 5-9). He knew that Christ was the Son of God and that he had come to destroy the devil and his works. Among the demons there is no doubt as to Christ's deity and the coming judgment, facts which many theologians and preachers say they do not believe.

3. Christ's power to deliver from the devil (vv. 10-13). He cast out the demon from the man (v. 8). The demons quailed before Christ, not daring to dispute his power, and begged to be permitted to enter the swine. As soon as the Lord gave them permission, they entered the swine and hurled them to destruction. In this destruction of the swine is a rebuke to the Jews for indulging in a forbidden traffic.

4. The effect upon the people of the city (vv. 14-17). The keepers of the swine fled to the city and reported what had occurred. This miracle brought the people out, but when they realized their hogs had been destroyed they besought Christ to leave their coasts. This is indeed a sad picture.

5. The man who was healed was sent home to testify (vv. 18-20). No doubt it would have been safe and pleasant to abide with Jesus, but the man's friends needed his testimony. The best witness for Christ is one who has been saved by him. The best place to begin that testimony is at home where one is best known.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

One man's bit is as necessary as another's.

If one part sickens or fails the whole body suffers.

We are all parts of the same body, like hands and feet.

Some persons of fluent speech have a serious impediment in their thoughts.

Gold adulterates one thing only—the human heart.—Marguerite de Valois.

The trouble with easy-going people is that they make it hard-going for others.

They are the weakest-minded and the hardest hearted men that most love change.—Ruskin.

Fault-finding should be regarded as a fine art. For it is the necessary aid of every other art.

The reason why fault-finding is in such bad repute is because it is usually destructive rather than constructive.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Here it is a short time before publication time, and I still have a lack of ideas. Of course, I may be wrong, but I claim it's because of the high wind on Tuesday. It came down our chimney so strong that it scattered ashes all over the house and so much got in my eyes, I have been unable to see anything worthy of putting in this column.

You know how it is. Give the readers the best or nothing, is my motto. I can't give them the best this week, so I will give them nothing. You will notice, however, that it takes up just as much space.

Just when I thought I was cured of jig-saw puzzles, I go and win one as a booby prize at a party Saturday night. Another afternoon wasted. But I worked it, by crackey, although I expended so much energy I couldn't be called a technocrat, even if I wanted to be.

And speaking of technocracy, it was rather fully explained under "It Is Alleged" column in the Spencer Times Record two weeks ago as follows:

"Today's topic is 'Technocracy: or What is Ohm without a Motor?'

"As I understand it (and I'm not sure that I do) Technocracy works on the theory that there is a certain amount of energy expended daily to supply the wants and needs of mankind. This energy goes under several different aliases, such as Ohm, Volt, Ampere and Horsepower. When you get to know it better you can call it just plain Erg.

"Assume that it takes one million ohms of energy to produce mankinw's daily requirements including vitamins A-B-C-D and E. Or make it two million ergs. Now if it takes two million ergs to provide for mankind and there are one million men in the world, that means two ergs for each man, which is not a lot of ergs when you consider that they are down to 11 cents a dozen.

"Now the trouble is that some people have been getting more than their share of ergs, volts, ohms, and amperes. Those left out in the cold have to get along on one erg or none at all. The result is that there's the devil to pay and he's still on the gold standard.

"The chief problem is to divide things up so that each man will get his share thus making the world all for one and one for all except, of course, France."

Simple isn't it? Supposing I use 20 ergs of energy per day in getting out the column (this week excepted). If you are snappy at figures you will conclude that I have therefore been doing the work of ten men. Really, I have been of this opinion for some time.

Under the plan of Technocracy I and nine other fellows (a girl or two wouldn't be so bad) would write this column and call it a week. Our salaries would all be the same, 12 ergs per week per person. These ergs or their equivalent could be used as money at all the better stores. Any questions?

You needn't ask any questions because I won't be able to answer them. Anyway, technocracy isn't going to last, I hear, so Watt's the difference?

Sanitary Kissing

Under a chapter of sanitation in an up-to-the minute doctor book, the following instructions were found: "You should never kiss a member of your family without having first thoroughly washed your hands and face."

The Kansas City Star makes the following comment: "This presents quite a problem to the business man, but it might be solved in this manner. He should carry a small collapsible washpan in his hip pocket; and in his vest pocket, a bottle of liquid soap and small thermos bottle of hot water. The minute he opens the front door of his home in the evening and sees wife approaching with smile on face, he should jerk out the collapsible pan, liquid soap and thermos bottle and begin the operation.

By the time he has completely put the germs to route, his wife has become discouraged and gone back into the kitchen."

Which might be all right for some people—but give me the old fashioned way.

Contributed by someone who is still holding on:

"Each day you may see me out working on the farm, I have a little forty, a chicken coop and barn. I love to work upon the farm and keep it neat and clean. But when I'm in my bed at night I have such awful dreams.

"I see taxes on the ceiling, on the wall; I see taxes in the kitchen, in the hall; I see taxes in the dining room and on my plate, I taste taxes in everything I eat.

"I believe in paying taxes, in being sane; I believe these unjust taxes are taxation of the brain. I see taxes on my children, on my wife; I see taxes on my income, on my life.

"The next bum rap that we predict with which on other can compare; is a meter on our windpipe, then tax us for the air."

Here it is the finish, and I still have no ideas.

Homemakers' Column

By Miss Margaret Kirby Burtis
Home Demonstration Agent

THE CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

To cook these cuts to the best advantage, says the Bureau of Home Economics, remember that heat, moisture and long slow cooking are needed to make tough meat tender. The cheaper cuts make good pot roasts, Swiss steak or stew, to mention top-of-the-stove methods, which require less fuel than oven-cooking. For oven dinners, stuffed flank steak, baked in the oven, or any of the cheaper cuts in a casserole with vegetables, are other good ways to use these low-priced meats. And left-over pot roasts make good hot roast beef sandwiches or brown hash.

In other words, for the less tender cuts of beef, follow these cooking principles: Sear the meat in a small quantity of fat until it is browned—this to develop flavor; after browning reduce the heat, add a judicious quantity of water, cover tightly, and cook slowly until the meat is tender enough to be cut with a fork. It will give up a good deal of juice during the cooking, but that makes good gravy, to be served as a part of the dish. Or cook the meat with tomatoes instead of water, and give it a different flavor. With tomatoes, onion, and green pepper, it is called Spanish steak.

Another good way with less tender meat is to grind it. Then it can be cooked in the same way as a tender steak or roast that is broiled or panbroiled or baked. Ground beef broiled on toast, hamburg steak, and beef loaf are some of the best ways of using ground beef.

Pot Roast of Beef with Vegetables

Select a piece of beef chuck, rump or round weighing 3 to 4 pounds. Season with salt and pepper. Brown the meat in beef fat, add a small quantity of water, cover the kettle closely with a lid, and cook slowly until the meat is tender when pierced with a fork. This will take about 3 hours. Add onions, carrots or potatoes during the last hour of cooking. To make gravy, first skim the fat from the liquid in the pot. For thickening, allow to each cup of liquid 2 tablespoons of the fat and 1½ tablespoons of flour. Mix the fat and the flour thoroughly, add to the meat broth and stir over the fire until smooth. Season to taste.

Scrapple

Select three pounds of bony pieces of pork. Simmer in 3 quarts of water until the meat drops from the bone. Strain off the broth, remove the bones, taking care to get out all the tiny pieces, and chop the meat fine. There should be about 2 quarts of broth, and if necessary add water to make this quantity. Bring the broth to the boling point, slowly stir in 2 cups of corn meal or 3 cups of cracked wheat, cook for about 30 minutes and stir frequently. Add the chopped meat, salt, and any other seasoning such as a little sage or thyme. Pour the hot scrapple into bread pans which have been rinsed with cold water. Let stand until cold and firm, slice and brown slowly in a hot skillet. If the scrapple is rich with fat, no more fat is needed for frying.

Sausage and Fried Apples

Fry sausage until brown and crisp, drain on absorbent paper and keep hot. Leave about 4 tablespoons of the sausage fat in the skillet. Meanwhile slice or quarter apples, leaving the skins on. Fill the skillet with the apples, sprinkle on 3 or 4 tablespoons of sugar, cover and cook slowly until the apples are tender. Then remove the cover, turn the apples gently so the pieces will hold their shape and let them brown and continue to cook slowly until they become almost transparent. Serve the fried apples on a hot platter with the sausage.

LAST PHASES OF DEPRESSION

A number of students of economics have recently pointed out the fact that the closing phases of every depression we have had in the past have been accompanied by demands for inflation. Recovery from the depression, they add, has come, in each instance, after the government and the people had taken a firm stand for sound money and had defeated inflation.

If growing demand for inflation marke the final stages of depression then we have undoubtedly arrived at that time in our present era of difficulty. Inflation is one of the much discussed topics of the hour and bids fair to be one of the big issues of the next administration.

Already there are around a half hundred bills in Congress providing for some form of inflation. Some of these contemplate cutting down the gold content of the dollar, others the free and unlimited coinage of silver and still others inflation by speeding up the printing presses in the turning out of currency.

If history is to repeat itself, therefore, we will pull out of this depression only after all schemes for monetary inflation have been defeated. Whether this can be brought about remains to be seen. Enthusiastic inflationists some time ago expressed the belief that some kind of inflation would be written into law by the "old Congress." But there is little chance of this for the reason that President Hoover would veto any such measure.

It is then up to the incoming administration. Just what it will do remains to be seen. Both parties in their platforms last year declared for sound money, and there is no reason as yet to believe that the incoming President is not in line with the majority of his party on the subject. But his cabinet appointments and his first message to the new Congress, which is to be called into special session, will be awaited with interest.

As to the necessity for defeating inflationary movements if we are to get out of the depression, there can be little doubt. Controlled inflation, if inflation can be controlled, would be of little avail. We already have enough money for commercial purposes. Controlled inflation would not help. It has not helped Great Britain where it was predicted that abandoning of the gold standard would raise prices and help industry. And uncontrolled inflation means ruin—ruin first to the creditors and then to those in debt. The example of Germany along this line ought to be eloquent and convincing proof of this fact.

Mr. Francis H. Sisson, president of the American Bankers' Association, recently well summed up the sitation when in part he said:

"Inflation is not the pathway to business recovery in the United States. The nation has an ample volume of currency and resources for sound credit expansion to finance the restoration of business to normal proportions and activities. The great need of the hour is to set our existing currency and credit powers in motion—to give them velocity and dynamic force which are in fact just as effective in stopping deflation and stimulating business activity as inflation is thought by its exponents to be, without its known baleful effects and deceptive evils.

"And what is needed to give our currency and credit resources velocity is business confidence—confidence among industrial and business leaders for their undertakings, courage to ask the banks for sound loans to finance them and prudent courage among bankers to grant them—courage, also, among our people to resume normal spending and replenishments, and among our investors to resume normal investing.

"I believe that the government at Washington has largely within its grasp the possibilities of making business confidence a plain, everyday, practical working reality. A program of real economy in government expenditures and a sound plan of taxation revision to produce adequate revenues to balance the budget and yet relieve productive economic activity from its repressive weight would be a mighty power for restoring confidence."

THE BE-DEVILED DEMOCRATS

A caustic description of the situation at Washington which may help to arouse the Democratic leaders to a realization of its dangers, and to a renewed effort to fashion a balanced financial program, for adoption after March 4 if not before, has been printed by Frank R. Kent, veteran political writer in the Baltimore Sun. His record over many years as a frequent defender of Democratic figures and causes adds to the sharpness of his present attack. Mr. Kent writes:

"It is now frankly admitted that no tax bill at all will be passed at this session, no effort made to bring the government finances into approximate balance. This, in effect, is the gist of the last Democratic declaration. It ends all pretense of a Democratic program, throws into the discard the public pledges jointly made by Democratic senators in December and makes a complete joke of the Democratic conference with President-elect Roosevelt, after which a program for balancing the budget was proclaimed. This program is now officially scuttled by the very men who proposed it."

"The Democratic party, which dominates this Congress, is now left with no legislative plans whatever, with no sense of direction, and no pretense of order. They have rejected the sales tax. They refuse to touch—or even talk about—the veterans' compensation load. They have blocked the proposed consolidation and mergers of bureaus until 'we can do it ourselves.' They have deserted their own increase income tax suggestions. They are reduced to whining about the faults, flaws and failings of Mr. Hoover, and promising to make 'great economies' in the appropriation bills, knowing full well that the bulk of these are paper economies, and that next December a deficiency appropriation bill will restore most of the cuts."

With all the adroitness in the world a President-elect cannot exert the same influence over Congress that he may exert after being established in the White House and becoming the actual rather than the potential head of the government. Yet it is obvious that the situation which has developed in Washington constitutes a new and graver challenge to Franklin Roosevelt's powers of leadership.

spent as follows: Funds obtained through the two-cent tax shall be spent in the construction of lateral reads, and funds obtained through the one-half cent tax shall he spent for road bond retirement.

County Plan

The county commissioners' bill, which was brought before the House by petition signed hy 15 members, would have permitted Baltimore city to take 30 percent of the revenues from the one and one-half cent tax to spend as it saw fit on road maintenance, and would have divided the remainder proportionately between the counties to be spent by the county commissioners of the respective counties. The remainder of the four-cent tax would have been under the supervision of the State Roads Commission, the same as under the administration bill.

What action the Senate will take on the administration plan is somewhat a matter of speculation as yet, although the backers of that proposal express confidence that as large a majority will be found in that body for the bill as was found in the house today.

To Control Liquor Traffic

The plan of the crusaders, anti-prohibition organization, to provide a state system of control of the liquor traffic in the event national prohibition is repealed, was introduced in the House of Delegates Tuesday.

The measure was introduced by Delegate Douglas Huntley Gordon (Dem., Baltimore Second), and was referred to the committee on ways and means.

Provides For Group Of Three

It would set up a state liquor commission, to be composed of three persons, which would take over a monoply of the liquor traffic in the state, would regulate the establishments manufacturing and selling liquor and would fix the wholesale and retail prices of alcoholic beverages sold in the state.

The members of the commission would not begin receiving a salary until the national repeal amendment is ratified.

The bill would require all firms or persons intending to manufacture or sell alcoholic beverages in the state to register and pay a registration fee of $25 a year.

License Fees Graded

For those establishments intending to sell alcoholic beverages the proposal would fix varying fees. One group of fees would be charged those taking out licenses to sell the beverages in hotels where any kind of liquors could be sold with meals, while another set would have to be paid by a "non-restaurant" class where beer and wine of not over 12 percent alcoholic content could be sold. The fees for each would differ also according to the amount of the beverages the establishment desires to sell per day.

GETTING CAMPS READY IS NEXT; MUST HAVE PERMIT

Sanitary Inspection is Necessary Before Opening of Season

With the ground hog's "six weeks more of winter weather" well under way and spring only a few weeks off, thoughts turned pleasantly toward the open road, toward camping, hiking and days out of doors. In preparation for the coming season, owners and operators of picnic grounds and camps —tourist, recreational as well as of labor camps—have been notified by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, that last year's permits will not hold over for a second year. All permits must be renewed if the camps are going to be run during the coming season.

Applications for either renewal of the permits or for license for the operation of new camps must be filed promptly, in order that the necessary sanitary inspections may be made before the season opens. All camps—whether new or old—that meet the State requirements will be duly certified and posted with the official placards furnished by the State Department of Health.

The camp regulations apply to all places used as a camp or picnic ground for a period of six days or longer and accommodating ten or more persons. Applications for permits must state the exact location of the existing or proposed camp; the purpose for which it is to be used, whether as a picnic ground, a tourist or recreational camp; whether for religious exercises; as a labor camp or whatever the purpose may be. They must also state the approximate number of persons to be cared for; the source of the water supply; the proposed method of sewage or garbage disposal and whether or not food is to be sold.

Sanitary supervision and inspection of tourist, recreational and labor camps was begun under the present regulations in 1926. From the beginning, the operators have shown marked willingness to cooporate, Dr. Riley said, and year by year there has been a gradual increase in the number of camps that have been awarded permits. In 1926, 105 camps in 19 counties were inspected and 49 were licensed. Last year, 143—nearly three times as many—met the State requirements and were duly licensed. The number licensed each year, since the beginning of State sanitary supervision of such camps, follows: 49 in 1926; 78 in 1927; 76 in 1928; 84 in 1929; 94 in 1930; 96 in 1931, and 143 in 1932.

Seventeen counties were represented by the camps licensed in 1932. Anne Arundel county led with 21; Frederick came next with 18; Cecil was third with 17; Harford came next with 15; Carroll and Prince George's tied for fifth place with 11 camps licensed in each county; Garrett had 9; Charles, 7; Allegany, 5; Kent and Montgomery, each, 6. There were 4 in Baltimore county; 3 each in Calvert, Howard and St. Mary's, and one each in Washington and Wicomico counties.

During the coming season, the camps will again be under the supervision of the County Health Officers and of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering of the State Department of Health. Operators or others interested may obtain application blanks, copies of the regulations governing camp sanitation, and blue print plans for the protection of springs from contamination and for the proper disposal of sewage, by writing to the State Department of Health, 2411 N. Charles street, Baltimore, Md.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

We shall now turn our attention away from the various ancient translations of the Bible to a consideration of the book itself.

The Bible is often referred to as a library of sixty-six books, thirty-nine of them comprising what we know as the Old Testament, and twenty-seven the New Testament. A simple memory system for retaining these numbers is found by linking them up with the number three. There is a multiple of 66, the entire number of books in the Bible. The Old Testament contains 39 of these, and three squared, or multiplied by itself gives 9. This nine put in the units place and the 3 in the tens place will give 39, the number of Old Testament books. Then multiply 9 by 3 and you have 27, the number of books in the New Testament. Now, let us state it again: 39 books in the Old Testament plus 27 books in the New Testament makes a total of 66 books.

Considering these books as literature, they naturally divide as follows: In the Old Testament, seventeen historical books, five poetical books, seventeen prophetical books. The New Testament is composed of four Gospels, which tell the life story of Jesus of Nazareth from slightly different viewpoints. Matthew deals with Jesus pre-eminently as the Messiah; Mark looks upon him as the Wonderful person; Luke writes of the Son of Man; John of the Son of God. These Gospels are all that remain of the biography of Jesus the Christ.

The book of Acts tells the story of the founding of the Church.

The twenty-one Epistles, or letters are doctrinal, and bear somewhat the same relation to the Gospels that the Talmud bears to the Jewish Scriptures.

Last of all comes the revelation given to St. John on the lonely Isle of Patmos, containing in its last chapter that royal invitation to all the children of men: "And the Spirit and the bride say, 'Come, and let him that heareth say, come, and let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.'"

The world owes its Bible to the Hebrew nation. The Bible rests on three great promises or covenants, the first to Abraham wherein God promised that in his seed all nations should be blessed. In the second the Hebrew nation, sprung from the loins of Abraham, were promised prosperity in the lond of Canaan if they would be true to Jehovah. In the third David was promised that his family should reign over God's people forever.

The great purpose of these covenants was to bring into the minds of men a belief in one true, living, loving God.

Our study for next week will be based upon the Pentateuch, or the five books of Moses.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

We have heard a great deal during the past few months about balancing the budget, reducing taxes and national and local expenditures. So far as the local units of government are concerned the agitation for economy and lower taxes have had some effect. Fewer municipal bond issues are being sold than for many months. Expenses in many states and cities are being trimmed, and this will eventually result in lower taxes if the people will only stay on guard.

But how about the National Government? What are its prospects along this line for the coming months? Are we to have a balanced budget through reduction of national expenditures, or are we to have still higher taxes and more economic pressure as a result? Only the future can tell. Both political parties were on record for economy and the slashing of expenditures. But enough proposals have now been brought forward to increase Uncle Sam's expense a dozen billion dollars if all of them were to be enacted. And very little is being heard about reduction of expenditures and fewer taxes in Washington. The Republicans are naturally saying little, as they are going out of power in a few weeks. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt will say something to calm the troubled waters within the next few weeks. It is earnestly to be hoped so. He is said to favor a twenty-five per cent cut in expenditures.

Of the proposed outlay of billions, many of the plans are for helping the farmer. A great many people still seem to have an idea that the United States Government can restore the prices of agriculture through some legislative magic. A huge program has been mapped out and introduced by the Democratic leader, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, calling for an expenditure of a billion and a half to assist agriculture. The program is said to include the recommendations of the farm organizations of the country, who were promised by Mr. Roosevelt in the campaign that if they would get together on a program he would agree to it.

The plan includes a provision for a new billion dollar government agency, the "Emergency Agricultural Refinance Corporation," to lend up to $10,000 to individual farmers on first or second mortgage security providing the total mortgages do not exceed 75 per cent of the value of the property. The bill would also put the government squarely behind the Federal Land Banks.

But there are many other proposals for federal outlays of money. Senator Costigan, Democrat, of Colorado, has introduced a measure which, it is claimed, establishes a permanent federal dole for the idle, with a half billion dollar relief fund to be administered by an Emergency Federal Relief Board. Another bill provides for a United States Exchange Corporation with a capital of a half billion and authority to issue government debentures to the sum of two and a half billions to lend funds to corporations to provide employment and to individuals to provide them with purchasing power.

Then there are additional proposals for the payment of the veterans' bonus which is due in 1945. Mr. Patman of Texas, still wants to pay for this by inflating the currency. Other bills provide for federal aid to states, counties and municipalities for educational purposes. In short, the number of proposals for appropriating more federal money to be raised either by more taxes, by bond issues or by inflation is so great as to make one fairly dizzy in contemplation.

In the meantime foreign made goods are flooding the country, coming over our tariff wall for the reason that depreciated currencies abroad have made this possible. This shuts down our American factories and puts out of jobs American workers who could be using more of the products of the American farm, if the workers could afford to buy them. Damming of this flood of foreign made goods, made by cheap labor paid in tin money, would go a long way toward restoring business and agriculture in America.

In Washington, the Comptroller of the currency reports that for the first time in a year the total resources and deposits of National Banks show an increase, and that the total number of banks in the United States are less than at any time since 1905.

Nature and Fortune Never Made A Better Man

By Thomas J. Wertenbaker in Current History

ONE of the recent biographers of Washington has given us so just and true a picture of the man as that drawn by Jefferson more than a century ago.

"I think I knew General Washington intimately and thoroughly," he said. "His mind was great and powerful, without being of the very first order; his penetration strong, though not so acute as that of a Newton, Bacon or Locke, and, as far as he saw, no judgment was ever sounder. It was slow in operation, being little aided by invention or imagination, but sure in conclusion. Hence the common remark of his officers, of the advantage he derived from councils of war, where hearing all suggestions, he selected whatever was best. . . .

"He was incapable of fear, meeting personal dangers with the calmest unconcern. Perhaps the strongest feature in his character was prudence, never acting until every circumstance, every consideration, was maturely weighed; refraining if he saw a doubt but, when once decided, going through with his purpose, whatever obstacles opposed. . . .

"He was, indeed, in every sense of the words, a wise, a good and a great man. His temper was naturally irritable and high-toned, but reflection and resolution had obtained a firm and habitual ascendency over it.

"His heart was not warm in its affections, but he exactly calculated every man's value and gave him a solid esteem proportioned to it. . . . It may truly be said that never did nature and fortune combine more perfectly to make a great man and to place him in the same constellation with whatever worthies have merited from man everlasting remembrance."

After all has been said, it was Washington's character which was supremely great, which was responsible for the greatness of his achievements. In the Revolution it was the trust in Washington which held together a faltering and discouraged people, which tided the country over the darkest hours, which was responsible for the eventful victory.

After peace had been won it was this trust in Washington which made it possible for a disunited people to attain enduring strength and unity. There have been greater generals than Washington, greater statesmen; there has been no greater character. When the writings of his detractors have passed into obscurity his memory will remain, what it has always been, a sacred legacy to the American people.

WASHINGTON'S FAMILY

George Washington's mother was Mary Ball, said to have been a lineal descendant from John Ball, medieval champion of the rights of man. Her mother was Mary Montague, who, as "the widow Johnson," was married to Colonel Joseph Ball. Her grandfather was Colonel William Ball, who emigrated to Virginia in 1650, and settled in Lancaster county. George Washington's father was Augustine Washington, the grandson of Lawrence Washington and the great-grandson of John Washington, who came from England about 1650 and settled in Westmoreland county, Virginia. The English ancestry has been traced back through Laurentia Washington, father of Lawrence, several generations to the Sulgrave branch of the family.

Lord Cornwallis' Army Disorderly on Surrender

At the surrender of Lord Cornwallis his British soldiers presented a brilliant contrast to the Americans. Cornwallis had ordered that a new uniform be issued to each man and that in marching out of the spacious field at Yorktown each company conduct itself in strictest order, even to the humiliating end when the arms were to be grounded. Doctor Thatcher, a surgeon in Washington's army, who gave a complete account of the surrender in his journal, wrote of that October 19, 1781:

"But in their line of march we remarked a disorderly and unsoldierly conduct; their step was irregular and their ranks frequently broken. But it was in the last act of the drama that the spirit and pride of the British soldiers were put to the severest test—here their mortification could not be concealed. Some of the platoon officers appeared to be exceedingly chagrined when giving the word, 'Ground arms,' and I am witness that they performed that duty in a very unofficer-like manner, and that many of the soldiers manifested a sullen temper, throwing their arms on the pile with violence, as if determined to render them useless. This irregularity was checked by order of General Lincoln." (The latter had been delegated by Washington as the American in charge of the capitulation.) "The Americans," Doctor Thatcher related, "though not all in uniform, nor their dress so neat, yet exhibited an erect soldiery air and every countenance beamed with satisfaction and joy."

WASHINGTON CROSSES the DELAWARE

(December 1776)

by CLINTON SCOLLARD

THAT night upon the Delaware
Their horns the wild Valkyries blew
As though the legions of despair
Swept the impending heavens through.
The Fates and Furies rode the air
That night upon the Delaware.

The ice-pack gnawed the sodden banks,
Sundered and rocked the middle stream;
There ran a murmuring through the ranks
As at some dread, foreboding dream.
Amid the crunch of splintering planks
The ice-pack gnawed the sodden banks.

The trees seemed wan and wizened ghosts,
And groped the mists with shriveled hands;
Weird was that gathering of hosts,
The massing of those tattered bands.
On those inhospitable coasts
The trees seemed wan and wizened ghosts.

Yet valorous their victory
That gray and grim December dawn;
What quenchless fires of destiny
Burned in his breast who led them on!
For us, and for futurity,
How valorous their victory!

Internal Dissension an Annoyance to Washington

On August 23, 1792, President Washington wrote a long letter to Thomas Jefferson, his secretary of state, dealing with certain intrigues between the Spaniards and several southern Indian tribes, and he added this thought:

"How unfortunate and how much to be regretted is it then, that, while we are encompassed on all sides with avowed enemies and insidious friends, internal dissensions should be harrowing and tearing our vitals." He expressed the fear that party politics, which then was rearing its head for the first time in our history, would weaken and wreck the Union.

Three days later he wrote to Alexander Hamilton, his secretary of the treasury, pointing out the destructive character of party feelings:

"Differences in political opinions are as unavoidable as, to a certain extent, they may perhaps be necessary; but it is exceedingly to be regretted that subjects cannot be discussed with temper on the one hand, or decisions submitted to without having the motives which led to them improperly implicated on the other; and this regret borders on chagrin when we find that men of abilities, zealous patriots having the same general object in view and the same upright intentions to prosecute them, will not exercise more charity in deciding on the opinions and actions of one another."

The occasion for this advice was the fact that Hamilton and Jefferson had disagreed.—American Bankers Journal.

Washington Was One of Country's Richest Men

George Washington accumulated little of his wealth himself. He was a planter, whose estates came to him chiefly through others. His great-grandfather developed a large area of land. His parents opened a considerable tract on the Rappahannock. By the time of George's birth the Washingtons owned much of the land in the peninsula between the Potomac and the Rappahannock. Mount Vernon and its surroundings became his upon the death of his half-brother, Lawrence, in 1752. Martha Washington, wealthy in her own right, and the widow of a wealthy planter, brought her husband additional lands. Owning 70,000 acres in Virginia (and after the Revolution 40,000 acres in the West, which congress gave him for his services), General Washington was in his day one of the richest men in the country.

DISCUSS LENTEN SEASON AT MINISTERS' MEETING

Rev. A. B. Harper, Accident, Makes Principal Address

The Mountain Top Ministers' Association held its regular meeting on Monday morning in the Masonic club-rooms, Oakland. Rev. A. B. Harper, pastor of the Accident Lutheran parish, read a paper on Lent.

The March meeting will be held on March 20, when Rev. D. C. Trimble, rector of St. Matthew's Protestant Episcopal parish, will speak on Easter.

Rev. A. B. Harper's paper read before the association, is printed in The Republican today at the request of the members of the organization. The address follows:

Lenten brings with it one of the most opportune seasons of the year when the church may well make its appeal to humanity for the all-absorbing theme of service.

For here we stand at the threshhold of a season which bears the true stamp of all service. We enter upon its threshhold and immediately we come to a challenge in our life's endeavor.

The true spirit of sacrificial service meets and challenges us at the very portal of the season. Our every effort then ought to be bent towards some definite plan whereby we can better serve humanity and lend our aid in bringing a much deeper spiritual consciousness to ourselves and the people to whom we minister.

Whatever programs may be advanced and whatever selection may be made of themes to be presented, these must lend themselves in such a manner that the culmination shall find its final goal in the exemplary life of our common Lord and Master, especially when we stand under the shadow of His cross.

It will be well for us, as ministers of this Covenant of Service to well prepare ourselves, for never was there a period in the history of the church when we should endeavor to call our people back again to the realization of the worth, honor and blessings which shall be showered down upon humanity, if only they will take up this task and in sincerity of heart and purpose will be willing to listen to Him again as He calls us to follow Him.

We must in our thoughts and in our lives get into His thoughts and into His life. His very passion must be our passion for the souls of mankind. Our every action must be permeated with His actions. We must let His love help us to go into our Gethsemanes and His supporting strength be ours in the day when it seems that we again cry out as He did, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken Me?"

If the Lenten season is going to be one which shall be all we hope for it will be necessary that amidst the turmoil of our present stressing problems, we can calmly put our trust in Him who is the Calm of every storm, who speaks the word and peace is restored.

It is true that we have a great task before us in these days of stress and strain. How do we face the task? It should be considered by us a special privilege, nay a heaven-sent privilege to show forth His death to a world that needs to realize that in the death of Christ is the world's only hope of salvation.

Whatever we plan in a special presentation of the theme, whatever of special service of song, these will have little in them if we have failed to reach out to the souls of dying humanity; if we fail to awaken a zeal for consecrated service in lives which shall be melted into tenderness; in stony hearts which shall be broken and contrition of soul which realizes its failure, in an attitude which beholding His agony and death and then His glorious resurrection does not bring forth a response in deeds and love like unto His.

Thus whatever else we do, we comprehend the most important phase of our task in presenting this glorious gospel of His life of sacrificial service in such a manner that we shall find a response to be willing to follow Him; to take up the cross, the task, the duty involved, whatever the phase may be which is thus thrust upon willing hearts, and find that blessing which shall come to us.

This ought of course to be a season when a special effort should be put forth in the way of evangelistic work because we are in that period of commemoration which will assist us to n more explicit appeal for a surrender to Christ, although at no time should we fail to present Christ that mankind shall not be drawn to Him.

In planning any program for the Lenten season one must always have in mind the one purpose and aim, and also the situation which presents itself upon the field of labor. No uniform program can be advanced which would meet all the needs of all fields. Even to the extent of publicity, this will vary as to the field of work. However, in any field there are certain things one can do in making effective this great season. No pastor can afford to neglect special services and publication of these and to keep his parish informed of their duty and privileges, to attend if possible all these services which may be planned.

The pastor, however, must realize that he is the key-man to this, and must adjust his program accordingly. One thing all can do, and that is by prayer and supplication and communion prepare ourselves that whatever we may do in the way of special services to become the medium through which the Holy Spirit may operate with free access, that He may shine though us in such a halo of glory that we shall be able to present the theme of this Lenten season that the church shall be edified and lifted to a higher spiritual realization of its duty and responsibility that souls shall be won for our Christ and His Kingdom.

Too often the Lenten season is marred by the intrinsic value of financial programs. We are called upon for this offering, and that offering to be taken, and about all this will bring, if nothing else is accomplished, is very possibly a spurt in some special gift because it is the Easter season, and then the chaotic results to follow in the thought that one had done a special favor to the church and that would sustain for at least some time to come.

If we must make some special effort in our finnncial program, let this be very much kept in hiabekc adinfle very much kept in the background, for the matter of giving will find its solution only when hearts are moved by the spirit of sacrificial giving, born of a desire to serve Him, our Lord and Master, even Jesus Christ.

If lives are consecrated in true sacrificial relationship to Christ, giving of our temporal means will necessarily follow when and wherever the need is found, in fact a desire will be created to find the need and then a full response will be made.

Too often this season is marred by the stress upon this phase, which finds little response because souls are not in harmony with this greater spirit of true sacrificial service.

Once the lives of our people are filled with this spirit, they will exclaim as did that noted hymn writer, Isaac Watts, in that most beautiful hymn, "When I survey the wondrous Cross"—

Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all.

So shall this season of Lent bring to us and to ours such a relationship that we shall come with our gifts of love and true service to Him, who is indeed the Author and Finisher of our faith.

Hardesty Re-nominated Mayor of Loch Lynn Heights

The redhot, sizzling campaign for nominations of candidates for the various municipal offices of Loch Lynn came to a peaceful close Monday night. For the past ten days the village crackled with charges and counter-charges and for a time it looked as though an unpleasant situation might develop at the citizens' meeting. In fact, the Mayor had appointed and sworn in two special officers to uphold the peace and dignity of the town, but they were not needed.

The Aid Hall was stuffily jammed with voters of both sexes and onlookers, when the meeting was called to order by the Mayor. Lincoln Callis was called to the chair as permanent chairman and Mrs. G. O. Sweitzer was elected secretary. The speech of acceptance of the chairman, dealing principally with praise of the present councilmen for their good roads program, and with technocracy, was both opposed and criticized. But debate was cut off by a motion to have the address printed in the county papers.

The meeting immediately got down to business and nominated the present incumbent, Mr. C. E. Hardesty, and Mr. George Brown, for mayor. A remark made by one of the speakers drew forth a heated reply from Hardesty but the incident passed and a vote taken. As the tabulation of the vote proceeded it was apparent that the well-oiled Hardesty machine was in good working order, and the final result showed that he had won over Mr. Brown by a vote of 50 to 40. Mr. Brown immediately arose and in a few well-chosen remarks, graciously congratulated his late opponent.

Next came the nomination of three candidates for councilmen. Mrs. Sallie Burch, Ollie Sweitzer, B. W. Harvey, Robert Ford, and H. M. Weeks were placed on the ticket and the voting began. The final tabulation disclosed that Sweitzer ran like a startled deer. From the time he broke cover he maintained a lead that landed him as top-hand with a score of 83. The runner-up was Ben Harvey with 49 and then H. M. Weeks with a 47, which gave Sweitzer and Harvey the two-year term and Weeks will have to be satisfied with one year.

Floyd White received the nomination for treasurer and collector; Mildred Ford as clerk, and Claud Paul as bailiff.

The tail feathers of the early robins were somewhat ruffled by the high wind on Tuesday. But at that they seemed to be in high good humor and evidently believe that spring is just around the corner. We will agree with them when we find the odoriferous skunk cabbage and the delicate hepatica in bloom.

Pedestrains and motorists were much heartened by a report that cinders will soon be spread on the roads and crossings of the Park. The almost constant rains and freezing haven't done them a bit of good and a top dressing will be welcomed.

The Baltimore Conference of the Epworth League has fixed its meeting this year for July 17 to 24. But we are not advised that the Park will be the place of meeting.

Miss Myrtie Finnell arrived here from Parkersburg Monday. Mrs. Busselle is expected today. We are sorry to learn that Mr. Ralph Finnell, one of the older friends of the writer, a frequent visitor at the Park, has been seriously ill.

The general public is invited to a sacred song service and lecture on "The Great Hymns of the Church" Sunday evening, February 26, at the M. E. church. Miss Sara B. Huff at this service will open a spring program of music and Institute work, leading up to the summer program.

On last Sunday twin boys were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ford Faucher, of Loch Lynn. One of the boys survives. Mrs. Faucher is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Lish.

Word has been received at the Park of the illness, at the home of her daughter in Washington, D. C., of Mrs. William Anderson. Her many friends will be glad to learn that she is on the road to recovery.

Without the knowledge of Mrs. Margaret Jane Grove, the mother of Mrs. McClellan Clayton, now residing in Fairmont, a friend wrote President-elect Roosevelt that Mrs. Grove, a life-long Democrat, although more than a century old, nevertheless went to the polls at the last election and cast her vote for her party's choice. A picture of Mrs. Grove was inclosed. Recently a very gracious reply to the letter was received, inclosing words of greeting and an autograph of Mr. Roosevelt.

Senator Blaine defines intoxication as loss of control. Then Congress must be that way most of the time.

The Black Walnut—A Valuable Tree

The black walnut represents a native tree especially well adapted to Maryland conditions and it possesses valuable characteristics which some day will be more generally appreciated. It is a highly ornamental tree; the timber is sought after for use in making furnitnre and other manufactured articles, and the nuts command a relatively high price for use in confections. The common opinion that the walnut is slow in coming into bearing is not well founded for, while it is a type that requires heavy feeding, when given an annual mulch of stable manure, it will generally come into bearing as soon as the apple tree.

Nuts produced by seedling trees very greatly in sizs, shape and cracking qualities. There are, however, a limited number of named varieties which are to be recommended highly. They include Thomas, Stabler and Ohio, the leading varieties being propagated today.

Poultry Advice

Hatching at the right time this spring will have an important bearing on the egg production of the pullets next fall, according to John H. Carter, county agent. Recent experiments have tended to confirm the idea that pullets reaching maturity and commencing to lay in October or by November 1 will produce a greater number of eggs during the succeeding twelve-month period than those maturing at earlier or later dates. The handicap is especially apparent in pullets maturing later than November 1.

The Maryland Experiment station has emphasized for many years the importance of hatching at the proper time. The value of such recommendation is borne out by recent experimental results.

It is customary to allow approximately 160 days for the lighter breeds to reach maturity. To have pullets ready to lay by October 15, it would be necessary to have the chicks out not later than May 5.

Therefore the most desirable hatching period for lighter breeds is generally regarded as April 1 to May 15.

For the heavier breeds 180 days is allowed for pullets to reach maturity. To have pullets of this type at the proper stage of maturity by Octoher 15 would require hatching not later than April 15.

In addition to the greater laying capacity of the pullets, earlier hatched chicks are likely to develop before hot weather to a stage where they are more resistant to disease and parasites. Hot weather always aggravates trouble from these sources.

Poultry growers who follow the "Grow Healthy Chick" program recommended will not only have more eggs in the basket at the end of the year, but they will have more money in the bank.

Flocks raised on this program average 165 eggs per hen with an income over feed cost of $2.66 per hen, while flocks raised under ordinary methods produced only 147 eggs per hen with an income of $1.86, the difference being 18 eggs and 80 cents net income per bird.

Practices recommended in raising poultry were clean chicks, clean incubators, clean brooder houses, clean grounds, clean litters, clean feed, clean management, and clean laying house.

Refreshments were served. Music was furnished by the Cogley Brothers stringed orchestra. The committee in charge including Paul Frazee, Joe Cogley and George Altstetter. Bert Welch, Robert Townshend and E. P. Kahl were named as the committee in charge for the next meeting to be held on March 21.

Bedding Announced As Next Phase of Red Cross Cotton Distribution

With the signing by the President of the bill granting a second allotment of Farm Board cotton, the American Red Cross undertakes the distribution of bedding to the needy. The new phase of the gigantic commodity program of the Red Cross contemplates as a first step the purchase of 1,500,000 cotton blankets and 500,000 cotton comforters. The organization will also make early purchase and distribution of 18,000,000 articles of underwear, hosiery, trousers, knickers, overalls and jumpers.

The bill adds approximately 340,000 bales of cotton to the 500,000 authorized last July. Thus far the Red Cross has distributed 59,489,328 yards of cotton cloth and 28,000,000 ready-made garments to 4,709,075 families. The 3,675 Red Cross chapters and units handling the assignment served all but a few of the 3,072 counties in the United States.

It is estimated that administrative costs to the Red Cross of cotton and wheat distribution will amount to $535,000.

Out of 170 forest fires reported in Garrett county during 1932, 100 of these were caused purposely, being of incendiary origin, according to the Forestry News Letter, received a few days ago by The Republican.

Smoking was given as the next cause of importance, 377 fires having been caused by this method. Other causes were listed as follows: Railroad, 2; campers, 4; brush burning, 15; lumbering, 1; miscellaneous, 10; unknown, 1. Eighty-eight false alarms were reported.

Garrett county's 170 fires burned over an area of 3,985 acres, causing damage to the extent of $6,831.22. Expense of fire control was $1,990.25.

Wins Essay Contest

Charles Ross, a student of agriculture in Friendsville High school, won the essay contest on "A Farmer who Achieves," which was conducted in the school recently.

For the winning essay the contestant was presented with a book entitled, "Adventures in Achievement."

Young Ross wrote about Asa B. Friend, of the Friendsville community, who started farming in a small way and continued to progress each year. Mr. Friend is still engaged in farming. The winning essay is as follows:

A Man Who Achieves

Mr. Asa B. Friend is a man who achieves. When he started out in life for himself he did so without any large inheritance. But being a very industrious man he worked hard and earnestly. Finally he bought land and cleared out enough for a nice farm. The land was very level, hence the best kind for cultivation. Mr. Friend was very successful in his raising of live stock and grains. He tilled his land carefully and raised grains for the market.

As time went on Mr. Friend continued to clear more land, thus increasing the size of his farm. His fences, which enclose his farm, are secure and upright—they do not lean on the ground. His stock is of the best and is always kept in the best of condition. His buildings are modern and repaired at intervals when necessary.

Mr. Friend has a place for everything and everything is in its place. When not in use his machinery is kept in a shed, provided for that purpose.

At first Mr. Friend lived in a small, simple log honse, but later erectod a nice farm house into which he moved his large family. His three sons always took an interest in farming and helped their father greatly, and of course this both pleased and encouraged the father.

Mr. Friend, now an eldely man, is still farming and progressing. His wife is provided with all the modern household equipment and conveniences and the family enjoys the pleasure of a modest little automobile.

Mr. Friend is a fine neighbor and well liked in his community. He is fair and honest in his dealings. This has undoubtedly contributed to his success, as well as his discreet economy and good common sense.

BEYOND THE COUNTY

At Miama, Fla., Giuseppe Zangara, who attempted assasination of the President-elect, was declared sane and eminent by counsel appointed by the Court to defend him.

In New York, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President-elect, assisted in making his son, Elliott, a Master Mason, at which communieation more than 1500 members of the craft were present.

In Fairmont, W. Va., a 10 percent dividend (additional) was paid to approximately 2,000 depositors of the closed Union National Bank, totaling about $224,445.00.

At Miami, Fla., Giuseppe Zangara, attempted assassin of President-elect Roosevelt, pleaded guilty to four counts in an indictment for attempted murder and received a sentence of 80 years.

At Washington, the House passed the repeal resolution and the various states are preparing to submit the question to the conventions for ratification or rejection.

In New York, a large crowd of friends paid a last tribute to "Gentleman Jim" Corbett, one time heavyweight champion of the world, conqueror of John L. Sullivan, who recently died of cancer of the liver.

In Charleston, W. Va., in the Legislature, a bill has been introduced which defines non-intoxicating beer as one which does not contain more than 3.05 alcohol by weight, and fixing a tax of $500 a year if sold from a fountain.

In Baltimore, the Public Health Service states that rats cause a damage of one million dollars a year to residents of that city.

In New Concord, Ohio, at the New Concord and Muskigum college, students guilty of drinking, petting, (if caught) bridge playing, dancing, or cigaret smoking, are immediately expelled.

In Grafton, W. Va., Miss Irene Hunst, former employe of the West Penn Public Service Co., has been indicted, after having confessed, according to police, of having staged a fake robbery of the company's offices.

Even some of our most confirmed Democratic friends are now beginning to be doubtful as to whether they will wake up on the morning of March 5 and find prosperity returned.

The twentieth Amendment to the Federal Constitution has been adopted and hereafter they can no longer blame the shortcomings of Congress on to the Lame Ducks. Somebody will have to think up a new alibi.

Although Franklin Delano Roosevelt garnered a record vote on his promise to give the people beer by Christmas, it is dawning on some that he didn't specify which Christmas.

Technocracy has been disavowed at Columbia University. Maybe there is something in it after all.

VOLUME 57. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, MARCH 2, 1933. NUMBER 3.

BUDGET SLASH PROPOSED IN GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

Recommends Heavy Cuts For Salaried Officials, Colleges and the Public Schools

1 PERCENT TAX ON BETS

Maryland's governmental expenditures will be reduced another $5,646,712 during 1934 and 1935 and tax rates in the counties will be lowered on a scale varying from approximately 32 cents per $100 to approximately $1.38 per $100 under the program for retrenchment and new revenue, laid before the General Assembly by Governor Ritchie last week-end. The lowering of the budget was forced upon the Governor by the stand taken by the County Commissioners' Association and the demand made by that body for retrenchment in State and county expenditures.

The Governor recommended in his revised budget that the outlay for the next biennium be cut from $62,759,-174.80, provided in the original budget, to $57,112,462.80.

At the same time the Governor advocated a reallocation of funds and a one percent tax on all race track bets to supplement the budget reductions in creating a total "pool" of $3,000,-000 annually with which to bring tax relief to the counties and unemployment relief to Baltimore City.

Under this program Garrett county would be able to make a reduction in the tax rate of $1.00 on the county tax and 3 cents on the State tax. At present the county rate is $1.60 and the State rate is 25 cents, leaving a total tax of 82 cents for both county and state charges if the budget is adopted by the General Assembly.

Governor's Proposals

The fundamental principles of the Governor's program were as follows:

(1) A graduated scale of salary reductions, ranging from ten to fifteen per cent, estimated to produce $248,536.

(2) A sweeping 40 per cent. reduction in all appropriations for the University of Maryland.

(3) Reductions of 10 per cent on departmental operating expenses, three to five per cent on instrumental operating expenses, and a further flat reduction of 10 per cent on the total budgets of all departments and institutions.

(4) Included in the above is elimination of the 25 additional State police requested by the motor vehicles commissioner.

(5) Reduction of $528,025 in the public schools allowances. This includes cutting the costs of normal schools at Frostburg and Salisbury in half and elimination of many of the county supervisors.

(6) Reduction of $42,200 in the amounts expended on State-aided Institutions.

(7) Diversion of $304,078 in motor vehicles fines from road funds to tax relief purposes.

(8) Imposition of a one per cent tax on all race bets—acceptable to track officials, according to the Governor—to raise $300,000 for tax relief purposes.

$400,000 For Reserve Fund

The program would produce $3,400,-000, but under the executive's plan, $400,000 would be used to set up a reserve fund to be thrown into the breach if any of the recommended cuts should prove so drastic as to cripple state activities. Of the $3,-000,000 remaining, $1,500,000 would be used to provide carrying charges and sinking fund for a bond issue for unemployment relief in Baltimore City. An equal amount would be allotted to the counties on a population basis to enable the counties participating in the schoo lequalization fund to reduce their 67-cent school levies to 47 cents.

Senator J. Allan Coad (Dem., St. Mary's), who started out his consideration of the budget as a member of the Finance Committee with the assertion that $1,000,000 or $1,500,000 could be cut out of the appropriations for 1934 and 1935, said he would not comment on the Governor's program until he had time to study it.

BILLS INTRODUCED WOULD CUT SALARIES OF OFFICERS

Sheriff, State's Attorney and Commissioners Involved

Three measures designed to reduce the salaries of officers of Garrett county were introduced in the House of Delegates on Monday night.

One would reduce the salary of the sheriff and another would provide for a reduction in the amount of compensation paid the State's Attorney from $750 to $300. The Sheriff at present is paid a salary of $1,800 per year, while the salary of the State's Attorney is $1,500 with $750 for expenses in operating his office.

The third proposal provides that the salary of future Garrett County Commissioners shall be $900 and that the 10-cent a mile allowance for traveling expenses for the commissioners be eliminated. The Commissioners now receive $1,000 a year salary.

All three measures were referred to the Garrett county delegation and Delegate Joseph D. Mish (Dem., of Washington county).

Other Matters of a Local Nature

On Tuesday the House bill providing that all justices of the peace in Garrett county shall make to the County Commissioners of the county reports of fines and fees imposed and that said fines shall be paid to the County Treasurer, was recommitted to the Garrett county delegation and Delegate Mish.

On Tuesday also the House bill fixing the fee which the treasurer of Garrett county shall be entitled to charge against each piece of property sold for taxes and to be paid by said treasurer to the auctioneer for his services in conducting such sale, was reported without recommendation and recommitted to the Garrett county delegation and Delegate Mish.

A favorable report was adopted last Thursday on the House bill relating to fences in certain election districts of Garrett county.

LENT, HOLY SEASON OF THE CHURCH, IS USHERED IN

Lent, the holy season of the Church, was ushered in yesterday, Ash Wednesday, with calls to penitence and prayer, which is being observed by the Catholic church and many Protestant churches.

Lent is so called from a custom of sprinkling ashes that day on the heads of penitents, then admitting them to penance. In Catholic churches ashes in the form of a cross are placed on the forehead of members on Ash Wednesday to remind them that their bodies will return to dust.

The period at which the fast was instituted is uncertain. It has only been within comparative late years that the Protestant churches, with the exception of the Episcopal church, generally observed Lent. In that church in the "Table of Fasting and Abstinence," the Forty Days of Lent stand first. In all churches, however, there is a more strict observance of this penitential season.

Tuesday was Shrove or Mardi Gras Tuesday, the last day before Lent. In the United States the day is observed with great ceremonies, especially in New Orleans and Memphis. These include brilliant processions, masquerade balls, and other gay entertainments, which are participated in by thousands of visitors from all parts of the country.

In these days of anxiety and distress, there is a natural turning of minds away from the material to the spiritual, and a more strict and general observance of the Lenten season is expected in all the churches.

The first of the union Lenten services here was held last evening in the M. E. church, Rev. C. A. Shilke preaching the sermon.

TEST DIESEL MOTOR CAR ON B. AND O. RAILROAD

Experiments Made With Car On Seventeen-Mile Grade

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has tested a powerful motor car, with Diesel engine propulsion, burning low-grade oil, in recent days, on the mountain grades east and west of Cumberland. It is understood that the tests proved highly successful, and that the grades on the mountains were taken at 40 miles an hour. The low fuel costs also satisfied railroad officials, it was said.

The motor coach, manufactured by the Westinghouse Company, of Pittsburgh, was tested between Cumberland and Oakland, and also on the Sand Patch grade. It was reported that motor coaches may supplant the steam locomotives on passenger trains, because of their high speed and economical operation.

The Westinghouse Company manufactures train equipment similar to that of city subway trains, with parlor, dining and lounge coaches hauled by the motor-driven car. The operating costs would enable the railroad to reduce fares, it was said, and compete with bus lines.

BANK HOLIDAY EXTENDED; HEARINGS ON BILL BEGUN

Measure Expected to Pass General Assembly late Today; Two Local Banks Disregard Holiday

BUSINESS AS USUAL HERE

Annapolis, Md., March 2—The Senate committees on Finane and Judicial Proceedings were closeted at an early hour this morning, in a committee room, continuing their deliberations over the emergency bank relief bill.

Whether or not it would be brought to the Senate floor for the adoption of several amendments which, state house leaders said probably will be incorporated in the measure by agreement of the committees, was a matter of speculation.

Meanwhile, it was reported in high official circles that the bank holiday probably would be extended until Saturday, and perhaps even until Monday.

The House committees had adjourned earlier in the night, to convene today at 1:00 p. m. in the hopes the measure would have obtained Senate approval by that hour and the House could immediately begin proceedings on the bill on the floor.

In the House chamber, packed with legislators, financial leaders and scores of citizens, a hearing began early tonight on the proposed stabilization measure for Maryland banks.

While Governor Ritchie extended the banking holiday to include tomorrow, the members of the Senate and House pressed legislative action and prepared to continue the hearing late into the night, in a hope of getting it through the general assembly as quickly as possible.

Two Banks Here Are Open

The bank holiday was declared early last Saturday morning by Governor Ritchie, due to withdrawals from the Baltimore Trust company during the week amounting to $13,-000,000.

Oakland banks declined to observe the holiday, preferring to remain open and give the same service to their depositors that they have been doing in the past. On Monday, however, the Farmers Bank, a State institution, decided to observe the bank holiday, and other banks of the county are said to be observing it with the exception of the First National of Friendsville. All other banks in the state remaining open, are doing so only to make change.

Conferences between Governor Ritchie, other state officials and bankers for the past few days terminated today with the presentation of the bill to the state lawmakers for their consideration, and tonight the committees of the two houses which will guide the measure through its legislative channels immediately called a hearing.

Governor Ritchie, Attorney General William Preston Lane, Jr., and others who have participated in the conferences of the past few days opened the meeting before the House Ways and Means and Judiciary and the Senate Finance and Judicial Pro-

Miss Edith Smith, a girl scout representative, told how to respect the American flag on various occasions.

Mrs. James Willison, Mrs. F. E. Rathbun, and Mrs. James Towler were named as a nominating committee. Election of officers will take place at the next meeting. At the conclusion of the business meeting refreshments were served by the hostess.

Lesson for March 5

JESUS GIVING LIFE AND HEALTH

LESSON TEXT—Mark 5:21-43.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Making a Little Girl Live Again.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Raising Jairus' Daughter.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Life and Health Through Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity and Human Suffering.

The accounts of the raising of the damsel and the healing of the woman are so interwoven as almost to constitute one narrative, but since the principles are diverse and the places separate, and the one an interruption of the other, they should be treated separately.

I. Jairus' Daughter Raised From the Dead (vv. 22-24, 35-43).

1. Jairus' urgent mission (vv. 22, 23). His only daughter (Luke 8:42). Perhaps his only child lay dying. In this time of utter helplessness he came to Jesus for he had faith in his ability to raise her up. In the providence of God sorrow, sickness and death are often used to bring needy men and women into contact with Jesus. He showed the proper attitude toward Jesus, "he fell at his feet" (v. 22).

2. Jesus goes with Jairus (v. 24). Jairus believed that if Jesus would lay his hand upon his daughter she would live. Such faith always gets a response from Jesus. No one destitute of faith can receive his blessing.

3. News of his daughter's death (v. 35). This was a most startling message. The messenger who brought the news of her death suggested that Jesus should be excused from going further as it was now too late.

4. Jairus' faith strengthened (v. 36). As soon as Jesus heard the word spoken concerning the death of this girl, he said to the father, "Be not afraid, only believe." This is the message still to every distressed soul.

5. The mourners rebuked (vv. 37-39). He dismissed the crowd and allowed only three of his disciples and the parents of the damsel to enter this chamber of death with him. The tumultuous wailing showed the despair of the friends. In connection with this death-wail the Lord was ridiculed, but he declared that the girl could be awakened from her sleep of death.

6. Jairus' faith rewarded (vv. 41-43). He took the damsel by the hand and commanded her to arise. The expression "Talitha cumi" in the Aramaic may be freely translated, "Wake up, little girl." She straightway arose and walked and partook of food. Her walking was proof of the reality of the miracle. There was no sign of the weakness which usually follows a severe sickness.

II. The Woman With an Issue of Blood (vv. 25-34).

1. Her helpless condition (vv. 25, 26, cf. Luke 8:43). She had been a great sufferer for twelve long years. In addition to physical suffering her malady involved ceremonial uncleanness which was perhaps harder to bear than the physical suffering. This ceremonial uncleanness meant her exclusion from the places of worship and divorce from her husband, as well as social isolation.

2. Her faith (vv. 27, 28). She possessed a real and earnest faith. Having heard of the fame of Jesus as a healer, she likely journeyed a considerable distance. For a poor emaciated woman after twelve years of suffering to press her way through a thronging multitude, shows that she possessed a determined purpose. The test of the actuality and quality of one's faith is the determined activity which it engenders. Her faith was so strong that she believed that contact with the Master's garments would secure the needed help.

3. Her healing (vv. 29-32). As soon as she touched the hem of his garment, she experienced in her body his healing power. Jesus was conscious of the outgoing of virtue from himself.

4. Her confession (v. 33, cf. Luke 8:47). She thought secretly to get the blessing of healing, but Jesus perceived that virtue had gone out from him and had her make a public confession.

5. Jesus' words of encouragement (v. 34). With the communication of his healing virtue he spoke most gracious and comforting words to this poor woman. He told her that it was her faith, not her touch that had saved her. Faith does not need to face danger and to exhaust itself in active endeavor in order to gain Christ's blessing. All that is required is a trusting prayer. She obtained the blessing immediately.

"Heavenly Visions"

"I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision." Thrice unhappy are they who have never had a heavenly vision, i. e., a vision of something higher and better than the life they have been leading. It may have come in a sermon, a biography, a holy life, a face a deathbed scene illuminated with the light of another world. How it shamed, rebuked, cast down with infinite regret, then raised to a new hope and determination. Act, act, in the living present.

"NEXT stop's Pennelton, ma'am." Marion Caruthers looked up, put the magazine she was reading into her grip and put on her coat and hat. A moment later she was standing on the platform.

"Miss Caruthers?" said a pleasant voice, and Marion saw before her a middle-aged man with bared head.

"I'm Thompson, the principal of the school where you're going to teach."

"How nice of you to meet me," she said. "I'm awfully glad you're the principal because I know I'll like you."

"You're very young, Miss Caruthers," he mused.

"Yes, this is my first school," she admitted.

"And to come so far."

"It is a long way, but I've always wanted to see the South."

"I hope you'll like it; we do. We'll just get home in time for dinner," he continued.

"Dinner!" she gasped. "Why, up home we always have dinner at six o'clock."

"We're just ordinary folks down here. Guess you'll have to make allowances."

Mrs. Thompson met Marion at the door and gave her a warm welcome.

"So glad to see you, dear. Are you very tired? Dinner's just ready. I'll show you your room so you can take off your things."

When Mrs. Thompson came back down stairs she and her husband had a hurried word in the hall.

"Isn't she attractive!" said Mrs. Thompson. "What lovely eyes and such a quick infectious smile."

"Yes, but I'm afraid she's too young to manage children in a country high school. Had absolutely no experience."

Their comments were cut short by the entrance of Marion and they all hurried into the dining room.

"Biscuits?" said Marion, quizzically at the dining table. "Up North we have bread—bake Wednesdays and Saturdays."

"I'm sorry we have none," said the professor quietly.

"And you serve string beans with pork," Marion went on in amazement. "I never saw that before."

By the time the meal was over Mrs. Thompson felt that somehow her well-cooked dinner had fallen short of the mark. It was very discouraging—she had worked so hard.

The following day school began and Marion was busy all the rest of the week getting things organized in her classroom.

At the first parent-teachers' meeting she nearly had an open tilt with one or two of the mothers. She just could not make them see. And worst of all, she had a feeling that they did not understand her. There was only one person in Pennelton who did and he was John Hamilton, the Latin professor.

Fall slipped into winter and the students of Pennelton county high pegged away. Marion had enjoyed the Thanksgiving holiday immensely. Professor Hamilton's mother had invited her over for Thanksgiving dinner. Then there were two dances and Marion had made a decided hit each night. Still she did not feel that she was one of them. Southern people were nice, but queer—so queer.

And now spring had come again and soon Marion would be going back home, and for some peculiar reason she was not sure that she was glad. She had made a success of her teaching and Professor Thompson had been unstinted in his praise of her work.

The parent-teachers decided to give a parting banquet in honor of themselves and to commemorate a most successful year's work. Marion put on her best evening dress and looked her stunningest as she sat beside Professor Thompson at the long table.

Mrs. Burton rose and began to make a speech.

"This banquet," she said, "is in honor of Miss Caruthers. Everything on the table has been prepared by a northern woman we coaxed over from Delton and the recipes all came out of a northern cookbook. We wanted just once to do something down South as they do it up North, and—"

"Oh, forgive me," interrupted Marion, jumping up. "I see it all now, but I never realized how tactless it was. That's what's been the matter. What a little beast I've been! Would it help to make amends now if I tell you I love the South and the people and the cooking and everything, and I did so want them to love me. If you ever hear me say up North again I hope you'll run me out of the county. That's what I deserve, anyway."

Flushed and breathless, she dropped into her chair again.

"Yes, I'm certain Miss Caruthers feels every word she's said about liking the South and all that," said Professor Hamilton, rising, "because she—she's going to marry a down souther—she's going to marry me!"

"Jack, you—I never—"

But the rest was lost in a round of applause, while Professor Hamilton congratulated himself on his brilliant coup d'etat.

Must Play National Anthem

Ontario theaters must in future play the national anthem at the conclusion of their performances. The law says so and it will be rigidly enforced in the future. Information to this effect was had from officials at Queen's Park.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

The little package you might have seen me carrying around during the past few days is just the beginning of a weed-growing contest, to be staged this spring and summer out at the mansion.

Not that it was my idea at all. The other part of the Scoop household furnished the idea and I'm to furnish the labor. I promised to run a garden if she would tend to the gardenias and she took me at my word.

So here I was, carrying around a pair of overalls. First I got a size 40, which looked big enough for a horse, but evidently a horse's waist is smaller than I always thought. Anyhow, I exchanged them for a size 42. Well, when I tried them on the only thing bigger about them were the legs and they were long enough in the first place. They were still too short from the point where my legs end to the point where they connect with my suspenders. A size 42 extra large finally gave me room enough to bend over with a hoe, and this is what Mrs. Scoop decided was a sign of a good fit. As for me, I would have been satisfied with the size 40. I never did care for that kind of bending exercise, anyway.

Now they're stored away, waiting for the first touch of spring. Something tells me I'm to have a more severe attack of spring fever this year than ever before.

But after all, there is something thrilling about obtaining nature's bounties by the sweat of the brow. When the seedlings burst through the groundlings into little plantlings, turning eventually into budlings and from there into eatlings, what joy to behold the mystery of nature reigning supreme in its hour of gory, I mean glory and success.

How noble it is to watch the tender shoots spring forth, endangered by the encircling folds of that octopus known as weed, only to be saved by the tender care of the farmer who cuts off the entwining fingers that reach out to choke the babes swathed in fertilizer.

If I don't stop this soon, I'll be in tears. Anyhow, you get the idea. It's a wonderful work, putting the soil to work for you, and then working your hide off in order to get the plants to work for you. A sense of achievement, if you want to call it that, and I really don't see any reason why you should.

The real achievement is that this column is half finished.

I have just heard some of the names of those who are going to be in the home talent show, "Aren't We All," to be given for the benefit of the Public Library next Thursday and Friday, and boy, oh boy, oh boy, you don't want to miss it. And even if it wasn't going to be good, you'd want to help the library, wouldn't you?

It's Lent

Where is my little lawnmower
I used to push around
To cut the grass down lower?
It's lent.

Where is my underwear so red
I used to wear right often?
I guess I'll have to stay in bed—
It's lent.

Where is my crop of ideas
I've got to furnish this column?
Too bad, folks, I'm just too dumb—
It's lent.

If we could only say the word
About this darned depression
It's gone for good and won't come back—
It's lent.

Brother, can you lent me a nickel? Since Mr. Woodin has been named Secretary of the Treasury, do you think we will ever have Woodin nickels? Woodin you like to know?

22 COUNTIES NOW HAVE FULL-TIME HEALTH UNITS

Service Is Avaliable To Ninety-Eight Percent of Population

Maryland has the distinction of having full-time health service in 22 of the 23 counties in the State. Stating it in terms of population, over 840,000 of the 860,000 people living in the counties of Maryland, or 98 percent of the total population of the counties, have such service. St. Mary's county—the latest addition to those having such service— went on a full-time basis in January, 1933, with the appointment of Dr. David T. Bowden, as health officer. The only county still on a part-time basis is Caroline.

Some idea of the cumulative effect of this county-wide service may be gathered from a report prepared by Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, on "Public Health Activities in the counties of Maryland, during 1932." The report summarizes the activities of each county in the general control of communicable diseases; in the care and supervision of persons suffering from tuberculosis; in immunization, or protection against diphtheria, typhoid and smallpox; in the health supervision of mothers and young children; in dental care of young children; in the medical examination and inspection of school children; in sanitary inspections and in general sanitary supervision of recreational and industrial camps, and in miscellaneous duties. It also gives the total figures for all counties.

Because the prevention or control of infectious diseases occupies so large a part of the health officers' time, that item naturally has first place in the report. During last year, 18,675 cases of communicable diseases were reported to the State Department of Health, and 10,748 home visits were made by the health officers to discover sources of infection, and to establish the necessary protective measures to prevent the spread of the diseases; 14,050 young children were immunized—that is, protected against diphtheria; 5,774 persons were vaccinated against typhoid fever, and 5,670 were vaccinated against smallpox.

In connection with the activities for the control or prevention of tuberculosis, 9,035 visits were made by the county health officers and the county public health nurses under their direction, to persons suffering from that disease. In cooperation with the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, 204 chest clinics were held, at which 3,920 persons were examined for evidences of tuberculosis; 2,050 new cases were added to those under supervision and 425 were placed in hospitals or sanatoria.

In connection with the work for infants and young children, 714 child health conferences were held during the year, at which 10,957 babies and young children, under school age were examined, about half of the number in preparation for their admission to school. Supervision of the health of the older children, was carried on in cooperation with the State Department of Education. Practically all elementary schools in the counties were visited; 44,081 children in the elementary grades were given a physical examination and 71,502 were inspected in connection with the control of communicable diseases in the schools.

Over 10,000 sanitary inspections were made, and biological supplies, totaling 11,441, such as vaccines, antitoxins, disinfectants, and other emergency supplies, for use in the control of communicable diseases, were distributed, from the centers maintained throughout the counties.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

THE PENTATEUCH

The name Pentateuch means five books, and refers to the first five books of the sacred canon, commonly called the Books of Moses. They are Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. There is a remarkable unity of plan pervading the whole Pentateuch, revealing the work of one mind in its production, which could not be the case if this were a collection of independent documents.

The first book, Genesis, begins with the story of the creation of the world in six days and contains a brief history of man's fall, his expulsion from Eden, the subsequent history of the world before the flood, the deluge itself, the preservation of Noah and his family, the peopling of the earth by the sons of Noah, the calling of Abraham, the outstanding incidents in his life and in the lives of Isaac, Jacob and Esau; Joseph's romantic career in Egypt and the events following the famine in Canaan which caused Jacob and his family to emigrate to Egypt, where Joseph was reconsiled to his brethren.

The Book of Exodus continues the story of the chosen people, giving the history of the oppression of the Israelites, their ultimate deliverance from Pharoah's yoke through the leadership of Moses, the divinely commissioned law-giver; their desert wanderings; the giving of the Law of the ten words on Mt. Sinai, and directions for the building of altars of sacrifice and the tabernacle, the forerunner of Solomon's Temple. The name Exodus means "a going out."

Leviticus takes its name from the sons of Levi, the priestly family of Israel. It deals with worship, the services of the priests, their duties and the law of sacrifices.

The Book of Numbers opens with the enumeration of the Children of Israel, and is both a chronicle of historical events and a depository of certain precepts and sundry laws governing inheritance. Among the interesting matters dealt with in this book are the cities of refuge, when a man might flee from the avenger of blood and be safe until his actual status of innocence or guilt could be determined.

In Deuteronomy, otherwise known as The Second Law, from the two Greek words of which the name is formed, rehearses the history of the Hebrew people from the time they left Horeb. It also repeats, emphasizes and occasionally modifies precepts before delivered.

The generation of Israel that had crossed the Red Sea nearly forty years earlier were now dead. Hence it was important that the law should be repeated and expounded to the new generation before they entered the Land of Promise.

The key thought of this final book of the Pentateuch is "The divine requirement of obedience." In these days when men seem to regard so lightly both divine and human laws, we shall do well to recall that the word remember is repeated again and again. The people are urged to remember the giving of the law, the covenant, their past slavery, the great deliverance, the Divine leadership and supplies, the sins of the past, the Divine judgments, the ancient days. The great commandment of this book is the supreme importance of remembering God's Word—Chapter 6:4-12, closing as follows: "Then beware lest thou forget the Lord, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Frederick H. Prince, president of the Chicago Stockyards Company, returning from a trip to Europe some time ago, had some harsh things to say about the part played in our government by meddling professors. The Chicago Tribune, of February 1, quotes Mr. Prince as declaring that these professors of the government-meddling type form one of the "chief curses of the country."

"You have only to think back the last ten years upon the difficulties into which we have been drawn because of the influence of the professors to realize that the sooner we get away from this influence the better we will be."

The professors to whom Mr. Prince referred are not, of course, the earnest and patient men and women who are quietly devoting their lives to science and to the proper training of the young men and women of America. They are the professional gentlemen who seem to have a yen for running the government or at least telling Congress and the President how it ought to be run. These men, intensely impractical themselves, (many of them would get lost if turned loose unattended in the business district of a city as large as Kansas City or Seattle) become imbued with the idea that they could not only run the United States better than any other class of citizens could run it, but steer the course of the world better than Providence can do it—some of them in fact even denying the existence of Providence.

Occupying professional chairs endowed by American business men they propose methods for destroying American business and for placing the welfare of Europe over that of their own country—a system of biting the hand which feeds one, which could hardly be improved on for its efficiency and ingratitude.

That this statement is not exaggerated is evidenced by the fact that most of this political professorial group has during the past decade advocated every internationallst doctrine calculated to benefit Europe at the expense of America, and every socialistic scheme calculated to undermine American business stability and individual initiative and enterprise. Free Trade, the League of Nations, government ownership—these are sufficient to prove the case.

To go back to Mr. Prince. Asked about war debts, he said:

"Never mind about Europe. If we take care of our own back yard she'll take care of hers. We aren't so poor and we aren't so miserable, but it's time we were engaging in a big measure of common sense. Chuck out the professors; declare a moratorium on farm and general business debts, and forget about Europe. That will lead us somewhere."

Here is some excellent advice for the professorial group which Mr. Prince criticises so severely. If they will adopt it, the benefit will accrue not only to America at large but to the so-called higher educational institutions of the United States as well.

Fight on Black Spot of Roses Should Begin in Early Spring

One of the best measures for preventing black spot of roses is to carefully burn in the eariy spring all dead leaves which may have fallen to the ground, it is stated by W. R. Ballard, horticulturist for the Universlty of Maryland Extension Service. The fungus of this disease has been found to live over the wluter in trasb and burning all waste material from the rose plants aid greatly in limitiug sources of infection.

At the same time, it is not too early to be thinking of spraying and dusting campaigns which must begin early also, and continue at ten-day or two-week periods throughout the growing season. Since the applications are purely preventive in character, it is of great importance that the foliage be covered before attacks of the fungus begin.

The most popular methods of treatment seem to be the sulphur-arsenate dusts, according to Mr. Ballard, experiments having shown that bordeaux sprays stain the foliage badly and are bothersome to prepare. For control of plant lice, a contact spray, such as Black Leaf 40 or Red Arrow, has been found successful. In preparing the sulphur dust, nine parts of sulphur to one part of arsenate of lead has been found a good mixture for the purpose. If Bordeaux is preferred, then a 4-5-50 mixture should be used to which flour, at the rate of six pounds for every fifty gallons of solution, has been added.

Some varieties of roses are more susceptible than others to the disease, which appears as irregular black spots on the leaves. Hence, elimination of these varieties will aid in control of attacks on the remaining varieties.

After the black spots have spread over the entire surface, the leaves turn yellow and drop off. A second crop of leaves may develop late in the summer but often do not mature before cold weather. Consequently, the plant becomes weakened and is less able to withstand winter conditions.

Agricultural Situation and Outlook

"Since prices of farm commodities are likely to remain low for the next few years, the farmer's success will depend largely upon his ability to reduce costs and make other adjustments in his farm operations," it is stated in the "Maryland Agricultural Situation and Outlook for 1933," which has just been issued by the University of Maryland Extension Service.

The Maryland farmer must devote most of his attention to keeping his farm and obtaining an adequate living for his family and such a program will compel careful planning of products, it is stated. Cash expenditures must be reduced, except where they can definitely increase the farm income during the current year. Also opportunities which may arise to adjust farm indebtedness must be carefully considered.

In Fairmont, rum runners staged a good imitation of city gangsters, when they returned the gun fire of a deputy who had given chase, seriously injuring him.

GARNER PROPOSES DICTATORSHIP

One of the surprising results of the depression has been the increasing talk in certain quarters that we are drifting rapidly toward a dictatorship in the United States. American visitors in Europe, we are told, are frequently asked the question by Europeans as to when Uncle Sam is going into the dictatorship business now so common across the sea.

A few years ago anyone predicting a dictatorship in the United States would have been set down as a member of what Theodore Roosevelt called the lunatic frings. Now we frequently hear on the streets the remark that what this country needs is a temporary dictator to straighten out the economic mess we find ourselves involved in.

The most surprising development along this line was the recent statement of Vice-president-elect Garner that Congress ought to give the incoming President what would amount to dictatorial powers not only to reorganize and consolidate governmental departments, but to slash federal salaries and appropriations in the interest of economy and a balanced budget.

The statement of Mr. Garner was of course an admission of the failure of the present Congress to function under his leadership, and an expression of a fear that the incoming Congress with its overwhelming administration majority would be unable to function sufficiently to reduce expenditures and balance the national budget.

Of course the record of the present session of Congress in the matter of economy and efficiency has not been a glorious one. It has paid no attention to the suggestions of President Hoover nor to the suggestions purporting to have come from the President-elect. Its leaders have been unable to control it, and if the next Congress does not do better, then we will indeed be in a mess.

It is doubtful whether the rank and file of the American people are yet ready for a dictatorship, even a temporary one, set up with the consent of Congress in the interest of economy and efficiency. There can be little doubt, however, that there is a drift toward the opinion that there will be no real economy in government until somebody is given the authority to cut and slash in an effective way.

Of course, there is no politics in Mr. Garner's suggestion. But can you imagine what an uproar there would have been among the leaders of the unterrified Democracy if some Republican should have had the temerity to suggest a year ago that, owing to the inability of Congress to function, President Hoover be given dictatorial powers to put his views on economy and governmental efficiency into effect?

It is very doubtful, of course, whether Mr. Garner's ideas will be carried out. Even granting for the sake of argument, what Mr. Garner implies, that Congress is lumbering into a bottomless morass, there are serious constitutional difficulties in the way of setting up a dictatorship of the kind which the incoming Vice-president seems to suggest.

HOOVER ON DEBT PROPAGANDA

President Hoover rendered a real service to the nation during his address to the National Republican Cluh at New York on February 13 when he called attention to the amount of misleading European propaganda looking toward cancellation of the so-called war debts. In part, the President said:

"I trust the American people will not be misled or influenced hy the ceaseless stream of foreign propaganda that cancellation of war debts would give this international relief or remedy. That is not true."

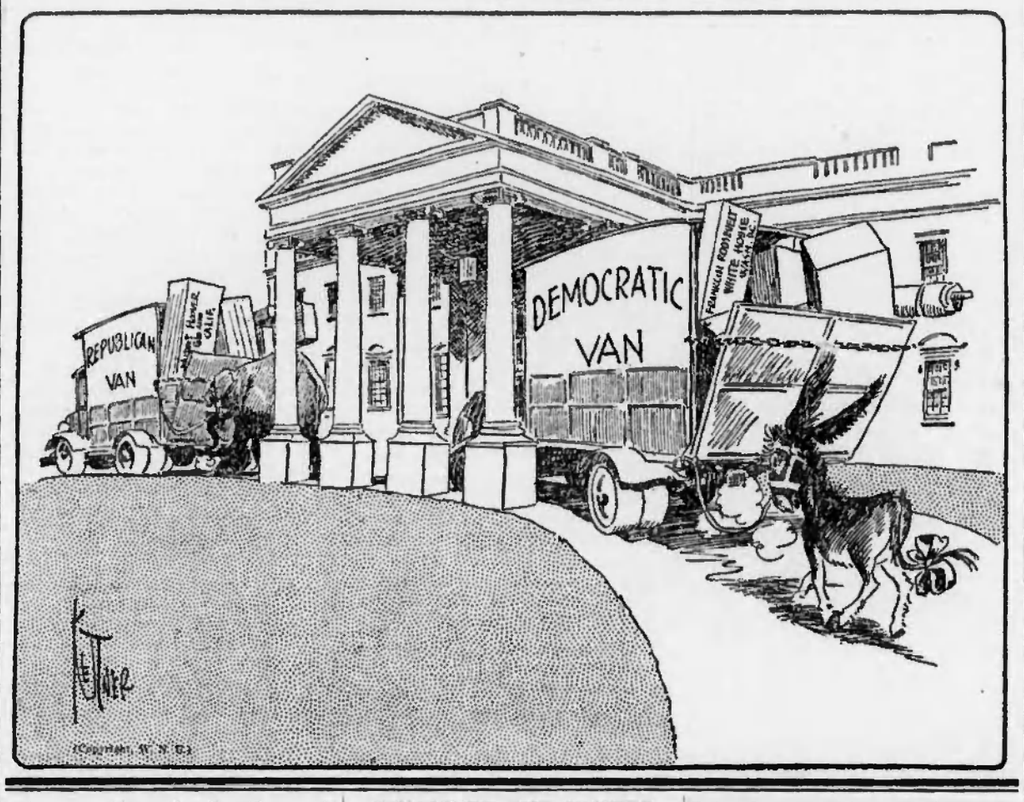
Proof of the debtors' capacity to pay, the President said, is attested by the fact "that in most cases the payments to us amount to less than one-third of the military expenditures of eaeh country."

In exchange for any proposal for ... erican sacrifices the President said Europe not only should open up markets to American imports, but should give assurances of cooperation "that will positively result in monetary stability and restoration of world prosperity."

President Hoover's remarks on the foreign debts were well timed in his address following his masterly defense of sound money.

A great many propagandists, most of them European, but unfortunately some of them American, in their efforts to bring about cancellation, have sought to create the impression in the United Stats that practically all of the world's troubles are due to the European debt owed to the United States. President Hoover pointed out how the lack of international confidence and the cheapening of money standards in many nations had started an economic warfare which is in a big part responsible for the continuation of the depression. Cancelling the debts would not remedy the situation, and President Hoover did well to make this fact so elear in his New York address.

Moving Day in Washington



IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

It was arranged to hear Grover Cleveland's inaugural address at F. A. Sharpless' store after March 4, through the Edison phonograph.

A narrative of Col. William Kilgour, which appeared in the Baltimore Sunday Herald, concerning Meshach Browning's hunting ground, was reprinted.

From the Glade Valley letter: "The spelling bee at Cross Road school house, near Horse Shoe Run, was well attended, including a large crowd from Sunnyside and Mason school. We would only say to the boys from the above places by way of hint—please leave your whiskey bottles at home."

From Engle's Mill: "The mumps are passing through this sectlon giving one and all a call."

Isaac and Thurman Umble, Asher Glade, wandered in a snow storm for several hours, and were nearly frozen when they found the way again and arrived home.

The stave mill of A. Knabb and company at Krug was burned including machinery, loss $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The Friendsville road bid was rejeeted by the County Commissioners on account of the prohibitive price, in spite of the number of Friendsville business men who attended the hearing before the commissioners, and urged its acceptance.

Jessie Warnick won a silver cup for being the champion white oats producer in Maryland.

When the cornerstone of the old Lutheran church at Grantsville was removed the contents were almost unreeognizable, the rain having leaked through the crevices, rusting the tin box. There was a German testament, a hymnal and bill-book in the box, in addition to church history.

John T. Mitchell, A. D. Naylor, Gilmor S. Hamill, G. Semmes Hamill, Charles A. Deffinbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Harned and James Bell attended President Wilson's inauguration. Charles Liller, Calvin Echard, Wallace Brown, and Roy Hinebaugh, members of the Mt. City Band, joined the Keyser Band to take part in the inaugural parade.

N. U. Bond was named by Governor Goldsborough as a delegate to attend the second Federal Good Roads convention where the ocean to ocean highway, via the National highway, was to he discussed. ... t ... ...

RENOVIZE THE UNITED STATES

A short time ago, a "Renovize Philadelphia Plan," backed by various important industries, was inaugurated. In an address concerning it, General W. W. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said: "We all realize that in these days of economic doldrums, the pressing need is for increase in general purchasing power, and that when this is once started we may expect the resulting 'turnover' to stimulate business. * * * *

"Whole-heartedly, decisively, to end the depression is the objective of our entire nation. It MUST be. * * * *

"And, in this economic movement, may all of America get back of Philadelphia's leadership—with but a single and united objective—to end the Depression."

The Renovize Philadelphia program entailed the support of every citizen with a few dollars to spend—to repair a roof, bring his heating plant to date, renew electric wiring, paint a garage, hire a little gardening to be done, and so on. It should be extended until the motto becomes "Renovize the entire United States." Millions of citizens have as much as they ever did, when the decline in the eost of living is taken into consideration. Millions can spend five, or fifty, or five hundred dollars on needed improvements. And this expenditure is in reality a saving. It not only provides jobs, but obtains the improvements at the lowest prices in decades.

Remember that jobs are cheaper than charity—and that unless jobs are provided, there will be nothing at all for chairty. Let's renovize!

THE ONE-ROOM SCHOOL

It is surprising to learn that three school houses out of five in this country are still one-room buildings. It looks as if we haven't really emerged from the "little old red schoolhouse," though most of the schools nowdays are not red.

There need be no great lamentation. To be sure, the fine, big, modern country schools with everything under one roof are usually superior to the little one-man or one-woman schools scattered about the countryside. Yet it has always been true that the most important part of any educational system is the teacher, and a good teacher ean function pretty well under almost any conditions.

The little schoolhouse, too, is far better than it used to be—better in its housing, hetter in its equipment, method and supervision, and usually better also in the qualifications of the teacher herself.

There are even some things to be said for what is ordinarily regarded as the great handicap of such schools—that they have all the grades jumbled up together, confusing the pupils as well as overburdening the teacher. Six or eight grades together are, indeed, a chore for one teacher. But pupils often benefit by such all-inclusive Instruction. They gain more or less famlliarity with the work of every class ahead, and they have a continuous review of the work they have already done. Such learning ls likely to stick.

HANGING ON TO OLD STUFF

From Chicago comes word of a new problem whlch has doubtless appeared in other cities, as well. It is a famine in old but servlceable clothing and furniture. Relief organlzations there, such as the Goodwill Industries, Salvatlon Army and others, have long collected discarded furniture and garments, hired needy men and women to repair and remodel them, and have then sold the articles at a moderate price and used the money to pay the workers. That was the program on which they based their motto, "Not charity, but a chance," and tried to give jobless people the chance to maintain their hope and self-respect long before the present relief emergency developed.

The work is practically stopped now for lack of such articles. People have given away all the old things they can spare. Many familics are using clothing and furniture these days which they would have given away in less depressed times and replaced with new. The superintendent of one relief organization which has been active In this particular work for 20 years reports thls is the first time it has been stopped by scarcity of material.

When the ice jam, or whatever it is that has dammed up Industry and business, is once broken, what a rush of buying there should be! Everybody will need everything. How to break or thaw out the jam?

BANK HOLIDAY EXTENDED; HEARING ON BILL BEGUN

ceedings committees, with a plea that the legislation be approved as soon as the lawmakers have a shance to satisfy themselves that the proposed legislation is the best which can be perfected, at least temporarily.

Leaders of both houses today were busying themselves studying the provisions of the original proposal, drawn up yesterday and revised somewhat today. They also were preparing the way for early hearings and the expedition of consideration of the proposal. After a recess from its original session today, however, the House adjourned until 1 p. m., tomorrow, precluding final disposition of the measure until at least that hour.

The bill was introduced in the Senate this afternoon and it was the announced plan of leaders to have the House and Senate committees sit in the hearings and closed sessions together so that as soon as the Senate takes action on the bill, it can be sent to the House and the necessity of referring it to committee in that body will be obviated.

Amendments Proposed

Propo s for several amendments in the measure were presented by some of the witnesses appearing before the four-committee hearing.

Governor Ritchie Explains

In opening the hearing Governor Ritchie related the history of the situation relative to the proclamation of the bank holiday in the state, explaining that when he was first called into the conference of bankers, last week "the situation they disclosed to me was one I had not visualized."

He recalled that he was shown that heavy withdrawals had been made on the banks in the week previous.

"It affected the good banks as well as the others, and the withdrawals were increasing every day," he said. "There did not seem to be any real reason for the withdrawals. The assets of the banks were just as good as they had been and there were no real runs, but the withdrawals applied to a great extent to the savings departments."

"The opinion seemed inescapably that if the banks operated on Saturday there would be a number of very distressing bank failures which would have been followed by nobody knows what results.

Acted to Save Depositors

"The proposition was put to me to declare the holiday. Obviously, there was only one interest foremost—that of the depositors. Of course, the stockholders have their rights and interests, but before all should come the depositors.

"I could not escape the conclusion that if the depositors were to be saved we must have a breathing spell during which time could be taken to work out something for the good of the banks of the state.

"I think generally it has been agreed—looking at the thing as in the past as well as when I looked at it in the future—that the declaration of the holiday was the best thing to do.

"The legislation in this field is difficult to formulate, because of the lack of precedence for it, and it was difficult to develop a form of legislation which would help.

"I have faced trying conditions before during my life, but none like this one. There was no course to follow.

"There is no elaim that the bill is perfect. I don't know anyone who is pleased with the entire bill, but with a few changes, which may be made, it is the best that all the parties concerned could perfect.

"I invite the legislature to discuss and criticize the measure thoroughly.

"It is the result of cooperation and effort and sincere will to get the best proposal possible."

Dried Beans or Peas, and Why

Beans are very cheap and very filling—but, more than that, they have very special values which may be lacking when other foods are out of reach. This is true of beans of all kinds and peas of all kinds. If you can not have meat for dinner, baked beans, for example, or bean soup, or plain boiled beans fill the gap rather better than most other cheap dishes.

Dried beans and dried peas may be used interchangeably in most recipes, though the cooking time varies somewhat with the different kinds. Canned, cooked beans are a substitute which saves both time and fuel. They need only to be heated, and are also cheap.

Beans, salt pork and onions are the usual combination in bean dishes, but this can be varied by adding tomato sauce, and again by adding ground meat, as in Chili con carne. Then there are such excellent dishes as scalloped beans, with or without tomatoes, and the mixture of rice and black-eyed peas known as Hopping John. A good salad, or a good sandwich may be made of cooked dried beans and shredded cabbage or carrots, with onlon. Or cooked, mashed beans, seasoned with salt pork and onlons, may be molded into cakes and browned ln fat like potato cakes.

As almost equivalent to that ever-popular bean dish—baked beans— but not requiring the same long hours of baking, try baked mashed beans, using the accompaning recipe.

Baked Mashed Beans

One and one-halp pounds navy beans, 6 cups water, 2½ teaspoons salt, ½ pound salt pork, diced; 2 small onions, chopped; 4 tablespoons molasses.

Wash and soak the beans overnight in the six cups of water. In the morning drain, add 2 quarts of fresh water, 1½ teaspoons of the salt, cover, and simmer until the beans are very tender. Drain and reserve the liquid, and press the beans through a colander. Cook the salt pork until crisp, remove the pork and cook the onions in the fat. Add the pork, onions, molasses, and the remaining salt to the bean pulp with enough of the liquid to moisten. Put into a shallow pan and brown in a hot oven. Serve from the pan.

Baked Onions Stuffed With Beans

Cut large onions in half, simmer in lightly salted water until almost tender. Lift the onions out and remove the center rings, chop, and mix with cooked or canned beans. Season to taste with salt and pepper and fill the onion shells with the mixture. Sprinkle bread crumbs on top and bake in the oven until onions are tender and brown on top.

HIS CARE

Safe in my Saviour's keeping—
Why should I fear the dark?
Knowing that He in safety
Will surely guide my bark?

Safe in my Saviour's keeping—
Why fear the tempest wild,
When in gentle voice so tender
He owns me as His child?

Safe in my Saviour's keeping—
Content I wait His will;
For whatever may befall me,
I know He's with me still.

Safe in my Saviour's keeping—
Wherever I may roam;
I know at the end of the journey
He'll bid me "welcome home."

Safe in my Saviour's keeping—
Safe from the world's alarms,
Safe from the snare of the tempter,
Yes, safe in His loving arms.

Safe in my Saviour's keeping—
O precious, precious thought
That some day I shall see Him
And love Him as I ought.

Till then, I tread in patience
The path that He has trod;
Till with loving ones I shall praise Him
In the City of our God.

DON'T QUIT

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When funds are low and debts are high,
When you want to smile but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest if you must, but don't you quit.
Life is queer with its twists and turns,
As everyone of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about,
When he might have won had he stuck it out.
Don't give up, though the pace seems slow—
You may succeed with another blow.
Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faltering man.
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup.
And he learned too late, when the night slipped down,
How close he was to the golden crown.
Success is failure turned inside out—
The silver lining of the clouds of doubt.
And you can never tell how close you are
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worst that you mustn't quit.

Ticket to Sparta

By EMILY V. SPEARS

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

WHEN Peggy Burleson's mother found her shamelessly crying over a bunch of dead violets, she decided something must be done.

"But," protested Peggy, when her mother had explained her plan, "I don't want to go to see Aunt Helen. I want to stay right here in Longhope, where Dick is."

In the end Mrs. Burleson won her point. And two weeks later Peggy was comfortably established in her aunt's luxurious New York apartment, leading a gay life.

And of course Peggy had a good time.

Then suddenly, early in the afternoon of her birthday, a week after her visit began, Peggy suddenly decided she couldn't spend another hour in New York. She must get home. The memory of a shiny white box, layers of gleaming, transparent green paper that she had pulled aside a year ago to disclose a bunch of violets from Dick, came to her so vividly, so poignantly, that she felt almost faint from their nearness.

She was going home. She couldn't go back even for an explanation to her aunt's apartment. Her aunt wouldn't understand.

She hailed a taxi and hurried to the station. It wasn't until she opened her purse to pay the taxi man that she saw she had only two or three dollars. She paid him. Then she stopped to consider what to do next. She'd telephone her aunt—leave word with a maid that she'd gone home for the night. She couldn't make explanations. It was too inconsiderate of her to do it, of course.

She'd buy a ticket that would take her as far as possible on her way. Then, if the conductor remembered—he might forget and let her ride a few stations extra, perhaps the whole way—she'd get off the train, wherever he put her off, and perhaps she could walk the rest of the way.

A crazy plan, of course, but to Peggy at the moment it seemed beautiful.

Fortunately a maid's voice answered her telephone call. There was little surprise in the well-trained, "Yes, Miss," but that was all. Peggy had banked on that. Aunt Helen had high-class servants that never batted an eyelid, no matter what happened.

Peggy's eyes blurred as she worked her way to the head of the line for her ticket. She pushed two dollars and a quarter through the grating. "How far will that go toward Longhope?" she asked the ticket salesman. "To Sparta," he answered. "All right, ticket please," said Peggy. And he gave it to her, with fourteen cents change.

She had to wait half an hour for her train. But that was all right. The maid had told her that her aunt was away at a card party and wouldn't be home till five-thirty.

Snow was falling as the train emerged from the tunnel just beyond the station. Small, business-like flakes. But what was snow to Peggy? She saw violets floating through the air. Sparta was a long way from Longhope. But if she couldn't walk the distance in the inky snow—oh, well, something would happen.

The warmth and regular motion of the train lulled Peggy to sleep.

A firm but gentle tap on the shoulder awakened her an hour or so later. She looked up to find the conductor leaning over her.

"Excuse me, Miss," he said "Where was your ticket to?"

Silently, Peggy produced it.

"We've passed Sparta, Miss. Tomkins is the next stop."

"Oh yes," said Peggy, glad that she had been asleep when the station was called, "I'm sorry. I'll just get off at the next station—"

"Twenty-one cents," said the conductor.

"But—" demanded Peggy.

"Can't help it. I called the station. You'll have to pay."

"Pardon me," said a voice behind her, to the conductor. "The young lady wants to go to Longhope. We are together. I have her fare from Sparta the rest of the way."

The conductor grunted a dissatisfied sound as he accepted a ticket from Dick, and looked at him a bit askance as he slid into the seat beside Peggy.

But that didn't matter to Peggy and Dick.

"You see," he explained, as his hand sought and clasped hers, "it's your birthday. I remembered. And I wanted to be with you—I wanted to tell you, to ask you to marry me. I got to your aunt's apartment just after you'd telephoned, and that nice wooden image of a maid was all excited. She told me what you'd said over the telephone—she'd just been thinking of calling a taxi and going to the station to see what was the matter. Seems she knew—well, she knew you and I knew each other. Your old Annie and she are friends—they've corresponded since you came to New York. Anyway—I got to the station a few minutes before the train left and followed you. Sort of lost my nerve, I guess. Seemed funny to take it for granted you'd feel as I do. But you do, don't you, Peggy?"

Dick's rambling talk had been interspersed by little interjections and exclamations from Peggy, quite satisfying and expressive to him. Darkness was gathering thickly outside the windows, the wind was sighing, and big, white flakes were beating against the warm, lighted windows.

A PROHIBITIONIST'S STAND

The following communication appeared in a recent issue of the New York Herald Tribune and is reproduced in The Republican:

To the New York Herald Tribune:

I notice in your paper a little note from Charles B. Pratt in which he categorically disposes of us prohibitionists. It is a great relief to be so finally and summarily classified and to know who and what we are! But you recall that when Calvin Coolidge was in the chair of the Massachusetts State Senate a member demanded an apology because another member had told him he could "go to hell." The quiet Calvin replied slowly, "Well, you don't have to go."

Now, this is how ignorant I am of social conditions: I have been a close student of social conditions for over forty years. I taught in the sociological department, with reference specially to crime and charity, in the State University of Iowa. For sixteen years I have been traveling over this country at the rate of 35,000 to 45,000 miles a year in every part of our possessions except the Philippines. If you ask why I and many of the prohibitionists still believe in the Eigh- the Eighteenth Amendment.

1. I have been in every large city and hundreds of the smaller ones in the United States before and after prohibition, and there is not a fraction of the observable drunkenness to be seen today that there was before the Eighteenth Amendment.

2. We have lived long enough to have seen the saloon. I have seen it in the lumber woods of Michigan when a young man. I saw it in the Far West in the "gay 90's." I have seen it in Chicago under Carter Harrison and in Boston under "Honey Fitz" and "Debonair" Jim. It was utterly damnable. "We are all against the return of the saloon." Yeah? Well, we drove it out fighting you. You never peeped about that (note Al Smith et al.) until the Eighteenth Amendment educated you. There is no power which can prevent the return of the saloon under repeal. You may call it by any other name, but if a "rose will smell as sweet by another name," so will a white and black striped kitty smell as rank.

3. Crime, gangsterism and racketeering are not entirely or in the major part a result of prohibition. Otherwise we would not see it increase in England with a saloon on every corner. The racketeering game is now in every industry and a result of criminal and venal public officials. Every post-war period has seen just such an increase. The automobile, the Gatling gun and a low moral tone of public life and a horde of un-Americanized aliens have made crime possible and safe.

4. Bootlegging will not stop with the repeal. We had it before prohibition, they have it in formidable proportions in Canada and we will have it afterward unless our public officials, our police force and our minor judges become saints over night. Put a tax of $5 on every keg of beer by the Federal Government, add another of $5 by the State and $500 or any part for a license and you have a fat margin for any bootlegger. Every dollar added to the cost of production is the bootleggers' paradise. They know how to make it; they know how to transport it; they have the machinery; they know how to bribe—and we are naively told that the next morning after repeal is effective they will all join the Salvation Army! There is a knob on the upper end of the backbone that was made to be used!

5. If repeal as passed by the Senate is adopted by the states, prohibition will be made impossible in any State or community. Liquor will be legal in Illinois under whatever restrictions, and across the river it will be outlawed. I lived under prohibition in Iowa, and I know that the liquor gang respect no law except the law of profits. Under the repeal resolution it has been made illegal to ship it into a State that is dry. Well, who is going to stop it? "Put not your trust in princes," warns the Good Book—put not your trust in the Webb-Kenyon law, we warn you. The law can only forbid billing liquor into Iowa—it cannot prevent billing it through Iowa. Who will trail every truck and every airplane to prevent their dropping it off en route? Modern trasportation has rescinded the Webb-Kenyon law. States' rights? "There 'ain't' no such animal" in the liquor business. It was because a State's right to be temperate and protect its youth from the saloon was torn down by the lawless liquor gang that Federal prohibition was made necessary. Liquor is an interstate commodity and it cannot be controlled by intrastate laws or forces. No State has the constabulary sufficient to patrol its borders, and a Congress as howling wet as the present and next one, a Congress that is wet enough to pass the repeal resolution, is too wet to provide the men and the money to enforce the second article of the resolution.

It is all a cunning and completely successful scheme to make prohibition impossible anywhere and at any time. As the Irishman said, "That was the intintion." Farewell then to prohibition, state or local. The wets are now "booted and spurred and ready to ride" and we drys "are saddled and bridled and about to be ridden." But "those whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad!"

TAXATION

By NELLIE WAGNER
Oakland High School Student

What is taxation? Can you answer that question adequately? Do you think you are being taxed justly? Are you paying more than your share of the cost of government? Should taxes be paid aceording to benefits received?

All of these questions arise when you receive your yearly tax bill on your personal property and real estate. If your tax is higher than you think it should be you grumble about it. You say: "There is Farmer Brown who has a new car, ten more acres of ground and several pieces of new machinery, and his taxes are the same as mine."

Now, Mr. Farmer, you who are talking that way, should sit down and do a little thinking. You should take into consideration the kind of buildings on both farms. Maybe your buildings are newer than Farmer Brown's; maybe all your land is under cultivation; maybe your live stock is better; maybe a hard surface road goes past your house; your farm might be an all-round ideal farm, while Farmer Brown's is not so good, but still in your sight both farms are equal in value. Would you trade farms with Farmer Brown? No.

Who would educate our children, run our government, protect your property and you, protect our health and sanitation, build highways and help those in need? Who would do all these things? No one would if we did not shoulder the responsibility ourselves. All of these things are accomplished by you and me. How? Why by paying a tax of some kind. Still you hear people say: "Why, I don't pay one cent of tax."

The man who says that is entirely wrong, because every person who ever lived to buy some product paid a tax, but it was not a direct tax. A direct tax is what hurts people most.

Our own Federal Government and every other government in the entire world performs many services for its citizens. It is very inexpensive to do this, and the only source of money for the government is through taxation, either direct or indirect.

Tax is the charge imposed for support of a government. And who doesn't take pride in their form of government? Yet there are hundreds of poeple who cheat or rob the government yearly. Who are these people? No one knows. Maybe you yourself are cheating the government of its pay. What would happen if your boss deducted, each week, a few dollars or cents from your pay envelope? Why, if you knew it, you would make him pay it, or you would have him arrested for stealing. Just so with our Federal Government. If the government finds out we are cheating it by not paying the tax we are able to pay, we should be arrested, just as we arrested our boss for deducting a few cents each week from our pay envelope.

During the 144 years of our government it has been confronted with two very important matters concerning taxes: How can an equitable distribution of tax load be made? How much shall each person be compelled to pay?

An equal distribution of taxes would be one method of solving the above problems. That is, each and every person would be asked to pay the same amount of taxes regardless of whether he or she is able or not. For taxing purposes this rule would not work, however, since the amount of taxes to be paid would be too heavy for some and not enough for others.

For example, when the Federal, State and local government expenditures amount to ten billion dollars a year, it means that every man, woman and child would be taxed eighty-five dollars a year. This would be extremely heavy. Then a man with a family of four would be required to pay about three hundred and forty dollars per year as taxes, and if he received only a thousand dollars in income yearly he would be paying about two-fifths of his income out for taxes. For the man who was receiving about fifty thousand dollars a year, this tax would mean nothing to him. It would not be enough. Surely, an equal distribution of the burden of taxes could not be the solution to the problem.

Another method of distributing taxes would be according to benefits received. That is, the amount of each person's tax would depend upon the service the government renders him. The people who need the most protection from their government are usually those who cannot pay. Again it is hard to determine the exact benefits any one man receives from his government. Certainly most taxes cannot be levied on the basis of benefits received.

The best method known of tax distribution is based on one's ability to pay. This method is the best method yet and it is used by most all modern democratic governments. The rich pay more than the poor because they are better able to pay. The richer a man is the more he must contribute to the support of his government, even if he does not receive much in return.

The ability to pay is measured two ways: Possession of wealth or of property, and the receipt of income. If the proportional method is applied, his tax will remain the same regardless of the size of his wealth or income. Both methods are used extensively by all modern governments.

Taxes can be classed under direct or indirect taxes, but the most general way is by the different kinds. First, the general property tax. This is the best known tax in general, and it is the oldest form of taxes, reaching way back when wealth consisted mostly of land and domestic animals. This tax is a tax on property rights and wealth irrespective of their nature. For general taxing purposes, wealth and property rights are divided into two general classes—real estate and general property. Real estate consists of land, buildings and improvements on land; personal property is divided into tangible and intangible property. Tangible property consists of movable wealth, such as household furniture, farm machinery, farm animals and jewelry. Intangible property is property rights, such as stocks, bonds, notes, mortgages and contracts.

The general property tax is levied by township, town, city and state authorities. The general property tax is the greatest source of revenue for local and state purposes. Each year all taxable wealth is assessed. The wealth is then valued and the tax collected soon after.

The assessing of this property is a very difficult job. First, there is an inequality of assessment between real estate and personal property. Real estate is visible and immovable and therefore cannot be hidden. Taxes on such property must be paid. Personal property, like household goods, watches, jewelry, stocks and bonds escape taxation because the people do not declare it and let the assessor find it if he can.

Second, assessments are usually made by men who are not qualified and they very often value property too highly or not high enough.

Third, legislators have wrong ideas about wealth and property and this results in double taxation.

Fourth, there is an unjust apportionment of the tax. Since the community shares equal in the tax which the state collects, there is a strong temptation for the community to undervalue taxable property and thus escape some taxation. Such people are cheating their government as well as themselves.

Some of the above difficulties can be overcome by (1) select men who assess property who are trained and educated; (2) double taxation of property and wealth should be eliminated; (3) certain forms of personal property, both tangible and intangible, should be withdrawn, since they escape taxation.

The second kind of tax is the income tax. This tax is the principal tax used by Great Britain, Germany and the United States. Some states, such as New York and Massachusetts, levy an income tax. The Federal income tax applies to all residents and non-residents who receive incomes from within the United States. Two sets of rates are applied, both of which are progressive. One is a "normal tax" and the other is a "surtax." Rates for the normal tax were as follows in 1931: 1½ per cent on the first $4,000 of net income above the exemption; 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and 5 per cent on all incomes above that. The surtax pays no attention to personal exemptions. The first $10,000 of the net income was free. Above that rates ran from 1 per cent to 20 per cent. Corporations pay 12 per ecnt on their net income.

This tax has a number of great advantages: (1) an income is the best measure of taxpaying ability—no income, no tax; (2) This tax is progressive and more easily applied than any other tax system; (3) Each citizen is paying directly to the government; (4) the tax is elastic. Rates can be raised or lowered to make the tax yield fit the needs of the government.

The inheritance is the third kind of tax. This is a tax collected on estates as they pass into the possession of those inheriting.

An income tax is paid from income, but an inheritance tax is paid from capital. The inheritance tax means the leveling down of enormous estates which have been acquired during the life of their possessors. It is easily assessed and collected, but the hardest thing is the decision of the rate at which this tax should be levied. In the United States the inheritance tax rate is lower than in the European countries.

The fourth kind of tax is the tax which is levied on different types of business. This tax is usually levied because it is more business-like. These license taxes apply especially to peddlers, taxicab owners, shop keepers, and pool room owners. In the South these business taxes are very important and the most outstanding source of revenue, while in the North they are of very little importance.

The poll tax is the fifth kind of tax. This tax is a flat tax which some states and local governments levy on everybody regardless of their wealth or income. It is usually two or three dollars per person. In some states it applies only to qualified voters; in some states only to men, and in others to both sexes. This tax is very inexpensive to collect. The income from this tax is little and its collection rather lax and it disregards the ability to pay.

The excise tax is the sixth kind of tax, and is levied on such commodities produced within a country, such as cigars, whiskey, automobiles, gasoline, candy, chewing gum and amusements. Usually the producer pays the tax direct to the government and then places a stamp on the goods to prove he has paid the tax. This tax is levied by the Federal Government only.

This Federal tax had its origin in 1794 when Alexander Hamilton levied a tax on whiskey. After each war the excise tax increases on commodities.

Since 1917 Congress has repealed the so-called nuisance tax: that is, the taxes levied on soft drinks and low priced goods. These kinds of taxes cause a higher cost of living.

The seventh kind of tax is the customs duties tax. These are taxes laid upon certain articles imported into the country. This tax is collected according to number or bulk or value. This tax has a large number of disadvantages: (1) these taxes usually bear heavily upon people who have small incomes rather than those with large incomes; (2) the duties are very uncertain. During a war the need for revenue may be great, but imports may decline and revenues decrease; (3) duties are very inelastic. The tariff cannot be changed frequently to meet the need for revenue because it would have a very bad effect on business.

Now do you think taxes are too high? The amount of indirect taxes should increase while direct taxes decline.

The taxes which hurt people most are the taxes which must be paid directly to the government and this is called a direct tax. A direct tax reduces the income of the one who is taxed, while the indirect tax raises the standard of living and thus lowers the real income of those who use the taxed goods.

Taxes are very unpopular and legislators know it. Therefore, they cling to the old manner of taxation—to indirect taxes and taxes on the rich. Taxes that meet with the least opposition are those that can be hidden in the price of commodities.

Suppose you had no tax to pay. All the extra work done in the community would have to be done free. The education of your children would be very expensive and very few people would be able to secure an education—only those who could afford to pay for it from their private funds. As a result our nation would be backward—similar to the Indian tribes which roamed America.

We would have no outside protection if we paid no taxes. Our trade with other nations would be limited and we would have no real form of government.

Now be thankful you have a tax to pay. All should shoulder their responsibilities instead of imposing upon a few people of the community.

MT. LAKE PARK

Loch Lynn Heights is enjoying quite a building boom these days. Houses are being erected, or soon will be started by John Sisk, C. W. Harris, R. C. Ford, Harry Shaffer, Lee Speicher, Oliver Hardesty and Harry Mickey. We imagine this gives Loch Lynn a greater percentage of building activity than any other town in the State, population considered.

And in addition, she has a red hot municipal election on her hands just now. Echoes of the late nominating meeting of the citizens of the town indicate an independent ticket in the field at the election to be held March 6th.

Well, may the best ticket win. We believe factional differences in the government of a town indicates a healthy interest in its welfare.

Two car loads of cinders are being unloaded and hauled to different sections of Mountain Lake Park for use on the streets and roads. We are advised that two more carloads will be here next week. If judiciously placed it is thought these cinders will put the roads in fairly good condition for the coming spring and summer. It is the hope of the authorities that soon a permanent section may be begun on one of the principal thoroughfares.

The advent of March brought with it a chilling northwest wind, carrying on its wings snow flurries. It can't be long, however, until spring weather will be with us. But don't let an occasional balmy day fool you into laying aside your heavy undies.

It was suggested by one of the town councilmen that it would be a good idea to secure a number of quick growing maple trees and plant them in different sections of the Park. We believe this a slendid suggestion. No doubt many lot owners would take advantage of the opportunity to secure trees at a nominal cost and set them out. As suggested by another member of the council the maples coming in leaf earlier than the oaks would have a tendency to lengthen the season and give the impression, at least, of a much earlier spring. We trust the suggestion will not die aborning.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT BECOMES 32ND PRESIDENT

Takes Oath of Office Administered by Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes at 1:06 P. M.

PARADE FOLLOWS ADDRESS

Heartened by the cheers of many thousands and the hushed expectancy of millions far away, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was ushered to his place as President of the United States at the inaugural ceremonies in Washington at 1:06 P. M., on Saturday, March 4.

He went first to the Church of the Presidents for a period of prayer with members of his cabinet and his family and from there to the Capitol and the oath of responsibility with a brief intervening stop at the White House and a ride up Pennsylvania Avenue beside President Herbert Hoover. Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the Unietd States Supreme Court, administered the oath.

Standing on the east portoco of the Capitol, Mr. Roosevelt solemnly pledged himself to "assume unhesitatingly the leadership of this great army of our people dedicated to a disciplined attack upon our common problems."

John N. Garner took the oath of office as vice-president of the United States at 12:01 o'clock.

Even as the inaugural ceremonies were beginning, the new President was applying his energy to a reconstruction of the banking situation, with a prospect of far-reaching action before his administration was many days old.

As he conferred with his chosen advisers at his hotel suite, Herbert Hoover, a half mile away in the White House, was ending his four troubled years of office. The whole inaugural scene was overcast with a feeling of suspense and tense expectancy, but nearly all of the estimated 150,000 people present were hopeful and their expressions were optimistic.

Following his induction into office and his inaugural address, which is printde on another page of The Republican today, President Roosevelt revlewed a parade many miles in length, lasting until about six o'clock in the evening.

JURORS FIND NICOLA HAS ERRED IN INCOME REPORT

Convicted of Income Tax Evasion Through Wrong Entry

F. F. Nicola, Pittsburgh real estate operator, was found guilty of evasion of $26,394.20 income tax by a jury in the United States district court at Pittsburgh. The jurors had deilberated for almost 23 hours, spending Wednesday night, March 1, under guard of a bailiff. The jurors twice returned to the court room and asked for instructions.

Attorney Joseph A. Richards, representing the defendant, announced that a motion for a new trial would be filed within a few days.

The charge against Nicola is based on a bookkeeping transaction in which he transferred a $101,250 voucher he received from the Miller Printing Machinery Company, of which he was the largest stockholder, to the account of the Point Improvement Company, in which he also was a controlling partner. The vouchers, it was claimed by the Government, should have been charged to Nicola's personal account and should have been added to Nicola's income tax returns.

If the conviction is sustained, the Government will begin a civil suit for the payment of the alleged evaded tax.

Mr. Nicola is the owner of Rock Lodge, on Meadow Mountain, near Bittinger, which is his summer estate.

ARREST OF ALLEGED ARSON GANG MADE BY OFFICIALS

Racket Thought To Have Been Carried On For Several Years —Other Arrests Made

Following several months of investigation here in regard to a number of fires, supposedly of incendiary origin, arrests of three men have been made who are charged with aiding in the burning of property.

Henry Menke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reinhold Menke, of Garrett county, was apprehended at Cassville, West Va., on Monday and after a preliminary hearing, is out on $2,500 bond. Carl Hardesty is in the county jail in default of $1,500 bond, and Elmer Mayle is out under bond of $1,000.

It is alleged that Menke arranges for the burning of various properties, and then receives a part of the insurance money as his payment, while the owner of the property gets the balance. A dwelling burned on the property of Carl Hardesty recently, and the house of Menke's parents was recently consumed by flames. Others are said to be mixed up in the affair, and a thorough investigation is being continued by local authorities.

WANTS STATE BANKS OPEN SAME TIME AS NATIONALS

Maryland Assembly Asks Protection For State Institutions —Proposes Scrip Plan

RELIEF MEASURE PASSED

Annapolis, March 8—A resolution asking Congress to issue additional currency "or circulating medium," and to provide this currency to State and National banks of Maryland at the same time, was passed by the Maryland General Assembly last night.

Presented a draft of the resolution late in the day by E. Brooke Lee, advisor of Governor Ritchie, following conferences with government officials in Washington, the Legislature held a night session in order to approve the petition to Congress. Action in each house was unanimous.

The measure was introduced in the Senate by Chairman Lansdale G. Sasscer (Dem., Prince George's), of the Finance Committee.

Chairman Sasscer then moved that the rules be suspended and the resolution adopted. It was rushed through to the House of Delegates for concurrent action there.

The measure was called up in the House by Delegate James J. Lindsey (Dem., Baltimore county), chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who moved that the rules be suspended and the resolution be adopted. This motion was concurred in and the measure was sent to the Governor.

Relief Measure Passed

Maryland's emergency bank relief measure became a law on Saturday, March 4.

Although amended 18 times by the Senate and 21 times by the House of Delegates, the proposal differed but little from the original draft. The new act makes John J. Gringer, State bank commissioner, a virtual director over all the financial institutions and places all of the banks in technical receivership under his control. Chief among his problems was the task of fixing a withdrawal percentage for each bank.

State Budget Delayed

Further action on the budget measure by the House and Senate committee awaited the preparation of amendments carrying out Governor Ritchie's additional $3,000,000 reduction recommendations.

It was the belief also that the committee would report to the Senate the gasoline tax revenue distribution plan.

AMERICANIZATION OF GARRETT COUNTY

The almost 100 percent Americanization of Garrett county is a mighty bulwark in times of national emergency. Standing erect and firm in their unswerving loyalty, believing in the ultimate triumph of our institutions and in the soundness of the principles on which this government is builded, our citizens met the shock of our National crisis with serious but smiling determination not to be stampeded into a foolish and destructive panic.

It was and is heartening to note the attitude of the business men of Oakland and Garrett county, editors, doctors, lawyers, merchants, bankers, and farmers, and to hear them say, "Oh, we'll come out okay. Our government is sound. We'll just have to do the best we can until the crisis passes."

The banks of Garrett county were outstanding among the institutions of the State, the State depositorics remaining open to serve the public until ordered closed by the State bank commissioners, and the two Oakland National banks remaining open until closed by an order of the President of the United States which closed all banks in all forty-eight states regardless of their size or standing.

Their soundness remains unquestioned. They are officered by capable, efficient, honest men.

Were all the counties of the Nation as truly American, in thought and in blood, as is Garrett county, we could rest secure that though "the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock."

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Take Notice, J. P's.

A former W. V. U. student and campus play-boy, Jarvis Currence, now a justice of the peace in Clarksburg, has a new list of fees to be charged in his court. Andy Gonder and others take notice, please.

For entering suit, issuing summons, subpoenas, swearing not to exceed four witnesses, docketing case—one pig.

For trying ease, entering judgment and satisfaction thereof—one bushel apples.

For issuing order of arrest or committment—one pound of butter.

For abstract of judgment—one gallon of sauerkraut.

For entering stay of execution—three pounds of bacon.

For taking an inquest on a dead body, to be audited and paid by the county—one good heifer or bull calf.

The list concludes— "These prices are subject to change without notice.

That list would go well around here except the sauerkraut. But then, that could be changed to suit the individual justice. Some good Democratic dish, for instance.

Those Who Didn't go to Washington

"Lands sake! Ain't it a glorious day? Wish I'd gone to Washington. Them radio announcers though make you feel like you were there—almost. I hear music. I'll bet it's the Oakland drum and bugle corps. If that announcer would just tell us about what we want to know. Who cares what the people are wearing, and how happy they look. What if John Garner does brush up his high slicker? I don't see why they couldn't say something about the Oakland corps.

"Well, now that everybody has been inducted into office, we ought to hear about the parade. We've heard from the airplanes, from the dome of the capitol, from cars moving down Pennsylvania avenue, and they've got the inaugural address off their chest.

"They've announced the appearance of a snappy drum corps, it must be Oakland. Oh, no, it's Uniontown. If that announcer doesn't stop telling about the people and how they are standing the cold, and sech. If they just knew I had been sitting here all afternoon waiting for Oakland's appearance, without changing position. Just all a-flutter!

"Gosh, it's five-thirty. What! Here comes another drum corps, snappy drum major, bright yellow uniforms and everything. That's us! Just wait till they announce it as Oakland's. Why, the durned idiots, they're signing off—what a broadcast, what a broadcast. It must have been a punk inauguration."

Those Who Went To Washington

After a six-hour ride in a crowded train. "Well, this looks like the street where the parade will pass. It's only 9 o'clock. We ought to be in plenty of time. Wonder if the president's been inaugurated? I couldn't get out of this crowd now if I wanted to. My kingdom for some lunch. What! $1 for a box to sit on? Oh, all right. Officer, officer, why can't I sit out here on the curb?

"Will that parade never come? It's past two o'clock. Here comes a band. There it goes, we're on the wrong street!"

"No, I didn't see anything, I stood in line for five hours, waiting for our section in the parade to move off. Bet the people at home know more about it than we do."

Mike Liller has been granted the championship of the world in a walking contest. Last Saturday morning he walked from Oakland to Washington in six hours. He was assisted by the special train, hut he walked the entire distance. At least, so say all those 80 or 90 who went to the inaugural from here.

I'm through. There is a moratorium on columns and news this week, to say nothing of advertisements. Moratoriums seem to be popular at present.

COMPLETE TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

The text of President Roosevelt's inaugural address follows:

I am certain that my fellow Americans expect that on my induction into the presidency I will address them with a candor and a decision which the present situation in our nation impels.

This is preeminently the time to speak the truth, the whole truth, frankly and boldly. Nor need we shrink from honestly facing conditions in our country today. This great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So first of all let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts—to convert retreat into advance.

Asks Support of Public

In every dark hour of our national life a leadership of frankness and vigor has met with that understanding and support of the people themselves which is essential to victory. I am convinced that you will again give that support to my leadership in these critcal days.

In such a spirit on my part and on yours we face our common difficulties. They concern, thank God, only material things. Values have shrunken to fantastic levels; taxes have risen; our ability to pay has fallen; government of all kinds is faced by serious curtailment of income; the means of exchange are frozen in the currents of trade; the withered leaves of industrial enterprise lie on every side; farmers find no markets for their produce; the savings of many years in thousands of families are gone.

More important, a host of unemployed citizens face the grim problem of existence, and an equally great number toil with little return. Only a foolish optimism can deny the dark realities of the moment.

Yet our distress comes from no failure of substance. We are stricken by no plague of locusts. Compared with the perils which our forefathers conquered because they believed and were not afraid, we have still much to be thankful for. Nature still offers her bounty and human efforts have multiplied it. Plenty is at our doorstep, but a generous use of it languishes in the very sight of the supply.

Rulers of Exchange Assailed

Primarily, this is because the rulers of the exchange of mankind's goods have failed through their own stubbornness and their own incompetence, have admitted their failure and abdicated. Practices of the unscrupulous money changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, reacted by the hearts ahd minds of men.

True, they have tried, but their efforts have been cast in the pattern of an outworn tradition. Faced by failure of credit they have proposed only the lending of more money. Stripped of the lure of profit by which to induce our people to follow their false leadership they have resorted to exhortations, pleading tearfully for restored confidence. They know only the rules of a generation of self-seekers. They have no vision, and when there is no vision the people perish.

The money changers have fled from their high seats in the temple of our civilization. We may now restore that temple to the ancient truths. The measure of the restoration lies in the extent to which we apply social values more noble than mere monetary profit.

Happiness lies not in the mere possession of money; it lies in the joy of achievement, in the thrill of creative effort. The joy and moral stimulation of work no longer must be forgotten in the mad chase of evanescent profits. These dark days will be worth all they cost us if they teach us that our true destiny is not to be ministered unto but to minister to ourselves and to our fellowmen.

Lack of Confidence Justified

Recognition of the falsity of material wealth as the standard of success goes hand in hand with the abandonment of the false belief that public office and high political position are to be valued only by the standards of pride of place and personal profit; and there must be an end to a conduct in banking and in business which too often has given to a sacred trust the likeness of callous and selfish wrong doing. Small wonder that confidence languishes, for it thrives only on honesty, on honor, on the sacredness of obligations, on faithful protection, on unselfish performance; without them it can not live.

Restoration calls, however, not for changes in ethics alone. This nation asks for action, and action now.

Our greatest primary task is to put people to work. This is no unsolvable problem if we face it wisely and courageously. It can be accomplished in part by direct recruting by the government itself, treating the task as we would treat the emergency of a war, but at the same time through this employment accomplishing greatly needed projects to stimulate and reorganize the use of our natural resources.

Hand in hand with this we must frankly recognize the over-balance of population in our industrial centers and, by engaging on a national scale in a redistribution, endeavor to provide a better use of the land for those best fitted for the land.

Advocates Boost In Values

The task can be helped by definite efforts to raise the values of agricultural products and with this the power to purchase the output of our cities. It can be helped by preventing realistically the tragedy of the growing loss through foreclosure, of our small homes and farms. It can be helped by insistanee that the Federal, state and local governments act forthwith on the demand that their cost be drastically reduced. It can be helped by the unifying activitics which today are often scattered, uneconomical and unequal. It can be helped by national planning for and supervision of all forms of transportation and of communications and other utilities which have a definitely public character. There are many ways in which it can be helped, but it can never be helped merely by talking about it. We must act and act quickly.

Finally, in our progress toward a resumption of work we require two safeguards against a return of the evils of the old order; there must be a strict supervision of all banking and credits and investments; there must be an end to speculation with other people's money, and there must be provision for an adequate but sound currency.

These are the lines of attack. I shall presently urge upon a new Congress in special session detailed measures for their fulfillment, and I shall seek the immediate assistance of the several states.

International Trade Secondary

Through this program of action we address ourselves to putting our own national house in order and making income balance outgo. Our international trade relations though vastly important, are in point of time and necessity secondary to the establishment of a sound national economy. I favor as a practical policy the putting of first things first. I shall spare no effort to restore world trade by international economic readjustment, hut the emergency at home can not wait on that accomplishment.

The basic thought that guides these specific means of national recovery is not the insistence, as a first consideration, upon the interdependence of the various elements in all parts of the United States—a recognition of the old and permanently important manifestation of the American spirit of the pioneer. It is the immediate way. It is the strongest assurance that the recovery will endure.

In the field of world policy I would dedicate this nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who resolutely respects himself and because he does so, respects the rights of others—the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors.

People Must Cooperate

If I read the temper of our people correctly we now realize as we have never realized before our interdependence on each other; that we can not merely take but we must give as well, that if we are to go forward we must move as a trained and loyal army willing to sacrifice for the good of a common discipline, because without such discipline no progress is made, no leadership becomes effective. We are, I know, ready and willing to submit our lives and property to such discipline because it makes possible a leadership which aims at a large good. This I propose to offer, pledging that the large purpose will bind upon all as a sacred obligation with a unity of duty hitherto evoked only in time of armed strife.

With this pledge taken, I assume unhesitatingly the leadership of this great army of our people dedicated to a disciplined attack upon our common problems.

Action in this image and to this end is feasible under the form of government which we have inherited from our ancestors. Our Constitution is so simple and practical that it is possible always to meet extraordinary needs by changes in emphasis and arrangement without loss of essential form. That is why our Constitution system has proved itself the most superbly enduring political mechanism the modern world has produced. It has met every stress of vast expansion of territory, of foreign wars, of bitter internal strife, of world relations.

It is to hoped that the normal balance of executive and legislative authority may be wholly adequate to meet the unprecedented task before us. But it may be that an unprecedented demand for undelayed action may call for temporary departure from that normal balance of public procedure.

I am prepared under my Constitutional duty to recommend the measures that a stricken nation in the midst of a stricken world may require. These measures, or such other measures as the Congress may build out of its experience and wisdom, I shall seek, within my Constitutional authority, to bring to speedy adoption.

But in the event that the Congress shall fail to take one of these two courses, and in the event that the national emergency is still critical, I shall not evade the clear course of duty that will then confront me. I shall ask the Congress for the one remaining instrument to meet the crisis—broad executive power to wage a war against the emergency, as great as the power that would be given to me if we were in fact invaded by a foreign foc.

For the trust reposed in me I will return the eourage and the devotion that befit the time. I can do no less.

We face the arduous days that lie before us in the warm courage of national unity; with the clear consciousness of seeking old and precious moral values; with the clean satisfaction that comes from the stern performance of duty by old and young alike. We aim at the assurance of a rounded and permanent national life.

We do not distrust the future essential democracy. The people of the United States have not failed. In their need they have registered a mandate that they want direct vigorous action. They have made me the present instrument of their wishes. In the spirit of the gift I take it.

Loch Lynn Election

Even the bank holiday was for a time forgotten in the heat of the battle of ballots in the municipal election in Loch Lynn Heights, our neighboring town just across the railroad tracks, which was held on Monday.

From the date of the citizens' nominating convention to the closing of the polls on Monday evening, interest was not allowed to lag. Indeed, it was not until the official declaration of the result on Tuesday evening that community thoughts were permitted to stray to matters of national importance. And we are not dead sure that the matter will be allowed to rest with the official declaration.

Mayor Charles E. Hardesty headed the ticket for re-election. His right of succession was contested by Chas. Hutchinson. Reports had been circulated that the latter would not serve if elected. This was denied by posters and the race was on. It resulted in almost a dead heat, for when the final tally was completed the figures showed that Hardesty had received 72 votes and Hutchinson, 70.

Charges are freely made that a few illegal votes were cast, based on the allegation that the voters had not been residents of the town sufficiently long enough to give them the right of franchise under the law of the town. This, however, was freely denied. After a canvass of the votes by the duly constituted authorities Hardesty was declared elected.

Ollie D. Sweitzer, Benjamin Harvey and Buddy Weeks were elected councilmen; Floyd White, collector; Mildred Ford, clerk, and Claude Paugh, bailiff. The judges of election were Lincoln Callis, Frank Moon and Smith Lish.

WOODIN URGES PUBLIC NOT TO GIVE UP FAITH

Failure of Banks To Reopen at Once No Index of Their Instability, Secretary Says

SURVEY TAKES TIME

Washington, March 15—As thousands more of the nation's banks resumed normal operations today, Secretary of the Treasury Woodin appealed to the public not to judge that failure of some to reopen was caused by their instability.

In accordance with President Roosevelt's progressive reopening plan, some banks outside of Federal Reserve and clearing house cities resumed business today. Woodin said reports showed, as on the previous two days, that deposits were exceeding withdrawals, demonstrating confidence on the part of the public.

Licensing of banks, Woodin explained, has taxed the facilities of the treasury and the comptroller general, necessitating some delay in approving applications. He asked the people to be reassured by President Roosevelt's words in his Sunday night radio speech.

Some Delay Inevitable

"Let me make it clear to you that if your bank does not open the first day you are by no means justified in believing that it will not open," the President said. "A bank that opens on one of the subsequent days is in exactly the same status as the bank that opens tomorrow."

Additional licenses are being issued from time to time, Woodin said, adding:

"While every possible effort has been made to act upon all applications delay in some cases has been found to be inevitable.

"In some cases, also, steps are being taken which as soon as completed will make it possible for reopenings to be licensed."

Meanwhile, the treasury was directing its attention to those institutions for which conservators are being appointed pending later opening or reorganization.

"The country's response at the moment when we were just beginning to emerge from the banking difficulties is another fine example of the co-operation of the country in carrying out the Government's financial plans."

Barn Burns at Grantsville; Local Firemen Called to Deer Park

Fire, evidently the result of a bolt of lightning, entirely destroyed a large barn on the farm of Simon Orendorf, near Grantsville, about midnight Tuesday. The Grantsville Fire department was called but was unable to extinguish the flames which had gained too great a headway. The fire followed a bright flash of lightning and sharp clap of thunder, and it is thought this was the cause of the blaze.

Apparently the same stroke of lightning extinguished the electric lights in Grantsville, making it impossible to sound the fire siren. However, the firemen were aroused by use of the telephone. They were able to protect adjoining buildings and in getting the stock out of the barn. All the stock was saved except two pigs and a flock of chickens. All the hay, grain, and farm machinery were burned.

Mr. Orendorf had the barn insured for $1,000.00 and the contents for $650.00 in the Mennonite Insurance company of Lancaster, Pa. He will rebuild as soon as arrangements and plans can be drawn.

The Oakland Fire department was called to Deer Park about 8 o'clock Tuesday night to extinguish a blaze in the home of Mrs. Walter Flanigan. It is thought the fire was caused by a defective flue in a room over the kitchen.

The roof and room above the kitchen were badly damaged but by the prompt arrival of the Oakland department and the formation of a bucket brigade, which kept the booster tank on the truck running at full capacity, the building was saved.

GARRETT COUNTY GIVEN A TASTE OF THE ELEMENTS

Experiences Unusual Weather During Week—Three Inches Rain

Snow, high winds, thunder showers, and cold weather have combined during the past week to give Oakland and Garrett county one of the most unusual periods in their history for several years.

The snow and cold of last Friday lessened to make a fairly moderate week-end. This was followed by a heavy rain on Monday, a clear and warm day on Tuesday, with thunder showers Tuesday night, and snow on Wednesday.

Since Monday morning there has been three inches of rainfall which sent up the streams and rivers to the high-water stage, with danger of a flood Tuesday night about midnight. Reports from the Youghiogheny power house at Sines show that Deep Creek lake has raised 1.8 feet since Monday, gathering in one and two-thirds billion gallons of water. The lake, however, is ten feet below crest, due to heavy withdrawals last summer and autumn. This body of water, when full, is fifteen miles long, with a shore line of 75 miles.

FIREMEN DOWN HI SCHOOL IN FAST GAME, 37 TO 28

McComas and Rice High Scorers for Respective Teams

Oakland Firemen won their thirteenth game of the season Tuesday night when they defeated the High school cagers 37 to 28, on the local court.

High school led at half time 16 to 14, due mainly to the foul shooting of Joe Rice who caged 6 out of 7 attempts at the free throw line. Two goals in quick succession in the beginning of the second half gave them a six-point lead, but the firemen staged a rally which gave them a six-point lead. Throughout the last quarter the lead was increased. McComas was banished on personal fouls in the last quarter and with 45 seconds remaining the fourth personal was called on Hanst, but as no substitutes were available he was allowed to continue.

Referee Getty called 12 fouls on High school and 18 on the Firemen. The Firemen scored 7 out of 12, while the High school scored 8 out of 18. In field goals the Firemen scored 15, as compared to 10 for High school. Rice was high point man for High school with 16 points, while McComas, with 12 points, led Firemen scoring. In the preliminary the Oakland High girls defeated the faculty team.

The lineup and summary:

Firemen—37		High School—28

National Boys' Week is from April 29 to May 6, and a program will be worked out for celebration here.

The observance originated in 1920 and since that time has grown to such an extent that it is now observed generally throughout the world. Rev. C. A. Shilke and Ralph Weber are the two other Rotary members on the Boys' Work committee, who will assist Mr. Smith in arranging the details.

GOVERNMENT TO OPEN C. M. T. CAMPS ON JULY 11

Month of Health, Education and Patriotism Being Prepared for 4,600 Boys in this Area

COUNTY'S QUOTA IS TEN

A month of health, education, and patriotism is being prepared for 4,600 boys from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia, who take the opportunity to enroll in the 1933 Citizens' Military Training camps, to be held from July 11 to August 9. Garrett county's quota is ten, and according to a notice from the recruiting headquarters in Baltimore, seven have already made application.

Reports from all counties show that quotas are being filled to overflowing, due, it is stated, to economic conditions and the desire of those between 17 and 24 to get a month's vacation with all expenses paid.

F. E. Rathbun, superintendent of schools, is chairman of the procurement agency for Garrett county and will furnish application blanks to anyone who desires them. Applicants from Garrett county will go to Fort George G. Meade, situated between Baltimore and Washington, where 2,100 boys from Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, and parts of Pennsylvania will be stationed. A boy must be at least 17 years old, and physically fit before having his application accepted.

The object of these training camps is to bring together annually for a month's training, the best representative young American citizens from all sections; to give them the basis of military instruction and physical and moral development that will fit them to become influential leaders in their respective communities in time of peace, and leaders for national defense in time of war; to inculcate a strong patriotism and a wholesale respect for discipline and obedience to constituted authority; above all, to teach the young men of this generation their serious duties, responsibilities and obligations to home and country.

There is work to be done in these camps, a bulletin states, drills, field maneuvers, marches, organized athletics, school and indoor instruction, but there will also be wholesome and elevating recreation.

All who desire to attend camp are requested to get their blanks filled in and mailed as it is expected there will be a waiting list long before camp opens. Allegany county has already oversubscribed its quota of 34.

Free Public Library Clears $52 from Benefit Play

The Garrett County Free public library cleared $52, as a result of the home talent play presented last Thursday and Friday evenings in the Oakland High School auditorium. Approximately $164 was received in admissions and advertisements on the program, and after expenses were paid, the library received half of the balance.

The show was directed by Miss Jettie Denmark, of the New England Producing Company. Following the Friday performance, a party was held by members of the cast at the William-James hotel. About 40 attended.

Prior to the benefit play the Public Library was in debt $76.00 up to March 15, but has been able to reduce the indebtedness at present to $23. It is hoped by the library committee that this sum will be met by donations within the next week or two.

The Library acknowledges gifts of books from the Mothers' Circle, Thornton Deffinbaugh, Jack Hinebaugh, Helen Gauer, Laural Whipkey and Prentiss Porter.

$5,000 In Gold Brought Out Of Hiding Here

Anti-hoarding regulations put into effect during the past week or ten days by the Treasury Department at Washington have been responsible for bringing about $5,000 in gold out of hiding in Oakland and vicinity, according to a report of the three Oakland banks.

Some of this has been in small amounts, while some of it has been in amounts as high as $900.

It was explained hy W. D. Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury, that the anti-hoarding regulations would not be so drastic as to include a person having a small sum of gold in his or her possession. Rather he is looking for the persons who have large sums and he says "we are going to get it."

BROWNING, SHAFFER AND GLOTFELTY ARE ELECTED

New Councilmen Chosen at City Election On Monday; All Candidates Pull Good Vote

VOTING IS FAIRLY HEAVY

Edward A. Shaffer, J. W. Glotfelty and William R. Browning were elected councilmen to serve for two-year term, at the municipal election held Monday. J. W. Whorton and E. I. Baumgartner were the two unsuccessful candidates.

Miss Frances Hamill was elected as treasurer, for a one-year term, and was unopposed.

A total of 454 votes were east, which was considered fairly heavy, in view of the fact that no issues were involved and that no mayor was being chosen. E. A. Shaffer was high man on the ticket with 350 votes, while J. W. Glotfelty was second with 268. The official tabulation is as follows:

For Councilmen

E. I. Baumgartner	207

Frances C. Hamill	333

The candidates were chosen at a citizens' meeting held in the City Hall last Friday evening at 7:15. As has been the custom during the past several years, a municipal ticket was nominated, with no distinction made between political parties.

The new council will organize at the April meeting. The holdover members are R. C. McComas, R. T. Thayer, and Walter Hardesty, while the mayor, Grover C. Stemple, has another year to serve. The outgoing members of the council are George Kerins, Cheston Browning, and J. W. Whorton.

ALLEGANY TRIMS LOCALS IN HARD BATTLE, 37-18

Oakland Holds W. M. I. Champs on Even Terms in First Half

A fighting quintet from Oakland High School, recently crowned scholastic champions of Garrett county, held the basketball team of Allegany High School on even terms for the first half at Cumberland last Friday night, but a 14-point rally in the third and fourth periods by Allegany enabled last year's State champions to begin their march toward another scholastic championship. The final score was 37 to 18.

Oakland's zone defense proved troublesome to the undefeated champions of the W. M. I. league during the first two quarters. In the first period Peddicord caged a goal, but Allegany soon tied and then took the lead. Oakland trailed 6-5 at the quarter and 17 to 12 at the half. Peddicord and Rice accounted for 11 of the 18 points.

Joe Ervin, P. A. L. referee, called only two fouls on Oakland, while he inflicted nine on Allegany High. Allegany meets the Montgomery county champions next week.

AID FOR COUNTY IDLE IS SOUGHT BY WELFARE BODY

Urges Ritchie and General Assembly to Relieve "Utter Destitution" of Many People

LIST OTHER LEGISLATION

Annapolis, March 15—A resolution calling on Governor Ritchie and the General Assembly to make available funds and set up administrative machinery to cooperate with the counties "to relieve the utter destitution and want resulting from unemployment" was adopted here today at a meeting of welfare representatives from fourteen of the State's political subdivisions.

The meeting was held in the old Senate chamber of the State House and was presided over by Dr. Jacob W. Bird, president of the Maryland Children's Aid Society. Those representing the counties were in many instances affiliated with private welfare groups as well as Children's Aid Society units.

Specific Reports Made

Specific reports from the fourteen counties, said the resolution, which will be forwarded to the Governor and General Assembly immediately, show there are inadequate public and private resources in these units to "meet even starvation needs at the present time."

"It was further shown," the resolution continues, "that the condition of child welfare in many of the counties was demoralized; that in at least one county a proposal was being considered to place groups of dependent children in the county almshouse."

The present board of state aid and charities as now organized, it asserted, neither has the authority, funds nor administrative machinery to meet the emergency situation.

Minimum Standard Asked

Since the "present economic situation would seem to be of a protracted nature," it continues, "and the Legislature does not convene again until 1935, the General Assembly and the Governor are requested to set up the machinery for cooperation with the counties in meeting their problems; to establish minimum standards of relief for the care of families and children in distress; to cooperate with existing agencies wherever available and to develop welfare agencies in counties where none is organized."

Representatives of Allegany county at the meeting reported that $20,000 had been subscribed for relief work for this year and that the needs

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Dangerous Enemy.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Curse of Intemperance.

I. The Effect of Alcohol Upon the Individual (Prov. 23:29-32).

1. Woes of those who indulge in wine (vv. 29, 30). No more graphic description of the evils of the wine-bibber has ever been given. It portrays in the most impressive manner the miseries that mark the drunkard's life. There are six of them.

a. Awful pain, causing them to cry out.

b. Bitter remorse. Many are the expressions of bitter regret upon the lips of the drunkard.

c. Strife and quarreling. The drunken man is always ready for a fight. He takes offense as well as gives it.

d. Complaining. The winebibber complains of everything, ill luck, broken fortune, ruined health, loss of friends, and even of God.

e. Wounds without cause. He has many wounds which might have been avoided—from fights in which a sober man would not have been engaged and from accidents which result from intoxication.

f. Redness of eyes, the bloodshot eyes of the tippler.

2. The drunkard's bitter end (vv. 32-35).

a. Acute miseries (v. 32.) "It biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder." Strong drink, like the poison of the serpent, permeates the whole being, causing suffering and death.

b. Perversion of the moral senses (v. 33.) This excitement causes the eyes to behold strange things, fantastic images which are produced on the brain of the drunkard. The heart also utters perverse things.

c. He is insensible to danger. The drunkard is foolhardy in his acts.

d. He is insensible to pain (v. 35). He has many bruises and wounds for which he cannot account.

e. He is in abject bondage (v. 35). He is a bond slave to the ways of sin.

f. Hell at last, for no drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven (I Cor. 6:10).

3. The attitude enjoined (v. 31). It is "look not at it." Total abstinence is the only safe attitude toward strong drink.

II. Effect of Alcohol Upon the Nation (Isa. 28:1-4).

Just as indulgence in intoxicating drinks brings ruin to the individual, so it destroys the nation. God pronounced judgment upon Israel because of the sin of drunkenness (v. 1). Samaria was the capital city, therefore stands for the nation. Drunkenness seems to have been a national sin at this time (Isa. 5:11, 12; 7:5; Amos 2:6, 8, 12; 4:1; 6:6). Samaria's position was an enviable one; the whole nation was proud of her. The crown of pride whose beauty had been so marked was now fading through the blighting effects of drunkenness. Even as ruin came upon Israel, so will God visit judgment upon America for its drunkenness. The instrument by which the punishment of Israel was effected was the Assyrian (v. 2). The imagery of this verse shows that destruction was sudden, swift, and irresistible.

III. The Effect of Alcohol Upon National Rulers (Daniel 5:1-4).

Belshazzar's impious feast is an outstanding example of the effect of alcohol upon rulers. Note—

1. The attendants at the feast (vv. 1, 2). There were present Belshazzar the king, his wife and concubines, and a thousand of his lords.

2. Their behavior (vv. 3, 4).

a. They drank wine.

b. They committed sacrilege. They drank wine out of sacred vessels which had been taken out of the Temple, the house of God at Jerusalem.

c. They worshiped idols. They prayed to gods of gold and silver, of brass, or iron, wood, and stone, and challenged the rule of the living God. With the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment will come not only national disgrace but the loss of that high standard which has as a rule characterized American rulership from the President to the humblest civil officer. One shrinks from the contemplation of what awaits our nation in its determination to legalize the intoxicating cup.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Having recovered from last week's performance as an Irish waiter, I'll try to fill a column with thick-headed Dutch chatter. How they ever got a Hanst to impersonate an O'Toole is beyond me. How the memories did go back to one of the greatest high school shows ever put on here, "The Royal Cut-Up," starring Doc Bummy, Duck Weber, Jim Willison, Mrs. Kitty Helbig, Beryl Davis, Scoop himself, and others whom I have forgotten for the present. The only play in which I ever acted the villian, and was I "tuff"?

One of the most pressing problems after the financial institutions reopen, is how the parents will fill up baby's bank to where it was B. M. (before the moratorium).

Talk about American independence. Here's food for thought! Last week they began giving out potatoes to the needy. The potatoes were grown last summer on the relief plot at Loch Lynn and had been stored since the harvest. One of Oakland's needy was given his sack full. He walked into a confectionery store and the clerk asked him if he wanted anything. "No," he said. "I'm waitin' for my old woman to take a look at these and see if they'll be all right for her to use." Nothing like getting the best. The relief committee should have had them graded and sorted before giving them out.

And now, children, can anyone tell me how many presidents we have had, counting the present one? Well, not if you go by the newspapers and magazines. First one place Roosevelt is 31st president, and then presto, he is 32nd. The mixup evidently is caused by Grover Cleveland, who had two terms, but not in succession. So figure it out for yourself. Here's the list: George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren, William Henry Harrison, John Tyler, James K. Polk, Zachary Taylor, Millard Filmore, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Abraham Lincoln, Andrew Johnson, Ulysses S. Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Chester A. Arthur, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, Grover Cleveland, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Imagine my surprise Sunday afternoon, when the other section of the Scoop household returned from the apple country of Martinsburg, and me such a lover of apples too!

"I brought you a present," she chirped showing me a bushel basket all covered up. Grimes Golden or Northern Spy, I thought, and showed my appreciation as any husband would. It was neither kind, I found upon investigation—It had a black nose, black ears, four legs, and a prominent whine, and sometime it will be known as a German police.

And was his face red the first time I smacked him and put him out on the back porch!

Oakland's election went off quietly, quite a contrast to Loch Lynn's warfare of about a week ago. They had the militia out during the Loch Lynn strife, and although the city is listed around 200, children and all, 142 votes were cast for mayor. Another Tammany Hall investigation might be needed.

J. "Jever go a-fishin'" Willliam Glotfelty, William R. "Runs from Women" Browning, and Edward A. "Ask me another" Shaffer, got on the Oakland council. There's very apt to be some bachelor legislation this year, for protection against the so-called weaker sex. But it's sex of one and half a dozen of the other, if you ask me.

Mr. Dern should make a good secretary of war. His last name has been the start of more than one argument. Now if his first name was just Gosh or Gol.

Let the middle west have its high winds and tornadoes, California its earthquakes, the Mississippi valley its floods, and most of the country its droughts, but give me Garrett county, with a snow storm now and then, maybe a thunder shower in March, but with plenty of water, and pleasant days, and a lot of other things and articles too numerous to mention. Terms of sale, cash; no property to be removed until terms are complied with.

Did somebody mention money? Now let me see, what is money? Seems that I dimly recall having some such article at one time. But I'll have to resort to Noah Webster and his 452,000 words.

A regular gyp game, it seems, is being played by a number of garages along the national highway in the vicinity of Hancock. While one stops to get warm or a bite to eat, a garageman looks over your car and comes in and tells you your transmission is hot and needs grease. Very few doubt his word or take the trouble to feel the transmission.

Of course, it makes a difference when you tell him you just had it greased before leaving home. But not many of them think of that until after they leave and they have been reamed of several dollars.

It is said they have been arrested several times for this offense, but it continues to thrive.

Jig-saw puzzles continue to hold their own with about 200 or more being sold each week in Oakland alone. Besides this they are traded around among friends and neighbors, making it hard to estimate just how many waste their time and labor to accomplish nothing. If you want to start figuring, count me in as having wasted at least six hours and 31 minutes during the past week-end.

STEAM ROADS ARE BEING PUSHED BY ELECTRICITY

Each Year Sees Electric Locomotive Push Steam Driven Giants Off the Rails

B. & O. WAS PIONEER

Despite economic conditions electric locomotives, year by year, are pushing additional steam-driven giants of the rails into the discard. Recently the Pennsylvania railroad announced the completion of electrification of its lines between New York and Philadelphia, and Premier Mussolini inaugurated a new electric service on the 80-mile line linking Viterbo with Rome, Italy.

"Steam locomotives received one of their first assaults from electric locomotives on main line tracks in 1895, when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad chose to use electric power instead of steam through the Baltimore tunnel; and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad introduced electric locomotives in New England on its line between Pemberton, Massachusetts," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

U. S. Has Electrified Trackage

"These lines, however, aggregating only about 22 miles of track, were insignificant compared with the thousands of miles of rails on which steam locomotives still held sway. For the next five years railroad electrification dozed. It was aroused in 1900 when the State Railways of France decided to make use of electricity by equipping some of its lines near Paris.

"The next year saw the electrification of New York and New Haven railroad tracks linking Providence, Rhode Island, with Fall River, Massachusetts, and a part of the Paris, Lyons and Mediterrancan lines near St. Gervais, France.

"Since 1902, the steam locomotive has had serious competition. Today, 31 countries have electrified about 24,000 miles of track. If all these tracks were concentrated in the United States they would form eight separate railways across the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"About one-fourth of the rails for this super-electric railroad would be supplied by electric railroads of this country. One complete transcontinental track would come from Switzerland, for the diminutive mountain republic largely depends upon electricity for its railroad transportation. More than 2,000 miles each would belong to France, German and Italian railroads.

"The larger portion of the remaining tracks would be supplied by the United Kingdom, Sweden, Spain, Austria, The Netherleands, Chile, Brazil, Argentina, Australia, Canada, Mexico, India and Japan; while such countries as Algeria, Morocco, Egypt, Netherland, India, China and Cuba would supply twenty-five or more miles each. The smallest contribution would be made by Bolivia, which has only nine miles of electrified track.

Switzerland Leads Europe

Switzerland, with about 3,000 miles of electrically-operated track, outranks its European neighbors. India leads the Asiatic countries in railroad electrification. The Indian tracks would reach from New York beyond Cincinnati, while those of Japan, its nearest Asiatic competitor, would fall short by slightly less than 100 miles. Chile, leader of the South American countries in electrically-equipped trackage, has a mile of track for every day in the year, while Brazil, which ranks second, has about 318 miles.

"While the busiest railroad electrification in the United States is concentrated on lines entering New York City—including the Pennsylvania, the Lackawanna, the New York Central, the Long Island and the Staten Island Railroads—Chicago alone has an extensive network of electrified suburban lines. The Pennsylvania Railroad main line is electrified also between Philadelphia and Paoli, 25 miles to the west. The Pennsylvania expects shortly to complete electrification of its four-track main line between New York and Washington, 258 miles. North America's longest stretch of main line electrification is in the Rockies on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific—441 miles.

"Perhaps the strangest contrast afforded passengers on an electrified railroad is to found in Japan, where silent, smokeless electric trains speed through rice fields in which native farmers plough with oxen and wooden plows, a method unchanged for more than a millenium."

PLANT CHINOOK SALMON IN GARRETT COUNTY LAKE

Bureau of Fisheries To Experiment With Western Fish

A news article which has gained some publicity throughout the eastern section of the country concerning the planting of Chinook salmon in Deep Creek Lake in Garrett county has brought a smile to those who are acquainted with the topography of the country in which this body of water is situated, the manner of its waters finding an outlet and the impossibility of the fish finding their way back in the spring after an ablasence of four years when they spawn.

The article, which is publlshed herewith, states that the waters of the lake empty into the upper Potomac, whereas they find their way into the Ohio. The only method by which the water from the lake is expelled is through the massive turbines at the power house of the Youghiogheny-Hydro Electric Company. The fish that have gone through these turbines are expelled in pieces as large as one's hand, and this is also the only entrance afforded from live water, hence salmon returning after the lapse of four years (if any do return) will find their way barred at the power house. If it were possible for the experiment to be made successful by the Department of Fisheries it would indeed be a boon to Garrett county, but in the face of the obstacles anumerated above it would be a physical impossibility.

The article referred to is dated at Washington, D. C., and reads as follows:

"Residents of States along the Atlantic seaboard are interested in an experiment about to be made by the United States Bureau of Fisheries and the Maryland Conservasion Commission.

"Some 2,000 Chinook salmon from the Columbia River, 2,300 miles to the northwest, which were hatched in the aquarium of Washington's new Department of Commerce building, will be placed in Deep Creek Lake, Maryland, whose waters drain into the upper Potomac River. The fish are being planted with the hope that they will find their way to salt water and return, in four years, to spawn

"The Great Falls of the Potomac above Washington will probably offer no barrier to the returning fish, and will give residents of the East a chance to see one of the most spectaculer acrobatic feats in Nature if the salmon attempt to hurdle it as they do waterfalls in Pacific coast streams.

Five Distinct Pacific Species

"The Pacific salmons are the most valuable fishes not only of the United States, but also of the entire Western Hemisphere, and, with the single exception of the sea herrings, are commercially the leading fishes of the world," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"The Pacific salmons constitute a distinct group, closely resembling the Atlantic salmon, but separated by marked peculiarities. There are five distinct species of the Pacific salmon which differ strikingly in size, color, habits, distribution, food value, and economic importance. All of the species occur on the California coast, ranging from San Francisco Bay (or a little farther south) to Alaska, crossing to Siberia and reaching southward into Kamchatka, while three of them extend to Japan.

"The largest of the genus, and the most magnificent of all salmons, is the Chinook, also known as the Quinnat, King, Spring, or Tyee salmon. It has an average weight of nearly 25 pounds in the Columbia, and is often caught weighing 40 to 60 pounds. Occasional examples of over 100 pounds are taken. While found from California to China, it attains its greatest abundance in the Sacramento, Columbia, Yukon and other large North American streams.

Sockeye in Demand for Canning

"The species called Blueback salmon on the Columbia, Sockeye on Puget Sound, and Redfish or Red salmon in Alaska, averages only five pounds in weight and never exceeds 12. It attains greatest abundance in the Columbia, the Fraser, and in various streams throughout Alaska. Its meat is rich in quality and deep red in color, and the fish is therefore in great demand for canning.

"The Silver or Coho salmon, generally found in coastal streams, averages six pounds in weight and rarely exceeds 25 or 30. The smallest species is the Humpback, so called from the well-marked nuchal hump developed by the male in fall. The extremes of weight for mature examples are 3 and 11 pounds, with four pounds as the average. The region of greatest abundance is Puget Sound to southeast Alaska. It has been transplanted to streams in Maine and seems to be firmly established.

"The remaining species, the Dog or Chum salmon, averages eight pounds in weight. It is generally distributed and abundant, but owing to the poor quality of the flesh, is the least important of the group.

"After spending most of their lives at sea, accumulating fat, and storing energy, the salmons move inshore and ascend the streams. After once beginning their upward journey, they take no food.

"The Chinook salmon begins to run in spring and pushes its way to the headwaters of the larger streams. In the Columbia basin the species distributes itself over 90,000 square miles of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. In the Snake River and the Yukon river the spawning grounds lie 2,000 miles by water from the sea.

"Whether salmon travel in the streams 2,000 miles or 200 feet to reach their spawning grounds, and regardless of their physical condition at the time they arrive at the particular places required for the proper development of eggs and young, all die shortly after spawning.

"Why this is the case is one of Nature's mysteries. It has its parallel in some other fishes; in the may-fly, which perishes after a few hours' existence, and in the annual plants. We can only say of such that they have served their purpose and are no longer needed. The death habit of the salmons was doubtless developed to prevent the overstocking of streams, the exhaustion of the food supply of the young while in fresh water, and the consequent danger of the wiping out of the species by mere excess of numbers."

PULLING TOGETHER

We are being urged to "pull together" to save our country and we, Republicans and Democrats, are pulling together to this end.

But why this sudden spurt of patriotism?

Why didn't the people and the Congress get behind Mr. Hoover when he was making superhuman efforts against terrific odds?

And now President Roosevelt will reap where Mr. Hoover has sown.

Of course we shall support the President, particularly those of us who voted for Mr. Hoover, because loyalty is paramount, particularly in a crisis.

If Congress had helped Mr. Hoover as now it is united in helping Mr. Roosevelt, we should not be in the midst of such a crisis, but well on the way to recovery.

Congress turned down every effort Mr. Hoover made to save the country—it passed the veterans' bonus over Mr. Hoover's veto, gave Mr. Hoover power to consolidate the federal offices at Washington, only to take it away from him afterward; would not listen to a sales tax, as Secretary Mills suggested to balance the budget—and here we are!

No one is more to blame than the Democrats and Insurgents in Congress and the country knows it. If the Congress really had had the interests of the country at heart they would have pulled together under any President, especially President Hoover, who gave all there was in him to hold the Nation together.

Country first, then party.

But did Mr. Hoover ever get a break of any kind all these three years past?

It was the Democrats who broke down all harriers and played party first—never mind the country.

But—we are for whatever President Roosevelt wants insofar as it tends towards settling the problems confronting the country.

But—with all this shouting and pleading, why wasn't this started when we had a competent leader—Herbert Hoover?

And, again, it is to be noted the way the Republican party is responding to the patriotic call to bring prosperity back proves that it still is the Grand Old Party working for the good of its country.

The "Let's Pull Together" idea is a good one, and it is called a part of "the new deal."

Well and good.

We, as loyal Americans, will stand by; also as loyal Republicans, we will be neded.

It has happened before.

But it is to be noted that while due credit will not be denied President Roosevelt for his part, at present, to do what he can to restore prosperity, it is well to remember Mr. Hoover, who was balked, by Democrats, for political reasons, which was to be expected, and alas, by members of his own party, who should have supported their President and pulled together to do it, but who joined the Democrats and frustrated his every effort.

CLOSING THE BANKS

The swift and decisive action of President Roosevelt in declaring a banking holiday for the nation was undoubtedly essential and came none too soon. There has been a gradual lessening of confidence for some time, and this finally created a condition of panic. The lack of confidence was accelerated by the publication of the loans made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to banks of the country. Following this, the closing of the banks of Michigan brought about a spread of the panic until it had engulfed the whole nation. The bank holiday was necessary to give the people a chance to recover the normal mental processes, to protect the banks—even though most of them were sound and liquid—and to prevent a raid on our gold stocks.

There was speculation against the dollar abroad and the withdrawal of foreign gold holdings from America. This in itself would have caused no real damage. But the panicky conditions had so frightened numbers of Americans that they were beginning to withdraw gold for hoarding and sooner or later our immense stock of gold would have been depleted had the panic continued.

Aside, however, from the necessity for swift action to save the banking situation, the holiday will be of benefit in another way. It has already changed the psychology of the American people. We have come to realize that we are all "in the same boat," that part of America cannot be safe and secure unless it is all secure. The smugness of the citizen who thought he was a little wiser than his neighbor is gone. It is much easier for the average citizen to bear his financial troubles if he sees the same conditions existent all around him. Maybe this is selfishness, but it is human nature nevertheless. And so now that we have all come up against the bank wall together there is a greater spirit of determination in America to see the thing through and win the battle against the depression, than there has been at any time since the stock market crash of 1929.

Indeed, there is something akin to the war spirit arising in the nation. People are beginning to buckle on their swords, figuratively speaking, and getting ready to go out and battle against depression. All they need now is to be told what to do. There is grim determination on every hand just as there was in the fateful days of 1917 and 1918. But best of all, in addition to grim determination, there is a grim sense of humor. Peoplle in general are joking about their plight as they go about seeking a way to remedy it. That is the real American spirit. It has won many times in the past and it will win again, if our people are led along a straight path that runs toward stable finance.

COOPERATION AND CONFIDENCE IS URGENT NEED OF THE HOUR.

The present situation is a challenge to the manhood and the womanhood of America. It calls for courage, self-control, fair-mindedness and, above all things, it calls for confidence in the integrity of our fellow-man and the ability of the best brains in the country to deal successfully with a difficult problem.

The people of this and every other small community in the United States may well congratulate themselves that the perplexing conditions are national instead of local. Indeed, in a large sense, it is a world condition we are called upon to meet and, because of the vast extent of the present financial disturbance, we are assured of the assistance of the ablest men not only of this but of other civilized countries in straightening out the snarl in the money situation in order that business may resume its normal course. The present difficulties did not originate in Maryland. In fact, business was moving along in a normal way here when conditions became acute in some of the largest and most wealthy states in the Union, notably Michigan. The bankers of Maryland did what the conservative bankers in every other American state did under the circumstances. They obeyed the mandate of the law and closed when ordered to do so.

The difficulties of carrying on our everyday affairs without banking facilities brings home to us in a forcible manner the valuable services which banks render to the public. Under the conditions of modern life banks have become a necessity. No civilized society can exist and domestic life cannot properly function without some kind of agency to handle the currency and the credits which the necessities of trade bring into existence.

This nation has met and successfully overcome many great tests and it will do so in the present instance. Nothing will help more to bring about normal conditions than calmness, courage and unshaken faith in the integrity of the men who are handling the banking affairs of the country. Every person can help by co-operating with the efforts which are being made all the way from Washington down to the smallest rural community to straighten out the kinks and permit business to proceed. This has always happened in the United States and will happen again.

No matter what storms American business has encountered in the past, it has always passed swiftly and successfully through to the calm waters of better times. We can all help to hasten the coming of better times by standing loyally behind those who have the task of re-adjustment in hand.

ONE WAY TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE

There is only one way to deal with national hysteria such as precipitated the temporary breakdown of the banks. It is to offset it by calm reason, official guaranties and practicable methods. What the people most of all need just now is elementary and competent instruction in the banking business. They should be told by men and officials in whom they have confidence why it is that all the banks cannot at the same time pay all their depositors. Their money is safe, if safely invested, but cannot be turned over on demand without crippling business and defeating the very purposes for which banks are created and chartered. If enough people could be persuaded of the folly, both personal and public, of rushing to the banks to draw out all their money, we might see a mass movement, as has been witnessed at other times of financial panic, to take back funds to the banks for safekeeping and for beneficial public use. Root out senseless fear and restore confidence, and the thing is done.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

A telephone line, 24 miles long, was to be constructed connecting Oakland with Brookside, Eglon, Aurora, and other points in Preston county, West Va. Arrangements were also being made to erect a line, 40 miles long, connecting Oakland with McHenry, Friendsville, Accident, Grantsville, and other towns in Garrett county, Md.

Henry Winterberg, going into a wooded area near Grantsville, to secure stringers for the purpose of supporting a sidewalk in the town of Grantsville, was struck by a falling limb of a tree which inflicted injuries causing his death.

The town of Rowlesburg, twenty miles west of Oakland, was scourged by an epidemic of diphtheria, a number of deaths resulting.

There were one hundred and fifteen public schools in the county with an enrollment of 4,000 children. The late William Hinebaugh was the superintendent of instruction and although physically handicapped he announced that he had officially visited and had examined all of the schools.

W. S. Dunlap, son of a Lutheran minister of Oakland, purchased the necessary machinery with which to equip a steam laundry in Oakland.

A railway time table showed that seven passenger trains ran east and west daily through Oakland.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

W. A. Gonder, C. Bowie Johnson and Albert Ashby were elected members of the Town Council over James D. Hamill, James Hinebaugh and William Lawton.

William Wright, of Westernport, was knocked from a Baltimore and Ohio engine when the locomotive was passing beneath the Third street bridge in Oakland.

Ice harvest returns at Mountain Lake Park showed a net profit of $1,200 in cash, besides the seventeen hundred tons of ice stored in the ice house at the Park.

New furniture and fixtures for the local postoffie arrived from the factory.

A choir of forty-six persons were engaged in rehearsing a cantata entitled "The New Jerusalem," to be presented in St. Paul's M. E. church on March 20.

A new survey was to be made of the proposed Friendsville road as a result of a visit of W. M. Lowdermilk and F. G. Fox to the State Commission in Baltimore.

Flames discovered on the roof of the Frantz Hotel were extinguished after doing slight damage.

The Board of County Commissioners purchased a steam road roller.

The first meeting of the parents of Oakland High School was held. Mr. F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent, Rev. A. B. Riker and Scott T. Jones made addresses.

Poem By Mrs. R. E. Weber, of Oakland, Broadcast Over KDKA

It is impossible to give personal attention to all the requests that have been made for a copy of a poem, written by Mrs. Ralph E. Weber, of Oakland, and read from radio Station KDKA one day last week. Therefore Mrs. Weber takes this method of complying with these requests and also thanking the many friends thus interested.

AN OLD-FASHIONED GARDEN

Behind the wall of memory,
Is a garden I cannot forget,
From the roses' wondrous beauty
To dainty sprays of mignonette.

The spicy pink's sweet fragrance
That borders the garden way,
And the glorious lilies' splendor
An old fashioned garden, you say.

It is only a fancy or momory, I know.
But there, without eare, one may freely go.
And amid the peaceful old fashioned beauty
Breathe new life for a busy day's duty.

I see the perfection of each dainty flower,
As it spreads its faint sweetness each quiet hour,
And I wonder, if my life too will be such
That the Great Gardner will feel, I have done as much?

Can I shake off tears, as flowers the dew?
Scatter sweet thot's and smile, when I'm blue?
As each stands in its place, with humble beauty
May I too learn such patience, and be faithful to duty.

Aside I have set my wild ambition,
In the glamourous world of fame, to have stepped,
May I be content in my homely condition
To share comfort with those who have wept.

Yes I know it is a bit old fashioned,
To pause in this busy today,
But the lesson, learned in such quiet reflection.
Will so abundantly brighten the way.

Homemakers Study Shoes and Hose; Continue Economy Program

"What are the most economical and healthful kinds of shoes and hose to buy for my family?" Members of the Homemakers Clubs are finding an answer to this question by attending the monthly meetings of their groups.

Local merchants have aided the clubs by lending different types of shoes for demonstrations at the meetings. Emphasis will be placed on those kinds which are the best for the money and which will best guard the health of the family.

This meeting is a part of the year's program, "Mrs. Consumer and Her Buying Standards." Some of the questions which the clubs have already considered are, "Is it more economical to buy ready-made or to make clothes at home?" "How can I care for my clothes to get the longest possible wear from them" and "Which materials will give the best service?"

Using left-over clothing, remodeling problems and coat construction are other features of this economy program which is a part of the service offered by the Maryland University Extension division in cooperation with the Garrett County Extension Service.

If you make it easy for people to see your merchandise you make it easy for them to buy—customers like to browse around more when store lighting is good. Of course your fixtures, display windows and show cases are modern. But without good lighting people will not be attracted to the things you have to sell. They will not come into your store unless you invite them. Check your lighting to see if it's doing as much for you as it should.

Disproportion between farm taxes in Maryland and the income of farmers has grown so in the last few years, according to figures compiled by the University of Maryland, that agriculturalists in some parts of the State were assessed more than half their incomes for taxes for 1931.

Figures showing the ratio of taxes to income were made public in Bulletin No. 339, of the Agricultural Experiment Station. They were compiled by Dr. S. H. DeVault, department head of agricultural economics, and W. P. Walker, an assistant.

Measured In Produce

It took only forty-eight bushels of wheat in 1911 to pay the average farm property tax bill in Maryland. In 1931 it required 195 bushels. In 1911 only 218 gallons of milk would pay the taxes, but in 1931 to took 429 gallons. Likewise, only 207 dozen eggs were needed in 1911, as compared with 488 dozen in 1931.

In 1929 farmers of the Piedmont area had an average farm income of $1,595 after paying a tax bill of $184 per farm, but in 1931 they had only $366 left as farm income after paying taxes.

"Taxes are consuming a larger per cent of the farm income," the bulletin stated, "leaving less for the purchase of other goods and services."

30 Per Cent Acreage Cut Required For Crop Loans

Reduction of 30 percent in the acreage planted to cash crops will be required this year of farmers who procure crop production loans. The Secretary's regulatians, however, stipulate that acreage reduction will not be required of farmers who, in 1933, plant no more than 40 acres of wheat; 20 acres of corn; 2½ acres of truck crops; 8 acres of potatoes. This information was given out by Lester D. Johnson, field inspector for the crop loans, who was here last week.

Farmers seeking crop production loans this year are advised to obtain application blanks and copies of the regulations in their home counties, rather than from Washington. Field agents of the Crop Production Loan Office are now designating representatives in each farming county to inform prospective borrowers of the requirements governing loans and to distribute application blanks and other necessary forms. These agents will assist farmers in filling out applications, without charge.

Accompanying the required 30 per cent reduction in acreage planted to cash crops, above the established minimum, the 1933 regulations limit the amount available to any farmer to $300.

In addition to the reduction required this year in acreage of cash crops, borrowers must agree to plant a garden for home use and a sufficient acreage of feed crops to supply feed for their livestock.

Loans will be made, the regulations further declare, "to farmers who are unable to obtain loans for crop production during the year 1933 from other sources. These loans may be made to such individuals as are found by the Secretary of Agriculture to have acreage fit for seeding and who are without means to purchase the supplies necessary for crop production during the year 1933.

No loan will be made to any applicant who has a means of livelihood other than farming. Loans will not be made for purchase of machinery or livestock, or for the payment of taxes, debts, or interest or debts. Loans will not be made for the feeding of livestock other than workstock used in crop production.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The Book of Joshua tells the story of the conquest of Canaan. It is a record of high endeavor and noble achievement, the fruitage of reasonable self-confidence and sublime faith in the promises of God.

Joshua entered Canaan by direct, divine command, recorded in the second verse of the first chapter of this book, and was couched in the following language: "Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel. Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses."

The Book of Joshua was probably written by this first great Judge and leader of the Hebrews after their entrance into Canaan. Its key thought is summed up in the first chapter, verses 8 and 9, and may be simply stated as "The Rule of Success in the Battle of Life."

Canaan, the land of promise, so long desired by Israel, was a tiny country, probably 180 miles long by 40 wide. It was at the crossroads of the ancient world. Caravans from Egypt, Ninevah, Babylon, Persia, Greece, Rome, passed through this land. Here the civilizations of antiquity met and influenced each other. But the religion of Israel was the dynamic that finally changed the course of all ancient civilizations.

Among the neighbor nations the Phoeneeians, immediately to the north of Canaan, whose principal cities were Tyre and Sidon, are of very great interest to us because of their contributions to universal knowledge and our common human welfare. They were a peaccable people, inclined to commerce, being indeed the outstanding traders and navigators of their time. Perhaps their noblest achievement was the invention of the alphabet. From Phoenecia the alphabet was carried to Greece, thence to Rome, thence to the Germans and so on to the world.

Joshua was of the tribe of Ephraim. He stood by Moses on Sinai, and was one of the twelve spies sent to bring a report of the land before entrance was attempted. He showed the spirit of Caleb, who, in spite of the gigantic size and ferocious aspect of the Zamzumims said: "Let us go up and possess the land, for we are well able to overcame it." Joshua was a great warrior and understood the necessity and value of military discipline; nevertheless he relied upon prayer and trusted God for victory. It is a commonly accepted truism among us that a country's battles are won by youth. However, Joshua was 80 years old when he took command and for a period of thirty years governed the land, consolidating the territory reduced by him, and establishing the worship of Jehovah. He began his work in the land by causing the people to enter into a solemn covenant that they would not serve idols. He closed his task of seven years by renewing the covenant. Almost a quarter of a century was occupied in settling the tribes and establishing their hold upon the land.

The command to destroy the Canaanites may seem at first blush a cruel and needless sacrifice; but when we consider the eternal values involved in this conquest, and realize the power of an evil environment, there could have been no other course to save Israel from idolatry. If the Jews became idolatrous, then God might just as well not have a nation. If the Canaanites remained in the land Israel would be sure to absorb their idolatrous practices.

While thinking of Joshua and his conquest of Canaan it may be interesting to glance at the religious life of the Canaanites, which was brought immediately into conflict with the worship of Jehovah.

In common with most of the heathen nations of antiquity, the inhabitants of Canaan believed in two divinities, male and female, representing the active and the passive forces of nature, and often symbolized by the sun and the moon, or gold and silver. We should not be so greatly shocked that the heathen mind, impinged upon by the contrary and opposing forces of nature, and having no light of revelation to guide them in their search for a great first cause, should posit the generative principles in personal form, deified, and worshipped as the gods of their lands.

Thus we find the Canaanites actually sun-worshippers, adorning the sun god, Baal, to whom they offered human sacrifices. He was the supreme male deity of the Promised Land.

Ashtaroth was the principal female divinity, and was identical with Istitar of the Assyrians and Babylonians, sometimes referred to as the "Queen of the Heavens," or the personalization of the moon. She became the Astarte of the Greeks and the Venus or Aphrodite of the Romans, and also Diana of the Ephesians. She it was in whose defense Demetrius the silver smith at Ephesus raised a mob in opposition to Paul and his teachings, the result of which threatened to destroy the business of making silver shrines for the goddess.

Ashtaroth had a larger place in the loyalty of the ancient world than any other god or goddess. Her temples were places of shameless, indecent indulgence, gross immoralities that could never be tolerated under the dispensation of the Mosaic law.

The Baalim mentioned in the Old Testament were images of Baal, and the Ashcrah, images of Ashtaroth. Baal and Ashtaroth made more trouble for Israel than any other gods; they remained the gods of the native population much of the time till the Babylonian captivity, and were the gods of the Syrians till the time of Constantine.

Baal was worshipped by human sacrifice, a custom observed by the Ammorites and Moabites in their worship of Molach, and later by the Druids in England.

Moloch, the chief divinity of the Moabites and the Ammorites, was a fire god. He was represented by an image of brass, hollow within, so made that the brazen body might be a receptacle for little children who were burned in this horrible fashion as a sacrifice to the god, while the worshippers danced around, beating drums to drown the cries of the dying child. He who said: "O, Liberty, Equality, Fraternity, what crimes are committed in thy name," might well have added a fourth—Religion!

It was inevitable that the power of the Kings of the North and the Kings of the South should be broken by the onslaughts of Joshua. for the spiritual background of the Canaanites was like sinking sand, while Joshua could truly say, "The Lord is my rock and my fortress, whom shall I fear; the Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?"

Our readers who care to read some choice selections from this book would do well to select Joshua 1:1-9, and Joshua's farewell address, Chapters 23:1-16 and 24:1-27.

First Speaker of the House A Lutheran Minister

With the elevation, or at least the transfer, of Speaker John Garner to the Vice-Presidency, and the election of a new Speaker of the House of Representatives, there has been naturally a quickened interest in the matter of the national speakership. It is interesting to know that the first speaker of the House of Representatives was a minister of the Gospel. In an interesting story published in the current issue of the National Republic, under the caption, "First Speaker Was a Preacher," Mr. H. O. Bishop says, in part:

"Ever since last November, when Speaker John N. Garner was elected Vice-President of the United States, the people of the country have been unusually interested in that important cog in the governmental machinery known as the Speaker of the House. Some great men have held that job during the intervening years since George Washington was selected as our first President and started our government in motion under the Constitution framed by an aggregation of able men presided over by Washington.

"But if your wife or your boy or girl or your next-door neighbor asked you the name of the first Speaker of the House what would you tell them? I doubt if more than one person out of a thousand could give his name and tell anything about his activities during those struggling days of our history.

"His name was Frederick Augustus Conrad Muhlenberg. He was a Lutheran preacher, his father was a Lutheran preacher, and his two brothers were Lutheran preachers.

"Preacher Muhlelnberg was not only the first speaker of the House of Representatives but he also was the third speaker. Years previously he had twice been elected speaker of the legislature of Pennsylvania. His father, Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, was that sturdy old pioneer who emigrated to America from Germany and planted and nurtured the Lutheran Church in the colonies. He was a remarkably able and useful man in his day. He was known throughout the country. He rode everywhere on horseback preaching and praying, establishing churches in the new settlements, comforting the sick, and encouraging those who were homesick and dishcartened. He was a rare man. His study was not located in a steam-heated house—it was in the great outdoors under the trees, where he mixed with human beings and understood them. And what a wife he had! Never in the world could their boys have developed into the great men they were had it not been for the fine things she taught them as they leaned against her knees or sat in her lap. That blessed soul was a builder of men of character.

"The first Speaker of the House was born in Pennsylvania in 1750, when George Washington, a young man of eighteen, was making important history in Virginia. There being no suitable educational institutions in America for the training of young men as Lutheran preachers, the father sent him and his two brothers across the ocean to Germany to be educated. He was ordained in the ministry in 1770, at the early age of twenty, and for some time served as an assistant to his father. During the hot and exciting days preceding and early in the Revolution—1773 to 1776— he was pastor of Christ German Lutheran Church in New York City, one of the most important churches in the country. Being the sort of preacher who had convictions about the affairs of his country he, quite naturally, aroused the ire of the British on both sides of the ocean. On several occasions he was driven out of New York and ehased from one place to another. But this didn't phase him at all. Wherever he went he continued to preach the gospel of the Lord and the righteousness of the Americsn Revolution. The people were so proud of him and so highly respected his patriotism and ability that they elected him to the Continental Congress, where he served with rare distinction. As soon as the Constitution of the United States was ratified his people immediately elected him to Congress where he loomed up as one of the big men of America and his fellow-members made him Speaker. He lived until 1801, outliving his friend, President Washington, by two years."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

President Roosevelt's inaugural address has received general acclaim from the press and public regardless of politics. While general in tone, and offering no specific suggestions for legislation, it is expected naturally that such suggestions will follow in due course of time. The one thing which impressed the country most of all was the spirit of leadership exhibited, the chief executive giving the impression that he is not afraid to take hold of the steering wheel and assume the responsibility of driving the national machine on the long and arduous road out of the depression.

To the legion of Americans in both parties who believe that the future of America lies within our own borders and not in sailing the uncharted seas of international diplomacy and intrigue, there was much in President Roosevelt's address to be commended. In part the President said:

"Through this program of action we address ourselves to putting our own national house in order and making income balance outgo. Our international trade relations, though vastly important, are in point of time and necessity secondary to the establishment of a sound national economy. I favor as a practical policy the putting of first things first. I shall spare no effort to restore world trade by international economic readjustment, but the emergency at home cannot wait on that accomplishment.

"The basic thought that guides these specific means of national recovery in not narrowly nationalistic. It is the insistence as a first consideration, upon the interdependence of the various elements in and parts of the United States—a recognition of the old and permanently important manifestation of the American spirit of the pioneer. It is the way to recovery. It is the immediate way. It is the strongest assurance that the recovery will endure."

Here is sound doctrine which every American can approve regardlless of politics. It is fundamentally true that there can be no world recovery until there is recovery in the United States. And what the people of our own country are interested in primarily is the recovery of the United States. This can only be done, as the President points out, by doing the first things first. This is another way of saying that we must first put our own house in order. When this is done the task of reviving world trade and the strengthening of the world financial structure will be found much easier than now seems possible. The United States furnishes the biggest market in the world. Ninety per cent of its wants are satisfied by home production. It is therefore essential that we restore our own finances and our domestic trade first.

When this is done, and it can be done, when the winds of depression have blown themselves out, the demand for goods in the United States will stimulate not only our own industries but the industries of the entire world. For it is to be remembered that, despite the ery about our protective tariff, just about half of the goods which enter the United States come in duty free. That a turn of prosperity here will stimulate our demand for foreign goods, especially those in the luxury and semi-luxury classes, goes almost without saying.

And this restoration at home can only be brought about by national measures. It will not follow trading on the war debts, and it will not be the sequence of economic conferences abroad. It will come through reconstruction at home, in Washington, in New York, in Chicago, and in San Francisco. This is the point to be remembered. In promising that he will do the first things first, President Roosevelt has given us a real word of assurance.

MARCH A BAD MONTH FOR SICKNESS, REPORTS SHOW

5672 Cases Reported to State During March, 1932

A glance through the reports of the State Department of Health will show that there are "good" months and "bad" ones, so far as sickness from reportable diseases and death are concerned. March has a particularly bad reputation. So has January, especially during an influenza year. On the other hand, September, August and June are the months when the least sickness is reported.

The records show that in 1930 and again in 1932, March had the greatest amount of sickness from reportable diseases and the largest number of deaths of any month during either year. It also was the "bad" month of 1931 for deaths. January had that distinction in 1929 as to both sickness and deaths, and in 1931, it had the highest number of cases of notifiable diseases reported. Influenza was prevalent, both years.

There were 5,672 cases of sickness from notifiable diseases, reported to the State Department of Health during March of 1932, or approximately one seventh of the total reported during the entire year, and 2,165 deaths or about one tenth of the total reported during the twelve months.

Speaking of seasonal sickness, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said: "Nearly all of the 'catching' diseases have a certain seasonal prevalence. For example, typhoid fever and digestive ailments among young children are more likely to occur during the summer than during the winter months, though all of them may occur at any time. The so-called children's diseases usually flare up in the fall soon after the schools open and continue thruout the fall and winter months. The respiratory diseases — the diseases that effect the air passages, such as colds, influenza, bronchitis and pneumonia, are especially prevalent during the winter months.

"Over fifty diseases, all of them communicable, that is 'catching,' are on the reportable, or notifiable list. The list includes such diseases as influenza, pneumonia, searlet fever, diphtheria, mumps, chicken pox, typhoid fever, tuberculosis as well as other diseases that occur less frequently. Physicians attending persons ill with such ailments are expected to report their occurrence to the nearest health officer or the State Department of Health, so that State and county health officers, in turn, may take whatever steps are necessary to check the spread of the diseases.

"The months that have a bad record for sickness are those during which we may expect uncertain or unfavorable weather. March belongs in this class. We can't alter the weather but we can do everything in our power to keep well, and to strengthen our powers of resistance to disease. This year, in particular, to offset the underlying anxiety and concern, we need to take every possible precaution to keep in good physical condition and to carry on to the very best of our ability."

The Fable of How to Be One

By GEORGE ADE

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ONCE there were two Side Kicks named Zebulon and Elijah, both of whom are now beginning to show Engine Wear and loosening of the Rivets. Zebulon is regarded as an overwhelming Success, and Elijah is voted a terrible Flop, and to understand the Why of these Verdicts, all you have to do is to run over the Scenarios of their Life Dramas and do a little Character Reading.

Zeb was always large for his Age and very slow, especially above the Shoulder-Blades, so he acquired a Rep for being dignified and cautious.

Lije was quick on the Trigger and could see through any Proposition in two Shakes and answer any Question right off the Reel, so all of the Dumb-Bells, constituting 99.4 of the entire Population, bated him for his Cocksureness and were always hoping that he would stub his Toe and fall down and break his Leg.

Zeb had spent all his Life in one Congressional District, conserving the Property which his Wife inherited, and telling the Natives every few Minutes that they are Nature's Noblemen and snow-white Patriots, and they eat it up.

Getting By on Very Little.

Lije has been all over the Map, spending his Coin on Railway Fare and Gambling Enterprises connected with new and hopeful Towns. He is wise to every Turn in the Road and his got the Number of every Species of False Alarm, Tight-Wad and Lunkhead. He has cultivated a Contempt for all of the Whispering Conservatives who wear Arctic Overshoes and never let go of Two Bits unless they see something worth Four Bits. When he gets back home he builds a Fire under Sleepy Hollow and tells the Residents that they are simply a lot of Warts on the Cuticle of the Twentieth Century, the Result being that he is just as populnr as Poison.

If you were to lock Zebulon and Elijah in a Room together and give each one of them a Set of Questions relating to American History, Current Events, Political Economy, Psychic Phenomena, Farming Geography and Sporting Data, it is probable that Lije would give Correct Replies to Everything while Zeb would compromise by saying that this Broad Domain, sanctified by the Blood of our Fathers, must ever be kept inviolate against Foreign Influences and European Alliances.

If you asked Zebulon in a Hurry, he couldn't give you his Street Address or tell what size Hat he wears, yet Zebulon is in Congress. Why? Because, to get into Congress, one does not have to pass any Civil Service Examination.

You wouldn't believe, sitting where you are now, this beautiful Morning, surrounded by Steam Heat, that there was any benighted Region in the World where a large but decorative Blimp, containing nothing but Artificial Gas, could get by on Whiskers, a wide soft Hat, the Clergyman's tie, a starched Vest, a Prince Albert Suit with a Sheet-Iron Finish, and a few Chest Notes trained to give Expression to all of those Applesauce Platitudes which were in Style up to the Days of Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

It is a safe 1,000 to 1 Bet that Zebulon never has said Anything which will be sealed up in the Memory of his Countrymen and Preserved for Posterity.

A Ponderous Pipe-Organ.

On the other Hand, this Lije is a wise-cracking Whiz, with a side-hold on the Anglo-Saxon Tongue and a Philosopher's Point of View and the Gift of Originality. If he has no Friends, it is because he digs up the unwelcome Truth and spreads it over the Landscape, while Zebulon always tells the Mush-Tops exactly what they want to hear, so what a Nice Feller he is to be sure. And yet the Copy-Books tell us that Knowledge is Power.

Zebulon never figured anything out in his life, because the Wheels in his Gearing do not connect at all, but he just happened to take advantage of the Supreme Truth that One who wishes to stand Ace High with the Public must appeal to the Eye without regard to the Understanding.

For proof of this interesting Fact, we have only to check up on Hollywood, and any good Beach in Florida.

If a Movie Star can get $18 a second for having ruby-red Lips and beautiful Belledonna Eyes, after being lost in the Desert for Days and Days, why should He or She be compelled to know the Multiplication Table?

And the one-piece Bathing Suit, improperly filled can give Cards and Spades to Culture, Refinement and Nobility of Character.

Zebulon has always been Great in the same way that the Redwood Trees, Niagara Falls and the Washington Monument are entitled to respectful Attention. Architecturally, he has been so impressive that no one ever cared a Darn about the Contents of the massive Work of Art.

A Speed Demon Who Doesn't Get There.

Zeb can take a third-rate Commonplace and make it sound like part of the President's message to Congress. He is a Pipe Organ and Lije is a Piccolo, out of tune.

Yes, it is better to have a Cavalry Moustache and a Saint Bernard Voice than to fathom the Mysteries of Science or explore the Beauties of Literature. Every time that Zeb repeats something which he just read in the Indianapolis Paper, all the Bystanders shake their Heads and admit that the Geezer sure is Deep.

The only Approach to real Wisdom that Zeb has shown is in keeping the Trap closed for Days at a time. He has a positive Genius for long and eloquent Bursts of Silence.

While this Vesuvius of Statesmanship is merely smoldering instead of Spouting, he is still majestic, awe-inspiring and suggestive of an immense Reserve Power.

Always the Brow is furrowed like a Wash-Board, and those who timidly gaze up at the Giant in repose know that Zebulon is meditating. Which is true. He is trying to decide whether to go up to the House and partake of Ham and Eggs or drift over to the Bon Ton Cafeteria and order an Oyster Stew. Zeb figures carefully on every momentous Issue until he knows he is right.

Lije, as a single-handed worker, is a Ball of Fire and a Demon for Speed. Zeb has learned, by consistent Avoidance of Dangerous Responsibilities, to let his Associates saw all of the Wood, and take all of the Risks, In his Political Maneuvers, Legal Battles and Business Transactions he permits his humble Henchmen to wield the Pick and Shovel while he provides the Scenic Background. Then, if anybody pulls a Boner, he is there with a Bushel of Regrets and a complete Alibi. In all of his Career he never got into such a tight Corner that he couldn't pass the Buck. Proving that a Celebrity may be an Intellectual Lightweight and yet have some useful Animal Instincts.

Zebulon is a positive Wow when it comes to delivering an Address of Welcome. One does not have to know anything in order to hand out a few well-chose Words of Greeting. In fact, any Speaker who is loaded up with Facts and an elementary Sense of Humor probably could not make good in serving all of that hot Hokum and Gravy to a bunch of Kloodles wearing Badges.

Lije believes in bawling out the Boobs and Zeb has made it a Rule to massage them with perfumed Ointment. So Lije is trying to get a job as Traveling Salesman and Zeb is having his Portrait painted by a City Artist, and after the Thing is done the Federated Clubs are going to buy it and hang it in the Public Library between Washington and Lincoln, but Zeb will have a larger and more gilded Frame than those accorded the other two Eminent Americans.

MORAL—There are a lot of Things some Folks won't believe until they go to Washington and sit in the Gallery.

Preserving of the life of telephone poles and other timber exposed to the elements is receiving the earnest attention of engineers and scientists of the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Millions of poles are used by telephone and telegraph companies. Because of the scarcity of suitable timber for this purpose, it is essential that the life of poles be lengthened wherever possible. One of the purposes of these experts is the development of preservatives which will bring this about. The results obtained could also well apply to fence posts, exposed piling, and similar timber supports.

The field laboratories work is being carried on at Madison, Wis., where about 500 pole stubs are being tested. These stubs represent about twenty varieties of treatment. Data covering periods of exposure up to five years have been obtained, according to Robert E. Waterman, writing in the Bell Laboratories Record. Indications resulting from records obtained, Mr. Waterman states, show that a well-chosen creosote is the best available preservative for the purpose used, but it has been revealed that there are many opportunities for further perfecting creosoting practices.

Few people know, according to Mr. Waterman that the rotting of wood, although promoted by moisture and warmth, is caused exclusively by the actions of organisms of the fungus type which use the wood as food. Yet it is this fact which determines the means of wood preservation. Treatment must be introduced into wood in the form of fungicide which will remain there for decades in spite of exposure to sun, wind, rain and soil moisture. This must be done at a cost so moderate that the extension of the life of the wood is economically profitable.

Creosoted timber has acquired an excellent reputation and is often accepted by construction engineers as the last word in durability. At the beginning of the creosoting industry, creosote was so cheap and abundant, and the possible extension of life of wood under favorable circumstances was so great, that few questioned what kind of creosote should be used and how much.

New wood preservatives are constantly coming on the market, and creosote is changing is character. Creosote is a by-product of the carbonization of coal. The kind of coal tar available depends on the changes in practice from year to year which are found to improve the yield, quality and cost.

would be more than $40,000. The social agencies, it was said, already are in debt to the extent of $10,000 and the only relief being dispensed now is in the form of Red Cross flour.

Baltimore county reported it had available at the beginning of the year $72,000 from a 5-cent levy on its tax rate and $36,000 from the Community Fund, but thnt the amount would not be sufficient for the year.

927 Families Aided

The relief budget of Montgomery county, according to its representative in the meeting, has reached a peak at $60,000, of which $25,000 was subscribed by the county commissioners. The county has 927 families on welfare.

Howard county is spending $3.44 a week for the relief of an average family of five, those attending the meeting were told.

In Wicomico county a community fund raises normally $13,000 to meet relief needs, but this year's total reached only $9,000 and the county will not be able to carry on the work without outside assistance, its representative at the meeting said.

Most of the counties divide their relief budgets for the year into twelve-month appropriations and reach the average to be expended per family by dividing the number of cases to be met into the monthly appropriation. it was brought out during the session.

Governor Ritchie announced that he would meet today with the House and Senate majority and minority leaders to map out a legislative program for the remainder of the session. The means of expediting four major pieces of legislation will be discussed at the meeting, including the budget bill, the administration's plan re-allocating gasoline tax receipts, beer legislation to provide for licensing of beer establishments concurrently with the passage by Congress of modification of the eighteenth amendment, and legislation setting up the machinery for calling a state convention to act on repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

MT. LAKE PARK

A little bird, perhaps the robin, for he is a nosey fellow, has circulated the report that there are some places in Mt. Lake Park where those in the know may purchase almost any quantity of moonshine. This may not be true. Again it may. If true their continuance does not add anything to the reputation, dignity, or fair name of the Park. In the face of the effort now being made to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, there seems to be a disposition on the part of citizens in all parts of the country, to overlook violations of the law of this nature. But until the amendment is repealed these unlawful places should be suppressed. The citizenry of this community is made up, to a very large extent, of law-abiding and law-respecting persons, and it should not be understood that this is a haven of refuge, because of scattered population and residents, for those who desire to deal in contraband. We do not know where these speakeasies are, who runs them, or whether they do actually exist, but reports seem rather persistent. It may be that "fools enter where angels fear to tread," but we have complied with a request to take a shot at this evil.

Even the fishing worms were fooled by the bright sunshine of Tuesday and the thunder storm that night. Under the snow which fell Wednesday morning, the pathways were literally alive with the wriggling fish bait. The robin redbreast and other birds were in their glory and seemed to think that the depression was lifted.

The chicken thieves seem to have transferred their activities across the B. and O. During the past week at least three chicken coops were raided and between thirty and forty birds lifted from their roosts and ownership transferred without valuable consideration or due process of law. And the light-fingered boys were discriminating, for only the best of the flocks were taken—mostly layers. Well, Mt. Lake can now bask in the reflected glory of Loch Lynn.

We'll say this for Mayor Utterback. In the distribution of cinders for the roads he or the council are not discriminating in his favor. One look at the road leading past his home will prove this.

Bert Falkenstine is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hartman, of Tunnelton, W. Va.

Friday evening at 7:30 at the Aid Hall in Loch Lynnn, the men of the U. B. church will have charge of a musical program. At the close refreshments will be on sale. This is an annual event.

Mrs. M. L. Sisk has returned to her home in Loch Lynn after spending several weeks in Rowlesburg, W. Va., where Mr. Sisk is employed.

Miss Beatrice Clary, of Hagerstown, is spending several days with her mother, Mrs. Alma Bell.

TELEPHONE AIDS IN IMPROVED FARMING

G. W. Dobbins using the telephone.

On the farm, the man with the telephone supplements the man with the hoe.

Improved farming methods with the greater use of machinery and modera appliances have beca clearly brought out by the recent census. Cooperative marketing, according to R. L. Tomblea la the Bell Telephone Quarterly, is on the increase, with the selling of farm products through the cooperativo system, exceeding the purchasing of farm supplies by a similar practice. According to the recent census, farm products of nearly $900,000,000 were sold by cooperative methods, whereas purchase of farm supplies through cooperativo chaaaels amounted to only $125,000,000.

Direct evidence shows that there has beca a material betterment la living coaditions on farms, resulting from a more widespread adoptioa of modern mechanical conveniences. Ia an exhaustive study of the receat chaages la agriculture, Mr. Tomblen finds that substantial progress in the use of machlaery has been made ia all sectioas of the eouatry in the last decade. Not of the least importaace, he says, is the use of the telephone for social purposes ia rural areas, while the farmer's marketing problems require efficieat service for commualcatioa, as well as for traasportation.

With the increase of standardized grades for agricultural products aad with the speedlag up of the distribution processes, the greater importance of the telephone for toll as well as for local usage in connection with efficient marketing of farm products will become more and more apparent, Mr. Tomblea states. Constaat cooperatioa between the telephone ladustry and the farmer in worklag progressively toward further extensioa of telephone service on farms is essential to meet adequately the peculiar requiremeats of the farm market.

CHARGE TO GRAND JURORS IS DELIVERED BY JUDGE

A. A. Doub States Duties of Inquisitorial Body and What is Expected of Members

WILL PROBE MANY CASES

Monday morning the March term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county convened with Judge A. A. Doub on the bench, who delivered the charge to the grand jury. Ralph T. Thayer is foreman. Many violations and alleged violations are being probed by the members of the body.

The judge's address follows:

Gentlemen:

When you came here this morning you were not the grand jury of Garrett County. You are now the Grand Jury of Garrett County for the March term of this court. The reason is that you have just taken upon yourselves an oath—the oath provided for by the laws of this state, by which you became, after your selection, the Grand Jury of this county.

Twice every year the grand jury is summoned to assist this court in the administration of the law and that has been going on now, ever since the creation of Garrett County, in order to assist in the maintenance and support of the law of this county, and as I sat here and heard the oath administered I wondered whether you and I and all of us fully appreciated what was going on. The first sentence of the clerk was, "In the presence of Almighty God, do you solemnly promise and declare . . ." and I wondered if we fully appreciated that there are certain presumptions upon which that oath is based. First, the existence of Almighty God; second, His presence here; and third, that there must be and is a reward for duty well discharged or some punishment for wrong doing, or for duty neglected and not properly discharged. I ask of you, therefore, that you consider well the solemnity of the obligation which you have assumed. I sometimes wonder whether, if there is any failure in criminal justice, if there is any failure in observance and enforcement of the law, whether it is not due in large part to the failure upon the part of the people fully to realize and be conscious of the matter to which I have just called your attention. There seems to have arisen in modern times a feeling of indifference to religion and to the existence of Almighty God; there seems to have grown up recently a feeling that we must take everything on a material basis, and as a result of that we have been inclined to pursue the material to the neglect of the things that are spiritual and more important.

You are called here to assist in the enforcement of the law, but it must be remembered that the state cannot exist merely through attempts at enforcement of the law. There must be

Flying Kites Near Wires Is Dangerous

March winds and the arrival of spring have conspired to start many boys out flying kites, warning has been issued of the danger which is entailed when kites come in contact with electric wires. Many serious accidents have occurred in the past where boys played too close to electric wires and it is hoped mishaps in this section may be avoided this year.

In a desire to eliminate unnecessary accident, officials of the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company urge parents to warn their boys of dangers incident to flying kites near electric wires, and will appreciate the cooperation of the general public in warning boys engaged in this youthful sport under hazardous circumstances.

CONTROL OF PLANT LICE BEING SOUGHT BY TESTS

Thought To Have Materially Affected Pea Crop in County

In an attempt to bring about some satisfactory method of control for aphids, or plant lice, monthly tests are being conducted in Garrett county under the direction of the entomology department of the University of Maryland, in cooperation with the Mt. Airy Canning company.

In each test conducted since last October numerous aphids have been found, according to John H. Carter, county agent. The aphids are thought to be the cause of serious injury to the pea crops here.

Aphids, or plant lice, which often do serious injury to the plants they infest, have a curious life history which Dr. P. W. Mason of the Bureau of Entomology describes in the 1928 yearbook of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"If we examine a branch of a tree or other plant which is infested," says Doctor Mason, "we will see the aphids in most species grouped together in colonies, usually either on the under side of a leaf or along a twig. They may be greenish, brownish, black or of other color, depending on the species, or even covered with a mealy powder or long waxlike filaments.

"These insects have a very unusual life history; one differing from those of almost all other insects. The egg is laid in the fall of the year, usually on the bark of the twig. With the coming of warm weather in the spring this egg hatches into what is known as the stem mother. There are no males until the next fall. The stem mother gives birth to living young, without the necessity of fertilization. These young are all females, and, when mature, give birth to other living young. This continues throughout the summer, there being numerous generations. In each generation there are usually some which are winged and others which are wingless, each form being fully mature. As the spring advances the number of winged forms increses, until, in the case of many species, they fly away to an entirely different kind of plant. Plants so chosen are known as summer hosts; on them new colonies are started, and there may be several generations on them before the return migration to the winter host. On the latter the true sexes which have been produced mate and the eggs are laid.

"Thus we see that there are several forms of aphids, such as the stem mother, the wingless viviparous female, the winged viviparous female, the male, and the egg-lying female. These may vary considerably from each other in appearance and have often been described as distinct species."

REPORT OF MARCH TERM GRAND JURY SUBMITTED

Fifty-six Witnesses and Forty-eight Indictments Returned By Judicial Body

INSPECT PUBLIC RECORDS

Yesterday afternoon shortly before five o'clock the March grand jury to the Circuit Court for Garrett county submitted its report and was discharged from further service at this time by Judge Doub.

From Monday until the recess of the court announced by Judge Doub yesterday afternoon, practically no business was transacted aside from the hearing of motions by attorneys and trying two or three civil appeal cases.

The grand jury report is as follows:

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland:

The grand jury for the March Term, 1933, of the Circuit Court for Garrett County hereby submits its report as follows:

We have had before us and have examined fifty-six witnesses and have found forty-eight presentments and forty-eight indictments.

Following the very impressive charge delivered to the grand jury by the presiding judge, the Honorable Albert A. Doub, we have carefully considered the evidence that was brought before us and have gone into all matters which were brought to our attention and have returned indictments where the evidence warranted.

We have made an inspection of the Court House, both interior and exterior and find the offices neatly kept and the books and records in good condition.

We have also examined the sheriff's residence and jail and wish to especially commend the Sheriff for the splendid condition in which they are kept.

We are filing herewith a separate report in the nature of recommendations to the County Commissioners calling to their attention various items which demand immediate attention.

We desire to call special attention to the splendid effort that is being put forth by the officers in the enforcement of the law, and also wish to thank the State's Attorney, Walter W. Dawson, for the cooperation and assistance given us during our deliberations. We also desire to thank Mr. A. G. Ross, Clerk of the Circuit Court, for the assistance he has given us during the time that we have been in session.

In closing, we extend our thanks to His Honor, Judge Doub, for the assistance he has given us in performing our duties as grand jurors.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

REPEAL QUESTION TO BE SETTLED AT CONVENTION

Nominators Are Chosen to Select Candidates—Special Election To Be Held September 12

ASA T. MATTHEWS NAMED

A joint resolution of the Maryland General Assembly naming nominators for delegates to a Maryland Constitutional Convention to act on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and providing for a special election to be held on September 12, has been placed in the House and Senate of the Legislature.

The bill sets October 4 as the date for assembly of the convention in the State House at Annapolis.

Nominators to Name Candidates

The nominators who will choose nine candidates for delegates in each of the State's six Congressional districts, and eighteen at large, are designated in the resolution by counties and the legislative districts of Baltimore—one to each.

Three delegates to the convention will be elected in each Congressional district and six will be chosen by a State-wide vote. This limits membership in the convention to twenty-four delegates.

Asa T. Matthews, of Oakland, was named nominator for Garrett county.

Three Classes Provided

The nine candidates in each Congressional District will include three pledged for repeal, three against repeal and three who will be unpledged. The eighteen candidates at large will be divided into groups of six as for repeal, against and unpledged.

No restriction is placed on the number of candidates who may wish to become delegates, however, since anyone will be permitted by petition to file for the election with the Secretary of State at Annapolis.

Minor Auto Violations

Homer H. Hogue, Masontown, W. Va., was fined $2 and costs recently before Justice W. A. Gonder on the charge of operating a car at a speed greater than reasonable and proper, on Oak street. Hogue, coach at Masontown High school, was returning from a basketball game at Aurora.

A. R. Martin pleaded guilty to charges of operating a car without markers and having no registration certificate. He was fined $10 and costs on the first charge and $1 and costs on the second, before Justice Gonder on March 20.

George Edgel Felda, Shallmar, was arrested last Thursday charged with unauthorized use of an automobile. The car was owned by Lawrence Murphy, of Potomac Manor. Felda was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction, and on the charge of operating without a license he was fined $10 and costs and was committed to the county jail in default of payment. He pleaded guilty to the charges before Justice Poole, of Kitzmiller, on Saturday.

Samuel B. Moon, Shallmar, was fined $10 and costs on Wednesday before Justice Poole, on a charge of operating a car with markers issued to another person.

SPRING BEGAN MONDAY; IS EXPECTED TO BE WARM

The sun on Monday began six months of shining more strongly on the northern half of the world than on the southern—in other words, Spring is here!

March 20, at 8:43 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, was the moment of the "Vernal Equinox," the words used by experts as meaning the advent of Spring.

Weather prophets report that just at this period ends an abnormally warm Winter, so will the coming days have higher temperatures than the average for years past.

In expert terms, the Vernal Equinox comes when the earth, circling around the sun, moves into such a position that the part north of the equator receives more heat and has longer days than the southern hemisphere.

The winter of 1932-33, says the U. S. Weather Bureau, continued the trend of abnormally warm winters that have been going on since 1905 east of the Rocky Mountains. Average temperatures during the official weather bureau winter (December, January and February) ranged from one to nine degrees above the normal of 35 degrees in various sections. The trend so far in March has been similar.

Spring weather, observers say, also gives indications of being warmer than normal, judging from the trend of spring temperatures during recent years. This, however, is not an official forecast. Temperaures of all four seasons, during the last 25 years, have tended above normal.

A warm spring would be generally beneficial to ground crops, says J. B. Kincer, chief of the weather bureau's climate and crop-weather division. But it might be harmful to fruit trees, causing them to bud prematurely with danger of a later frost killing the young shoots.

The winter just ended bore out unofficial prophecies of abnormal warmth based on the weather bureau's discovery that apparently there are "cycles" of abnormally warm and cold weather lasting over periods of years.

Temperatures during the official weather bureau winter averaged one to five degrees above normal in the southern states, three to six in the central valleys and Middle Atlantic area, and five to nine in the northeast.

BEER SALES PLANS IN THE COUNTIES ARE CONSIDERED

Garrett Delegation Will Seek To Retain Present Stringent Local Option Statutes

SCHOOLS TO LOSE $1,000,000

Annapolis, March 22—Anticipating the immediate return of beer and State-wide legislation permitting its sale, members of virtually all of the county delegations in the General Assembly turned their thoughts today to modification of their local option laws, many of which date back into the pre-prohibition era.

Some of the counties—notably Baltimore, Charles, St. Mary's and Washington—already have taken steps looking to the return of beer, but others have deferred action until now. Today, however, a number of proposals were ready for presentation in one house or the other of the legislature.

Some Still Waiting

Some counties still hold off, awaiting an opportunity for study of the provisions of a State-wide bill which has been prepared by Attorney-General William Preston Lane after a series of conferences.

St. Mary's county was in the van of all of the localities which save initiated action, a bill repealing outright its local option laws already having passed both House and Senate and been sent to the Governor.

Montgomery and Allegany counties are the only ones which did not have local option statutes when prohibition went into effect.

Proposals on File

Other counties whose proposals are alredy on file are:

Baltimore County—Revision of its local laws to permit the sale of beer, fixing license fees of $200 for retailers and $200 to $300 for wholesalers; forbidding sales across the bar. This bill also is so worded as to apply to hard liquors in the event of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. It has passed the Senate.

Charles County—Revising the local option laws to premit the sale of beer and, later, the sale of hard liquors if the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed. License fees for beer, $250.

Washington County—Repeal of the local option laws subject to a referendum.

Garrett Will Seek to Retain Law

The comments from leaders in other counties included:

Garrett—Undecided, but will seek to retain present stringent local option statutes. May ask exemption from State-wide law.

Allegany—Plans beer licensing law after study of State-wide act.

Lenten Services Continue

Rev. Walter B. Brock, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, was the speaker at the union mid-week Lenten service last night in St. Paul's M. E. church. He spoke on "The appeal of Jesus to a World in need of Peace."

Lesson for March 26

REVIEW: JESUS OUR EXAMPLE IN SERVICE.

GOLDEN TEXT—How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him. Acts 10:38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories of Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows Us How.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living Like Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Our Example in Service.

The method of review must always be determined by the genius of the teacher, the grade of the class, and the aptitude of the pupils. Three methods for the Senior, Young People and Adult classes are suggested, the second and third of which are adaptations of the method suggested by the Lutheran Lesson committee.

I. The Summary Method.

In the use of this method the principal facts of each lesson will be brought out with the leading teachings. Assignments should be made a week in advance.

II. The Key Note of the First Six Chapters of Mark From Which the Lessons of the Quarter Have Been Taken.

Chapter 1: Jesus as the Gospel Preacher. His preparation was in the wilderness alone with God. It was in Galilee that he called his first disciples and began to preach. While the synagogue was the best place, naturally when the leaders became hostile, the desert, the mountain, and even a fishing boat was his pulpit.

Chapter 2: Jesus as the Teacher. He gave them a new conception of the forgiveness of sins, fasting, and the Sabbath.

Chapter 3: Jesus as the Messiah. He chose twelve of his ambassadors, being somewhat analogous to the twelve tribes in the old dispensation.

Chapter 4: Jesus as the Interpreter of the Kingdom of God. Three outstanding parables reveal its characteristics.

Chapter 5: Jesus as the Great Physician. The healing of the demoniac, the woman with the issue of blood, restoring to life of the daughter of Jairus are outstanding examples.

Chapter 6: Jesus as the Greater Provider. An outstanding example of his ability to provide for the disciples is seen in the feeding of the five thousand.

III. A Method Which Embraces the Grouping of the Quarter's Lessons Under Significant Headings.

1. Some helpers of Jesus (Lessons 1 and 6). The helpers indicated are John the Baptist who is the first recorded helper, and the twelve apostles. It is strikingly significant that though Jesus possessed all power he chose to place in the hands of ordinary men the continuance of his work. He is able to use men of varied gifts and temperaments, as shown in the twelve.

2. Some works of Jesus (Lessons 2, 3 and 4). He met and overcame the Devil in the wilderness. He cast out demons. He healed the sick and he forgave sins.

3. Some teachings of Jesus (Lessons 5, 7 and 8). Because the traditions of the Jews had obscured the law, he taught the higher meaning of the law, especially as it pertained to the Sabbath. By means of parables, he took the common things of life and clothed them with vital and profound significance.

4. The power of Jesus (Lessons 9, 10 and 11). This power was exhibited over the forces of nature, demons, physical ailments, and even death itself.

5. An enemy of Jesus (Lesson 12). The Devil is the supreme enemy of Jesus. Anything that hinders the progress of the gospel may be considered as an enemy. In this light he has many enemies, among which may be mentioned alcohol and narcotics. The drinking of intoxicating liquors and smoking of cigarettes, etc., dull man's moral and spiritual natures and incapacitate him for the highest and most efficient service.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Col. Bell, who evidently took seriously the salmon story about placing them in Deep Creek Lake, from whence they would go down to the sea and then back again in four years, is trying to establish a salmon canning factory at Sines, just the other side of the giant turbines of the hydro-electric company.

When the salmon begin their jaunt to the sea through the tunnel at Sines, they will neeessarily have to go thru the turbines before reaching the Youghiogheny. Col. Bell says all they would have to do would be to stand there with cans and catch them as they came out. "It's a money maker," says the Colonel. "You could have diced, grated or hashed brown, depending upon your mood."

Anyone having a better name than "Hank" for a police dog may suggest sameeither orally or in writing, but Scoop reserves the right to reject any and all bids. The name is Hank. And as for training, I have just received some excellent advice from an unknown party.

Dear Skoop:

I seat myself to write you these few lions to tell you how to train your police dog, and whin these few lions come to hand I hope you are courageous and the lions outrageous as they probably are.

Last week you said something about your dog's face being red; now on the level, how about your own when you applied the mop to the floor?

You also said you would like to train your dog, well here is how to train him so he will not bother you any more: first choice, tie him to a rail and the train will train him. Second choice, put him on the first train that comes through. Choice No. 1 is preferable.

State Has Unusual Names

Though small as states go, Maryland seems to have its share of communities bearing unusual names.

The U. S. Postal guide lists an Accident in Garrett county, an Asbestos in Carroll, an Appeal in Calvert, a Fairplay in Washington, a Hurry in St. Mary's and an Issue in Charles.

St. Mary's county has an Avenue and Harford county has a Street, both names of postoffice communities. There's a place called Chance in Somerset, a Secretary in Dorchester, a Security in Washington, a Rising Sun in Cecil, a Royal Oak in Talbot and a Detour in Carroll.

Every Marylander knows his state has a Frederick. Not all may know it also has an Adelina, an Allen, a Clara, a Leslie, a Luke, a Lydia and a Jewell.

Maryland places named with a flavor of faraway lands include Paris, Berlin, Bethlehem, Damascus, Eden, Lisbon, Vienna, Bethesda, and New Germany.

Wicomico county has a community named Jesterville, which if it lives up to its name, will be a lively place on April Fool's Day.

Garrett county communities seem to have taken their names largely from conditions of the land round about, with a bit of optimism thrown in for good measure at times with Parndise, Promised Land, Fairsweep, Meadow Mountain, Pine Swamp, White Rock, Red Hill, Highland, Glendale, Underwood, Lake Ford, Mineral Spring, Flatwoods, Short Run, Glades, Fairview, Sunnyside, Blooming Rose, Pleasant Valley, Oakland, and the like. Perhaps Guard and Dodge came after the automobiles infested the highways. Bray, Bear Hill, Black Hawk, Bowser, Swan Meadow, remind one of animals and birds, while Trap Run, evidently was put on the map to try to catch them. Lageer sounds something like a drink, while Manadier is a by-word with Archibaldson. The only sad place in the whole county is Pincy Run, while one gets nearest the stars at Mar's Hill. And right now, it's a wonder everybody doesn't want to move to Rich Hill.

But let me warn you. Rich Hill is nowhere near Promised Land, or Paradise either.

Chain Letters

Well, they have arrived again, the same old "Luck" chain letter. Telling you to make so many copies and mail them to your friends within a certain time or bad luck will strike you. The letter is always started by an American Colonel, so it says, and has gone around the world so many times. Keep it moving, it warns, and within four days you will have good luck. Baloney, says Scoop.

You've probably received these letters yourself. Everybody has had one at some time or other. If not, be patient, they've been going the rounds since Adam was a pup (my mind keeps running to pups). They were started and kept going by the oldest and commonest emotion in human nature—fear, and they'll be kept going by the same emotion.

Here's a way to keep out of bad luck, providing you don't comply with directions when you get a letter. Expectorate (I was asked not to use the other word) over your left shoulder and throw a horseshoe over your right. Distribute a generous supply of salt all around you. Get a rabbit's foot and string it around your neck. Powdered spiders mixed with dried frogs' legs and stewed in blood always work. Love potions, flavored with finger nails and dandruff will turn the trick.

Or simply take letter, tear it in little bits; place in fireplace, and apply lighted match. And presto, the letter is gone, and so is your bad luck.

And presto, that ends my hard luck for this week.

Using the Corn Products

For a cheap dinner there is much to be said for the old-fashioned combination of pork and hominy. With plenty of gravy, of course—milk gravy, if possible—pork and hominy make a substantial meal. For good balance, however, suggests the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, something else is needed in that meal. Add kale, cabbage, other greens or tomatoes. There you have a very excellent balanced meal, and a very cheap one. Hominy, either as grits, samp or pearl hominy, is never expensive. Pork is cheap and greens of one kind or another or canned tomatoes also cost very little.

Cheapest of all the corn products, of course, is corn meal. In hoe cake, johnny cake, corn cakes, corn pone, corn muffins—from the plain meal-and-water mixture to a combination of eggs, milk and meal that makes one of the richest of all the quick breads—corn meal serves all types of homes, rich or poor. With the exception of "roasting ears" in the summer, corn and corn products of all kinds are usually among the cheapest foods at any time of the year. Eggs are cheap enough to bring corn pudding into the bill of fare—a dish that is substantial enough, with its eggs and milk and corn, to use without meat or potatoes if need be. Nor should succotash with canned corn and beans be overlooked; nor, for lunch or supper, say corn batter cakes or corn fritters.

Hominy and Sausage

Six cups cooked hominy, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 pound sausage. Heat the hominy with the milk and salt in a double boiler. Fry the sausage until crisp and brown. Remove the sausage meat and mix with the hominy. When well mixed spread the mixture in the frying pan used for the sausage. Cook over low heat until a crisp brown crust has formed and serve on a hot platter.

Creamed Panned Kale

Strip the kale from the midribs and discard them and the stringy portions. Wash the kale thoroughly in several waters and cut it into small pieces. For each quart of kale allow 2 tablespoons butter or other fat. Melt the fat in a skillet, add the kale, cover to keep in the steam and cook slowly for 15 to 20 minutes. Sift a teaspoon of flour over the kale, mix well, pour in one-half cup of cream or milk and stir until thickened. Season with salt and pepper and serve at once.

Tomato, Corn and Cheese on Toast

Three tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 1 onion, sliced; 2 cups canned corn, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ lb. sharp cheese, shaved thin.

Brown the flour in a heavy skillet, remove the flour from the skillet and blend with 2 tablespoons of the fat. Brown the onion in the remaining fat, add the other ingredients except the cheese and cook for 10 minutes. Stir in the cheese and when melted serve on thin, crisp toast.

A "MILD" DISEASE MAY BE LOADED GUN IN DISGUISE

Some of Most Serious Outbreaks Traced to So-Called Cases

"It is a great mistake," Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said recently, "to treat even light cases of measles, chickenpox, mumps, scarlet fever, tonsilitis, whooping cough, or any of the so-called 'children's' diseases as though they did not amount to much. Treatment of that sort is comparable to the careless handling of a loaded gun which surprises you by going off and doing a lot of damage.

"Some of the most serious outbreaks we have had of scarlet fever, as well as of other diseases, in different parts of the State, have been traced to 'mild' cases, that is, to cases that were too light for the doctor to be called. In some instances the children have continued to go to school and to associate and play with other children. In others, after they have been kept at home for a few days, suffering from what was believed to be 'just an ordinary eold,' they have returned to school and have scattered their germs around among their school mates. Eventually, a group of cases—sometimes very serious ones—have developed from these carelessly handled 'mild' cases. The gun proved to be loaded.

"There are several things worth remembering in connection with children's diseases. Nearly all of these diseases begin with a digestive upset or with symptoms closely resembling those of a common cold. Accordingly it is a wise thing for mothers to regard every digestive upset and every 'common cold' with suspicion until you are sure it is not the beginning of something more serious. Your doctor is the best judge of the seriousness of such symptoms and you will save suffering and anxiety if you put the child to bed, send for your doctor and follow his advice.

"The old idea that children's diseases are of no consequence and that all of the children in the family may as well have them at the same time, went into the discard, long ago. Nearly all of these diseases are particularly hard on babies and on children who have not reached school age. Measles is especially dangerous for very young children. Whooping cough and other diseases have equally bad records. Accordingly, great care should be taken to protect babies and other young children from all of these diseases. This does not mean that it is safe to expose the older children to them. All children should he protected, at all times, from needless exposure to infectious or communicable diseases.

"Children who contract any of these diseases need very special care to protect them against possible, dangerous after-effects. This is as true of the mild cases as of those that are more serious. Measles often opens the way for pneumonia. Deafness and eye trouble may often be traced to some carlessly treated disease in early childhood. Kidney diseases and damaged hearts often have their beginnings in the same way. There is a wide difference between coddling and intelligent safe-guarding to prevent disastrous after-effects. Here, again, it is wise to have your doctor's advice. and to follow it."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

There is no gainsaying the fact that the new administration has moved swiftly and decisively since taking office at Washington. Congress has obeyed willingly and has given President Roosevelt powers never before known in America during peace times. There is more than one reason for this. In the first place the old adage that a "new broom sweeps clean" holds good in politics as well as in other walks of life. President Hoover was handicapped by a Congress which was generally against him because the political beliefs of a majority of its members did not coincide with those of the President's party. But when the new administration came in, bringing with it a majority in both branches of Congress and a so-called "new deal" the psychology changed over night. Congress and the nation is always willing to give a new administration a chance. Whatever troubles and political divisions there are to be in the majority party, will come later on in the administration.

Another reason for the swift and decisive action on the part of Congress was the national banking crisis. It was evident that something had to be done and done quickly. A thrill of patriotic fervor, comparable to a war, swept over the nation. American people may do a lot of complaining in times of depression, but they love their country and always rally to the colors when it is in danger, no matter whether the danger is from within or without. A third reason of course is that President Roosevelt had the ability to capitalize the situation, and to take a bold course and one calling for decisive action. He captured the imagination of the country, partly of course because he presented a workable program.

Passage of the emergency banking legislation was of course foregone conclusion. The need was acute and Congress responded. But the enactment of the so-called economy and budget balancing program of the President was more remarkable. The legislation called for making the President an economy dictator, and this was done on the theory that the nation was facing a situation as serious as a military threat by a foreign foe. For months, certain well-financed lobbies in Washington had been preventing the enactment of real economy legislation and they felt, when the new administration started, that they could do it again. But they reckoned without the ability of President Roosevelt to take hold of a situation, and without the response that the whole country would make to his demands for action for economy and sound national finance. As the debate in Congress proceeded the forces behind the President grew stronger rather than weaker, and in the end the lobbyists themselves were forced to yield gracefully and to say that they had absolute confidence in the fairness of the President to do the right thing in the administration of the law.

Just how the rest of President Roosevelt's program will fare in Congress remains to be seen. Just now the administration "has the ball" and is able to make a touchdown almost at will. Nothing succeeds like success, and with his proven ability to size up a situation and dramatize it when necessary President Roosevelt ought to go a long ways with Congress before real disagreements develop.

Many New Yorkers who have watched President Roosevelt's political career from the beginning say that he is blessed with that rare gift called "political luck." He always has won his political battles, they say, no matter what the apparent odds against him. If this is true, his political "luck" seems to be holding and Americans generally regardless of party will hope that it continues to hold so long as his policies remain sound and constructive. The statement that he has this political luck is no disparagement of his ability. Luck without ability would not go far. It will be remembered that the late President Coolidge was credited both by his politcal friends and opponents with possessing the same kind of luck but this did not deny his calm, constructive judgment and sound mentality. President Roosevelt is now the head of the nation. His achievements and his luck will be the nation's luck. May it continue as long as the President and the nation continue to deserve it.

At Washington, the Foreign Policy Association says that "with the incoming of the Roosevelt Administration the recognition of the Soviet government (of Russia) is more probable than at any time since 1917.

At Quincy, Ill., postal authorities reported that they had received a gold coin minted in 1838 in payment of a money order for $5.00.

Beer, Prosperity and Bunk

The beer talk always intrigues me. (I once would have said "interests me." but that is old stuff. It means the same, but "intrigues" has it over "interests" "like a tent.") And here is something I thought about when I saw all the European bankruptcy and beer, running neck and neck, and yet heard the clamor in America for beer as a panacea:

Why is Germany in trouble?
She has beer.
Why has England got it double?
She has beer.
Why is Belgium in distress?
Italy in such a mess?
Why grow pesos less and less,
Where there's beer?

One would think there'd be no sorrow
Where there's beer;
The millennium come tomorrow
Were there beer.
Yet the countries that have brought us
To the brink where now you spot us
Raising bogies that have got us—
All have beer!

I'd espouse that panacea,
Foamy beer;
I'd believe there would be heaven here
Were there beer—
But the grieving is the deepest
Where the stuff has been the cheapest;
Road to solvency seems steepest
Where there's beer.

Were that brew the magic token—
Potent beer;
Then that word should soon be spoken
Over here.
But those frantic demonstrations
Of a lack of clothes and rations
In those beer-befuddled nations—
Whoops, my dear!

—Strickland Gillilan.

AMERICAN MORALE

The state bank holidays, culminating in the national holiday declared by the President and events as they followed, have provided good insight into the national character. There has been no widespread uneasiness whatsoever. In not a single instance has there been anything resembling panic. The public realizes that the holidays were essential to protect the interests of depositors and is making the best of it. It has shown a splendid spirit of cooperation. It has shown, too, that it is willing to do what the President recently asked—make necessary personal sacrifices in the national interest.

Any country's best asset is the morale of the people. The state of the public morale in this country is the most reassuring sign we have for future stability and recovery.

MEANINGS OF LENT

The many millions of people who are observing the church season of Lent are not the only ones who would benefit by such exercises. This ancient practice has been maintained for many centuries, because it brings certain benefits to the people who observe it. It responds to certain needs which should be felt by all, whether they accept church traditions or not.

The fundamental aims of this venerable custom might be said to be three, to promote meditation, repentance and self-denial. Now the world is not ordinarily very keen on meditation, repentance and self-denial. It prefers excitement, self-seeking and fleshly satisfaction. But human nature was not built to stand a life of dissipation and excitement. People grow old prematurely under this abnormal pressure.

Life as it was lived through our recent boom period was not healthful for the majority of the people. There was too much rushing from one excitement to another, too little calmness and poise and thought. If people's more recent difficulties have forced them to spend more time in quiet pursuits at home they are better off physicall, mentally and morally, and in the end will gain financially.

Human nature is a very imperfect thing. People are all the time doing things they should regret, that hurt and injure others. If they can't repent of many of these things, they are not making themselves any more useful in the world or beloved of their associates.

The world sees many ugly spectacles. But there is nothing uglier than a selfish person, absorbed in his own welfare, grabbing and grasping for himself alone, for his own needs and satisfactions. Such persons are of little use or value in the world. But, alas! there are too many of them. If such ones could observe the Lenten season this year with some real self-denial for the benefit of others, they would find new sources of happiness and friendship.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

The number of pupils enrolled in Garrett county public schools reaches about four thousand.

Closing exercises of the public school was held. The music was under the direction of Misses Weber and Porter. A song with guitar accompaniment was given by little Miss Bessie Hinebaugh.

The County commissioners arranged to keep safe all public records by making their room fireproof. The cost was to be $2,400.

"How Susie killed the Wild Cat," was recounted at length. The cat turned out to be a raccoon. Susie was the wife of George W. Moon.

Henry Uphold carried mail from Hutton to Crellin every night, despite the stormy winter weather.

Dr. R. A.. Ravenscroft, who practiced in Louisville, Ky., during the winter, resumed his practice at Accident.

G. W. DeLawder was prospecting on his place on Deep Creek for a ten-foot vein of coal, said to underly Meadow Mountain.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Solo parts in a cantata, "The New Jerusalem," at the M. E. church, were sung by Mrs. J. G. Mealy, Miss Anna Manges, Dr. J. G. Robinson, G. C. Martin, Miss Townshend and Miss Taggart. Miss Lottie Loar presided at the organ. S. H. Jackson and C. H. Echard, clarinets, assisted.

For the second time Miss Rebecca Thayer won the fellowship prize at Cornell university.

A warehouse in rear of A. T. Matthews' office, which was on fire, was saved by the fire department, with little damage. A burning chimney at the residence of Louis Bush created excitment, but danger was passed when the fire department arrived.

The Goss building, Second and Liberty streets, was being raised and moved out to the building line. Michael Boyle was preparing to erect a dwelling on the Bradley property.

CHARGE TO GRAND JURORS IS DELIVERED BY JUDGE

further than that an observance of and a respect for the law upon the part of the great mass of the people or else the state cannot exist, and therefore it is the duty of the schools, of the churches and of the people of the county and of the state to teach the children the duty to respect and observe and abide by the law, so that they may grow up in the consciousness that the laws of the state are sacred and that organized society can not exist unless all of us observe and respect the law. Always there will be people who will violate the law, and that is the reason we have a uniform system of criminal law and that is why courts and juries are instituted —why they are necessary in civilized communities. There are always a number of people, of course, who are not trained properly as to the necessity of observing the law. There are always men and women who perhaps have kinks in their intellect or in their mentality, who are bound to go beyond their duty and to do the things they ought not to do. Then, of course, there is in addition the regular criminal class which grows up everywhere, and it is because of these classes of people that criminal laws have to be enforced by grand juries and petit juries and by the courts of out state and of our country.

You, gentlemen of the grand jury, have a duty to perform that is peculiar. You are the inquisitorial body of the crimlnal enforcement branch of the law. You are the only body that has the power to originate a charge against one of your neighbors without the help of anyone. A magistrate may not issue a warrant unless someone appears before him and makes a charge, but it is for you as a grand jury to make the charge and the basis of any such charge is the evidence of the witnesses produced before you. You are, however, governed by the law just as every other individual in the county. You have no right to make a baseless charge against any citizen. It is only when witnesses are produced before you and furnish such testimony as satisfies you that unless that evidence is explained or contradicted the traverser is guilty, that you should return a presentment or an indictment. In other words, that if no other evidence were produced in the case and you were sitting as petit jurors you, upon that testimony, would find a verdict of guilty. It is only in that contingency that you have a right to make a charge against one of your fellow citizens. Again, you have no right to make such a charge against him unless the evidence produced before you is legal evidence. You could not, of course, place a charge against one accused on hearsay alone. You have no right to hear, in your grand jury room, hearsay evidence. It is only upon legal evidence that you have a right to base any conclusion or to find and return an indictment. I ask you therefore to consider and observe fully the oath you have taken. Be careful not to communicate to anyone anything that takes place in the jury room for the reason that, if you do, it may cause the escape of the accused or may interfere with the state in securing the attendance of witnesses and in that may bring about a failure of justice.

Under the oath which you have taken you are not to find an indictment against anyone because of prejudice, passion, malice or ill will, nor leave any unpresented because of friendship, kindness, good will, love or affection.

It is the duty of the court to call your attention to some special statutes. One is the statute which makes it unlawful for a citizen to carry upon his person concealed weapons because of the danger of tragedies that may result from a disregard of this law.

It is a crime to commit abortion in this state. You know it is a crime to commit homicide in Maryland as well as in every other state and yet it is well known that among those people who are indifferent to spiritual things and who are basing everything on matter alone and on material things there are many who are advocating certain forms of abortion and certain forms of homicide, in addition to other things that you and I and our ancestors have agreed upon as the most heinous of crimes. And yet it all comes back to this: that you can not have observance of criminal law and of criminal justice except they be based upon the theory and upon the conviction that there is a God in the universe and that there is a soul in the human body.

We are also required to charge the Grand Jury as to the law against the sale of narcotics and other habit forming drugs.

There is a statute making it unlawful for the clerk, sheriff, register of wills and other state officers to retain and fail to pay over state funds within the time required by law and therefore it will be your duty to see whether that statute has been complied with.

We have also the mining law of the state which makes it the duty of the mine inspector to see that certain provisions of the law are enforced with reference to coal-mines and to see that operators of coal mines and others connected therewith obey these mining laws so as to provide for the safety and health of the men working in the mines. It will be your duty to call the mine inspector before you and inquire as to whether that law has been obeyed.

Much has been said recently about the Eighteenth Amendment and the prospect of an early resumption of the sale of lager beer. Laws have been passed by Congress providing for the submission to the people of the country the question of a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and providing for the sale of beer throughout the United States at a certain percentage of alcoholic content. I want to say to you, gentlemen of the grand jury, that we in Garrett county are in no way concerned with these two statutes. You have in Garrett county a local liquor law which was in force before the Eighteenth Amendment and which is not in any way affected by the laws enacted by Congress on this subject. It is in force now and will still be in force even if the States of the Union adopt the new amendment and repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. So I want to impress upon you so that you will understand fully that your duty today is the same duty that every other grand jury has had since the Eighteenth Amendment was passed and since the so-called Volstead Act was passed in pursuance of it, and prior thereto.

The people of Garrett county have seen fit to pass a local option law of their own making it unlawful to sell any intoxicating liquors or lager beer within the confines of Garrett county and if you find that law has been violated and there is evidence sufficient to support an indictment against the offender it will be your duty to find an indictment therefor.

Always bear in mind that whatever your individual views may be of a law, that you and I, as parts of the administration of justice are not concerned in any way with the propriety of any statute. I may personally have been an opponent of the Eighteenth Amendmee since the time of its adoption. You or any of you may have been likewise opposed to its adoption and to the laws enacted in pursuance thereof, but whatever our convictions are or may have been, we are now a part of the machinery for the administration of justice, pledged to enforce the laws and all of the laws as we find them. It is no part of our duty to pass judgment on their sufficiency or as to whether they are proper laws or improper laws, but merely to enforce and administer the law as it has been laid down by the General Assembly of our State.

I have been talking, gentlemen of the jury, this morning about something that you have not perhaps been thinking much lately, and probably you have been thinking about something that I have not been talking about. You have probably been thinking about bank failures, the railroad failures, the agrarian troubles and the farmers' difficulties. You have been thinking about the poor and about the unfortunate men and women of Garrett county who have not the means of subsistence, but we must remember that the law must be obeyed even in these most trying times.

It is more important in these hours of stress and tragedy than at any other times that the law be maintained. When men and women in such numbers are suffering, hungry and idle, when there is almost literal famine among many of our people you can form no conception of what might happen if the laws were not observed by the people.

I cannot help, however, but feel and express my conviction that the American people during the past three years have demonstrated better than any people in the history of the world their capacity for self-government, their power of self-restraint and their high regard for decency and honor and morals. The people have learned, the whole world has learned that the American people are people of character, of intelligence and of restraint.

Therefore, we in Garrett county want to do our share in the maintenance of law at this particular time. There is now no reason why anybody shqld fear further. We should realize that we have reached the depth of our dilemma and the change is just about coming on for the better. We have the greatest country in the world. We have a people made up of the very best blood of Europe as well as of America. We have everything at hand to help bring back prosperity and all we need is that conception of courage which is inherent in our race.

Now, gentlemen, I ask you to be as diligent in the discharge of your duties as is possible so that the expenses of this court may be decreased if practicable and certainly shall not be increased in this time of depression and yet I want you to be thorough and efficient in the discharge of your duties and not neglect, in the pursuit of economy, the conscientious and full discharge of your duties.

U. S. FISH DEPARTMENT MISQUOTED, CHIEF SAYS

Head of Division of Fish Culture Says Papers Were Wrong About Salmon Story

IS FOR EXPERIMENT ONLY

The Republican received a letter from G. C. Leach, chief of the division of fish culture, bureau of fisheries, Washington, D. C., relative to the story appearing in last week's issue, about placing salmon in Deep Creek Lake.

The letter is self-explanatory and is as follows:

The Republican,
Oakland, Maryland.
Gentlemen:

I have at hand a clipping from The Republican under date of March 16, in which is quoted an article published from some of the Eastern papers relative to the distribution of salmon in eastern Maryland waters. The article appearing in the Eastern papers was a misprint in some respects. The bureau advised that the chinook salmon which we are now holding in our aquarium—some 10,000— are to be reared at one of the Maryland State hatcheries and released in suitable waters in western Maryland in the vicinity of Oakland, and that some of the salmon would be placed in Deep Creek Lake, in Garrett County.

This office realizes that Deep Creek waters flow into the western watershed. The suggestion was made that they be placed in Deep Creek Lake for the purpose of demonstrating if they would survive and produce fly fishing. It is of course well known that the western salmon must migrate to the sea for a certain period and then return to fresh waters to spawn. If they do not have access to the sea they will not spawn. In Montana and in several of the Eastern States the West coast species have been planted in landlocked waters. They have attained large size but have shown no signs of reproduction. This would be the case with fish planted in Deep Creek Lake. It is only an experiment to determine what results might follow. If they reach large size they might prey upon the innumerable rock bass and other species found in the lake. The remaining salmon would be placed in the headwaters of the Potomac River for the purpose of determining if they would survive and return to the Potomac in three or four years.

It is quite probable that paper mills and other industrial plants along the upper reaches of the Potomac River would be a factor to contend with, and that the salmon would not pass beyond the point where the effluent from the plants enter the streams.

Consideration has also been given to planting some of the salmon in the South Fork of West Virginia waters. The South Fork does not appear to have the same amount of trade waste as in found in the North Branch of the Potomac.

Very truly yours,
G. C. LEACH,
Chief, Division of Fish Culture.

TABLELAND ASSOCIATION TO MEET AT KINGWOOD

Each Town Within Area to Become Member Under New Plan

The Allegheny Tableland Association, a voluntary organization, not for profit, to be established within the cities, towns, boroughs, townships and other political sub-divisions of the Allegheny Tableland region, lying partly within the States of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, consisting of all or portions of the counties of Fayetts and Somerset in Pennsylvania; Mineral, Grant, Preston, Monongalia and Tucker, in West Virginia, and Garrett, in Maryland.

Under the organization plan, each town, village, community or municipal unit within the Tableland, under the designation of the main center thereof as it is known geographically, may become a member of this association by complying with the provisions of the constitution of the Allegheny Tableland Association. Communities that serve as "gates" to the Tablelands may become members of the association under the same conditions as units within the tablelands. Each will be known as a local unit and any five or more resident citizens of any such local unit may apply to the Allegheny Tableland Association, in care of Mr. J. F. Reed, chairman of the governing board of the association, at Kingwood, W. Va., in writing for membership therein. On acceptance of this application by the governing board of the association, the citizens signing such application will be notified and they shall constitute the charter members of such local unit.

Object of the Association

The object of the Allegheny Tableland Association is—

To study, investigate and promote the welfare, economics, management and government of the communities and municipalities of those portions of the States of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania which have become by custom to be known as the Tableland region, to promote their development, progress and material advancement and welfare of their people, organizations and institutions.

In the study and investigation of the economics and sociology of this region, to secure such surveys as may be possible on the utilization of land, on possible production in agricultural products, on recreational and cultural opportunities and on the commercial, financial, educational and onther organizations within the region.

As the occasion rises, the association will direct its attention to the management and governments of the political units within the Tableland, their organization, their problems of finance and taxation, and the protecting and safeguarding of their rights and privileges. To secure, where needed, proper legislation for the foregoing purposes and to prevent the passage of legislation which would be detrimental to the Tableland region. In all its actions, the association shall be strictly non-partisan and non-factional, without political affiliations. That while created as a local regional organization, it shall have the power to cooperate with other organizations on programs of urban and rural relationships. The motto of the association is, "One for All—All for One."

The legislative body as created under the constitution is known as the Assembly of the Allegheny Tableland Association, and consists of two members elected from each community unit. This body determines the general policies, plans and programs of the association and coordinate the efforts of the various units as they are set up and organized.

The general management of the affairs within the Tableland area and funds of the association are vested in a governing board of nine elected by the assembly, which board develops and furthers the policies and programs of the association as it is determined from time to time through resolutions and action of the assembly.

It is earnestly requested by the present members of the association that each town, village, community or municipal unit within the Tableland apply in writing to the governing board of the association for membership therein, and thus lend their best efforts and interests as individuals, partnerships or corporations to the support of the Allegheny Tableland Association.

The next meeting of the governing board will be in Kingwood, W. Va., on Thursday, March 30, 1933.

Garrett-Allegany Teachers Meeting

An all-day meeting of the vocational agriculture and home economics teachers of Garrett and Allegany counties and their state supervisors, Mr. J. D. Blackwell and Miss Elisabeth Amory, and their Federal supervisors, Dr. Williams and Miss Amidon, was held in the Grantsville school on Wednesday to diseuss teaching as related to proper agricultural practices, and to discuss with home economics teachers the unit on home art which was built by Miss Campbell and Miss Bcuick, of Allegany county and Mrs. Mullinix, of Garrett county.

Miss Edna Amidon gave a discussion of ways of presenting subjeet matter in home art to the students of different communities. The teachers contributed a number of illustrations of the types which they would use in presenting this unit to the students of their respective schools. Miss Amory summarized the results of the meeting as she saw them.

Dr. Williams addressed the teachers along the following lines: First, the part that science plays in agriculture; second, what is expected of the agriculture teacher in the field of science; and third, how can the agriculture teachers improve their teaching in the field of science? Dr. Williams specifically pointed out that the job of the agriculture teacher or any teacher is not completed when they have done their work from 9 to 4 o'clock in the school room. If the boys and girls of the country are to be shown the connection between science and agriculture, the teachers will have to broaden themselves by wide and selected reading, especially in current literature on science.

At noon the teachers, supervisors and the principal of the Grantsville school were served a turkey dinner at the National Hotel.

After the meeting it was pointed out that the taxpayers of Garrett county are indeed fortunate in that they do not pay any money towards the vocational agrieulture and home economics which is being taught in Garrett county schools. The Federal and State funds take care of the entire cost of these departments.

Those who attended the meeting were Miss Dorothy Campbell, Flintstone high school; Miss Isabel Beuick, Oldtown high school; Mrs. W. D. Mullinix, Grantsville high school; Miss Martha Hampstead, Kitzmiller high school; Mrs. Emerson Bishoff, Oakland high school; Miss Ethel Grove, Accident high school; Miss Amory and Miss Amidon; Mr. Biggs, Oldtown high school; Miss Hill, Flintstone high school; Mr. Graser, Oakland high school; Mr. Beggs, Accident high school; Mr. Miller, Friendsville high school; Mr. Spoerlein, Mr. Mullinix, Grantsville high school; Dr. Blackwell, Dr. Williams and Superintendent F. E. Rathbun.

John Coode, of the Orange Revolution

THE LEADER OF A MOVEMENT IMPORTANT IN MARYLAND'S HISTORY

By H. D. W. ROSS, in the Baltimore Sunday Sun.

The name John Coode seldom, if ever, is listed among Maryland's historic notables. It is not that he has been overlooked completely; no history of the Colonial era can be either accurate or complete without mention of the part he played in it. But Coode has not been regarded as a notable character; the movement with which he was associated has been, and is, an unpopular one and his own temperament, in his later years, did not enhance his chances of being listed among the immortals.

The Orange Revolution of 1689, which unseated the Calvert proprietors and turned Maryland into a Royal Province, was the event which established Coode's reputation in his own time for posterity. Most historians regard the revolution as an unfortunate occurence, inspired by religious bigotry and productive only of a quarter century of royal rule which they compare unfavorably with the benevolent leadership of the proprietors. Since they take this view of the Orange movement itself, it follows inevitably that the historians have had no very high opinion of its leader —John Coode.

Dr. Henry J. Berkley, of Baltimore, a Maryland historian who has made an exhaustive study of the available contemporary records, is convinced that the Maryland colonists of the 1680s had good reason to be dissatisfied with the Calverts. There may have been no basis for the current belief that the Jesuits, at Calvert instigation, were conspiring with the French and Indians to bring a wholesale slaughter of Protestants. But Dr. Berkley believes there was real ground for complaint that the proprietors were not taking adequate steps to protect the frontiers against the Indians, and the evidence which he has assembled supports the charge that nepotism was rampant in the colony—that Catholics and friends and relatives of the Calverts held nearly all the important offices and that official incompetence and corruption were not entirely absent.

But whether or not it is agreed that the cause which he espoused was just, Coode seems deserving of credit for the manner in which the revolution was carried out. When the bloodless Orange Revolution of Maryland is contrasted with the bloody Bacon Rebellion in neighboring Virginia, some praise should be accorded its leader. And Coode's record of public service, both before and after the revolt, should be considered in any appraisal of the man in his historical setting. Dr. Berkley holds this view and to support it he presents the life story of John Coode as his own researches have revealed it.

Before his rise to the leadership of the anti-Calvert movement John Coode had had a varied career. He was born in England, presumably in the Shire of Cornwall, for only there in the rather unusual name to be found. Exact knowledge of his early years is lacking, but it is believed that he attended Sidney College, Cambridge, matriculating there in 1642. In any event, he is known to have been ordained a deacon in the Anglican Church by the Bishop of Exeter and to have served in the parish of Pennryn before his departure for Maryland. Just why he left England is a matter of conjecture, but there were rumors that he had been involved in some difficulty with his superiors and that the circumstances made it advisable for him to seek a new start in a new field.

In 1660 he was living in the little hamlet of St. George, a few miles west of St. Mary's City on the Potomac river. He was about 25 years old at the time and it is probable that he served as assistant to the venerable Parson Jennings, who officiated at St. George. But if he did resume his clerical duties when he first came to America he did not continue for long as a clergyman. In 1665 he married Susan Gerrard, daughter of one of the colony's most influential citizens, and the couple moved to Chaptico Hundred, where Thomas Gerrard had established a glebe and an Anglican church, although he was a Catholic himself. Coode almost certainly did not serve as priest of this parish, for he appears on the records as a vestryman, a position he occupied during his lifetime.

At Chaptico, Coode soon established himself as a merchant, operating river boats which carried on an active and, presumably, profitable trade with the Indians and outlaying settlers. By 1676 he had acquired such prominence in the colony that he was appointed commander of the colony's single warship, the Loyal Charles of Maryland, and was ordered to scour the Potomac for pirates, robbers and spies. Later, an order-in-Council extended his duties to include supervision of all waters within the province. In 1676, also, he became a member of the lower house of the Assembly; shortly afterward he was named by the Proprietor a justice of the peace for St. Mary's county, and he also became—under Major Boarman —captain of the militia of Chaptico Hundred. These and several other positions and honors Coode received at the hands of Lord Baltimore, who, apparently, had a high regard for the former's ability and no reason to doubt his loyalty.

Even while he was performing his official duties, however, Coode must have suffered a change of heart. As the years passed the rumblings of discontent against the proprietory became louder and more open. Coode's father-in-law, Gerrard, although himself a Catholic, was one of Lord Baltimore's bitterest enemies, and the Blackistons and Slyes, who were related to the Gerrards, also were prominent members of the anti-government group. Undoubtedly Coode was influenced in a measure by his associates, but it was not until 1679 that he openly espoused the cause of revolution.

In that year a Dr. Berre had come into the colony and was entertained at Coode's home, where he told a story of the organization of "a troop of 100 Catholics . . . in the county ready to cut the Protestants' throats, ad meliorem expeditoionem Domini." At about the same time, ex-Governor Fendall was traveling about the country spreading propaganda against the Calverts. The people of Charles listened to these incendiaries and many believed them. Open rebellion threatened in Anne Arundel county and Charles and Calvert were seething with excitement. The Governor and Council, thoroughly alarmed by the developments, ordered Fendall's arrest, thereby arousing the countryside still further and bringing Coode and George Godfrey, lieutenant of the Rangers, of Charles county, both by this time open opponents of the existing regime, to his assistance. All three were arrested; Godfrey was sentenced to death, Fendall was fined and imprisoned and Coode was released in bail and in charge of his brother-in-law, Nehemiah Blackiston, who was just as ardent a rebel as Coode himself. Lord Baltimore by this time realized that Coode was an enemy and he sent urgent letters from England urging that he be not reelected to the Assembly. But he was returned with a large majority and he continued to exert an important influence in the lower house.

In the years which followed the fear and resentment of the colonists were not allayed; rather they were aggravated by the continued nepotism of the proprietor, by ugly rumors which spread like wildfire and by disquieting news from Virginia. There the Indians had been raiding outlaying settlements and killing the inhabitants, who had been left unprotected. Other Indian tribes were menacing the Maryland frontier and the Governor was accused of withdrawing county arms and leaving the colonists defenseless. Colonel Pye, a member of the Council, was charged with having effected an alliance with the Jesuits and their Indian allies against the Protestant settlers. The Bacon Rebellion in Virginia strengthened the cause of the opposition in Maryland and when word finally was received in 1689 that the Catholic James II had been deposed from the English throne and replaced by the Protestant William and Mary, the disaffected colonists realized that their moment had arrived.

In July of that year John Coode, with the backing of Blackiston, Ninian Beale and a number of other influential colonists, began to assemble a revolutionary force at Chaptico Town. Their avowed aim was to compel the Governor and Council to proclaim officially the accession of William and Mary, and apparently they had little difficulty in ralsing and equipping a fairly imposing army. Late in August the troops set out for the State House at St. Mary's City, here Colonel Digges had assembled a proprietory force of about 100 men behind the fortifications.

When Coode's arm arrived before the walls Colonel Digges discovered that his garrison was not so loyal as he had hoped. The revolutionists were greeted by encouraging shouts from within the fortifications and the garrison demanded that Digges surrender at once. He had no choice, so he complied, escaping himself with a few followers to Mattapany Fort on the Patuxent, which was Lord Baltimore's chief fortification in the colony, and where large stores of arms and ammunition were kept. At Mattapany the Governor and the loyal Councilors had gathered, with such troops as they could command, to make a last stand against the rebels.

But the latter, flushed with an easy first victory, were not to be stopped. Coode at once ordered a march to the Patuxent river fort. The few hundred men who had constituted his original command were augmented by volunteers from St. Mary's and from the territory through which they passed on the way to Mattapany. When they reached the fort they numbered about a thousand men, all well equipped with arms and ammunition. There may have been a few skirmishes between the contending forces, but the record of the Orange Revolution indicates that little or no blood was shed on either side. The Mattapany fort capitulated on September 1, without a battle and three days later it was evacuated. Coode's active military career had been a brief one and most amazingly successful. Circumstances, certainly, were all in his favor, but it appears that some credit is due him for his decisive action in the emergency and for the discipline which prevented unnecessary bloodshed.

With the Orange party now in absolute control of the colony, immediate steps were taken to replace the officials whom Lord Baltimore had appointed and whose appointment had been responsible in no small measure for the discontent of the colonists. The Council, every member of which was related in some degree to the proprietor, was replaced entirely by men in sympathy with the new regime. The election of a new Assembly was ordered and this body immediately revised the roll of local officials, replacing many Catholics with Protestants and eliminating all of the Calvert relatives. Coode was confirmed as Commander-in-chief of the colonial forces. For a time he served as Governor of the colony and he also acted as collector of excises on the Potomac river.

Meanwhile the two contending parties in the colony had ceased fighting with each other and both had carried their cases directly to London. As a result, a hearing was set for December 23, 1690, and Coode, together with Kenelm Cheseldyne, Speaker of the House, was sent to London to present the case of the revolutionists. The counts in their indictment of the Calverts were the familiar ones—nepotism, partiality to Catholics, the invocation of illegal laws and punishments and failure to protect settlers from the Indians. The charges received a favorable reception from the Protestant monarchs and the Lords of Trade, and Coode returned to Maryland with a legal and diplomatic victory achieved even more easily than his military conquest.

Up to this time, it appears, Coode was held in high esteem by all the members of his own party, and he seems even to have won the grudging respect of his bitter enemies—the friends of Lord Baltimore. Until the appointment of Governor Copley in 1691—the first Royal Governor—Coode was unquestionably the leading spirit in the colony. Even afterward he worked in close harmony with the Royal Governor and retained the offices of Commander of the Army, Naval Officer of the Potomac and High Sheriff of St. Mary's county.

But the years, his active life and, perhaps, his personal habits wrought a rapid and radical change in Coode's character. The decline in his powers first became apparent after the death of Copley and with the appointment of Francis Nicholson to succeed him. The new Royal Governor and the former leader of the revolution simply did not get along. Their mutual antipathy revealed itself at the outset and very soon it had descended to the level of a childish quarrel, with both sides hurling verbal insults and even indulging in most undignified physical encounters. Nicholson charged Coode with stealing public funds and the latter responded by accusing the Governor of having poisoned an enemy. Both were to blame for this unseemly bickering, but there is no doubt that Coode's once vigorous mind was beginning to fall. He began to drink heavily and very soon his habits and his quarrelsome disposition became so unpleasant that it was difficult even for his friends to defend him.

Then occurred the episode which gave Nicholson the opportunity for which he had been waiting. In the presence of one Alexander Lumley, a Catholic citizen of Annapolis, Coode (presumably under the influence of liquor) loudly denied the divine paternity of Christ, branded all priests as rogues and ended by proclaiming himself "both a priest and deacon of the Anglican church." Word of Coode's blasphemy soon spread and sentiment against him mounted. Nicholson took immediate advantage of it.

He brought charges of malfeasance in his office as collector in the Potomac district and demanded his dismissal from the Assembly on the ground that no priest was allowed to be a member of that body. The Legislature, which still contained many of Coode's old-time friends, hesitated to act against him and only when the Governor appeared before them personally with a demand for his removal did they yield. Immediately thereafter Nicholson summoned Coode before him and stripped him of his military offices; then to make the humiliation of his enemy complete he ordered him tried for blasphemy. Coode fled to Virginia to escape this inquisition, but returned later, was tried for sedition and convicted; but the punishment was remitted on the strong recommedation of the Council, which still included many of Coode's friends.

It is a striking fact that Coode never seems to have lost the friends of his earlier years, even though he must have made their continued loyalty exceedingly difficult. Robert Mason, High Sheriff of St. Mary's, stood by him to the end and once had his house ransacked by Nicholson's subordinates, who sought there to find incriminating papers. Robert Clarke, a St. Mary's attorney, came under the Governor's ban when he refused to issue false orders incriminating Coode; and several other prominent men in the party came forward with manifestos refuting the Governor's charges against him.

The sedition trial, however, was the closing episode of Cood's public career. Afterward he retired to his plantation and to his duties as vestryman. Even this last office was threatened by his enemies, who made a vigorous effort to have him removed. But his fellow-parishioners were loyal and he retained the position until his death. Just when this occurred is unknown; archives and local records fail to reveal the date. But, in view of his known physical and mental decline, it may be presumed that he did not live very long after his removal from participation in public affairs.

There are so many gaps in the record of Coode's career that it is really difficult to appraise the man accurately. But, Dr. Berkley asserts, we do know that, before he espoused the Orange cause, he was regarded as an able public official by the proprietary. His conducts of the revolution speaks for his ability as a leader of men, and his subsequent activities show him as an active and able administrator. If, in charity, we dismiss the last few years of his life, his record seems to indicate that he is deserving of at least a small niche in Maryland's Hall of Fame.

First Artillery Chief of the United States Army

One American soldier, whose career is perhaps not so well known to Americans today as it deserves to be, is Henry Knox, our first artillery chief, and a soldier and statesman who rose from proprietor of a book store to a national hero. General Knox was one of the first Americans to advocate a system of national defense, and this is a question which is still of great interest to all real Americans. In writing about General Knox in the current issue of the National Republic, First Lt. Frederick A. Henney, of the Engineer Corps of the U. S. Army, says, in part:

"It is not easy to understand why the illustrious soldier, General Henry Knox, friend and trusted adviser of Washington throughout twenty-one years of public service, should have been so inconspicuous in the written history of the American republic. Perhaps the towering fame of George Washington overshadowed the greatness of Henry Knox, his companion. There is much in the life of Henry Knox to inspire Americans. Knox began his career as a modest militia man and ended it as a major general and the chief officer of the Department of the Army and Navy of the United States.

"The family of Knox originated in the Scottish lowlands. His father, William Knox, emigrated to Boston in 1729. In 1735 William Knox married Mary Campbell and took up residence in Boston. He was a shipbuilder by trade and the Konx family lived in comfortable circumstances for many years.

"Henry Knox, the American patriot, was born July 25, 1750. When the lad, Henry, was twelve years old his father died, leaving him the sole support of his mother. Young Henry was obliged to quit attendance at the Boston Grammar School and take a place as apprentice in a book store.

"Young Knox, although apprenticed to a strict master, found time to acquire a considerable stock of useful knowledge from the books in the store. Among other subjects he studied military history and learned to speak and write French. These subjects were most useful to him later in the revolutionary struggle.

"Henry Knox appears to have been a stalwart youngster, fond of manly sports, devoted to his mother's welfare, active in the affairs that engaged the attention of the nighborhood in which he lived, and yet withal addicted to the study of books as well as men and business.

"This was at a time when colonial discontent with the Imperial Government was beginning to scethe, and political disturbances were multiplying in the land.

"At eighteen years of age, Henry Knox joined a militia company of artillery composed of local tradesmen like himself. Officers of the British artillery unwittingly trained this company, little realizing that such training would later, on the field of battle, be invaluable to the revolutionary cause.

"In 1770 the intense feeling between the Americans and the British soldiers quartered in Boston flamed into the street fighting known as the 'Boston Massacre.' Young Knox was present and used all of his influence to prevent violence and preserve the peace.

"Two days after reaching his twenty-first birthday, Henry Knox, undismayed by the stormy political sky, launched into business for himself. He opened a book store which, according to a writer of the time, was a 'store of great display, attractive to young and old, and a fashionable morning lounge.' His store became a great resort for the British officers stationad in Boston and the inquisitive mind of Knox gleaned from them considerable knowledge of military subjects."

AGNES OSBORN felt that, at last, she could safely say that she had demonstrated the fact that an office could be artistic, homey, attractive and yet be the place where successful business was carried on.

She surveyed the room in which she sat. French gray walls, amethyst rug and hangings made a background for the gray desks and chairs, the small gray tea-wagon with its purple china and silver. Even her own smock of lavender toned in with the color scheme as she sat at her gray desk, elbows on lavender blotters.

She had started this employment bnsiness on what her brother called "a shoestring," but little by little her business had grown until she was known, far and wide, as a most successful woman in her line.

She was still young, and many who came in contact with her wondered that she had not married.

They did not know that the only man she had ever cared for had been married and that fate had kindly taken him ont of her path.

Absorption in her work had healed the hnrt, but nothing had ever come along to take the place of her early romance. Sometimes she accused herself of having hired young Frank Barlow because he reminded her in certain expressions, of the other man. Frank was only two years her junior hut she had taught him nearly all that he knew about the publicity and advertising end of her employment business and she felt a superior attitude toward him, in years.

Their work brought them very closely in contact. They had long conferences together; they frequently had lunch together.

Agnes always had flowers in her office. In a lavender vase on the tea-wagon there were a rose or two, sweet peas or daisies. In a bowl on her own desk there were always fragrant blossoms. And always, about the person of Agnes, there seemed to be a subtle fragrance as of many flowers. No one conld tell whether it came from the blossoms or from her garments.

One spring evening when the office had been very busy and there had been little time for quiet, peaceful, concentrated thought, Agnes had a fancy that she would like to go down to her private office. There was no place in the world in which she felt so much at rest, so completely at home as in her bnsiness environment where she had at last surrounded herself with the things and colors that radiate happiness.

"Why shouldn't I have a lovely office?" she would ask. "I spend the greater part of my day in it. It is home to me."

She entered the outer hall quietly, and looked through into her own sanctum through the open door. A silver crescent moon was framed between the soft amethyst hangings of the western window. A perfume from the flowers greeted her. It was warm and soothing. She stood drinking in the beauty and peace of it all. A strange loneliness caught at her heart-strings and n sigh escaped her before she stepped within the room.

Then she started back. Sitting in her chair, his head hurled in the smock she always left hanging in the office was—Frank Barlow. What could be wrong? Why was he here? He—

She felt herself breathing quickly. Could it be that he—he cared for her? He seemed always just the business associate, friend, companion.

She heard him move. Had he heard her?

She switched on the light in the onter office and he quickly rose to his feet.

"Miss Osborn," he stammered.

"Are you working?" she asked, as calmly as she could.

"No—not yet. I came down hecauss I felt that perhaps I might do a little work. There seems nothing else half so interesting as—"

He couldn't go on. He knew from the way in which she was looking at him, that she had seen him with his face hurled in her smock?

Agnes sat down in the big gray leather chair near the desk.

"Do you care so much about—the business, Frank?" she asked.

He did not reply at once, hut his fingers tightened on the folds of the garment he had tried to conceal.

"I might as well tell you that I have heen trying for months to keep from loving you so entirely, so completely, so utterly," he said, "I have come down here, night after night, just to touch the fragrant garment that is so much a part of you, to sit in your chair, to breathe in the personality of you that makes this office a heaven."

"Frank—Frank," was all Agnes, the bnsiness woman, could say.

"I know I have no right. I realize that you look on me only as a hnsiness help that—"

"That I depend on you, entirely. That, unconsciously, you have heea making me lean on you," added Agnes. "I did not know until I saw yon with your head down on my desk that—that I—"

He had jumped to his feet and was leaning over her in the moonlit office.

"Is it possible that you—care?" be asked.

"It is impossible that I should not," she said.

A long time afterwards he said: "And I have received—employment, Miss Osborn?"

"Permaneat," she said.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The Book of Joshua breathes the spirit of courage and conquest exactly suited to the times in which we live. The story opens with the call of Joshua and his divine investiture as successor to Moses. The majestic phrases in which this call is eouched ring like a bugle note down the ages: "Arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel. Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses. Be strong and of good courage, for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land, which I sware unto their fathers to give them."

Just across the Jordan, directly in their path, was the walled city of Jericho, like an ancient Gibraltar at the gateway of Palestine. It seemed impregnable, and a heartless stout would have quailed at the prospect of a seige. However, Joshua obedient to the divine command, did the simple thing Jehovah bade him do, and the apparently insurmountable difficulty disappeared.

Joshua moved on to Sheckem, where he established his headquarters for the conquest of Canaan. From this eity as a center his conquering army moved against the inhabitants of the land. The history of the Israelitish invasion is told in the first five chapters of this book.

Following the battle of Jericho eame the engagement at Ai which resulted so disastrously to the Israelites, because of the sin of Achan, who, concealed in his tent a wedge of gold, two hundred sheckels of silver, and a goodly Babylonish garment, which had been consecrated for an offering nuto the Lord. This covetousness cost Israel the victory.

However, after the execution of the wicked Achan, a new attack was launched against Ai, in which Joshua employed much the same military strategy as General Foch used in his flexible lines. A large force was held in reserve, a much smaller force sent forward to assault the town. These shock troops were instructed to give way and pretend to be in full retreat. Then suddenly, the reserves rushed into battle, annihilating their enemies, and capturing the city, the liers in wait being behind the city as well as on the flanks of the attacking Israelites. Then when the men of Ai came out of their city to repel the invaders the Israelites from their ambush in the rear rushed in, set fire to the city and carried away much spoil while the garrison was being cut to pieces by the army in front.

Few books would serve better as a hand book of command and tactics than the Book of Joshua.

Practically all of the cities famous in Holy Writ were founded by the ancient inhabitants of this land, and were taken over by the invaders and colonized by them. Shechem, Samaria, Ramah, Shiloh, Akron, Gideon, Gath, Askelon, Gaza, Hebron, Jerusalem and Bethlehem breathes the very spirit of revelation, and about every one of them golden legends cluster.

The period of the Judges, which the Book of Judges covers, has been estimated all the way from 150 to 450 years. Perhaps 300 years would more nearly represent the fact.

This is a book of romance, a record of great exploits, dealing with alternate oppressions and deliverances, alternate periods of peace and war.

Theocracy was the form of Israel's government at this time. God himself as the direct Ruler of the nation, called from time to time special leaders who coped with national emergencies as they arose.

The people did not take the divine government very seriously, religion being the only unifying force present as a bond of solidarity among the twelve tribes, so that a state bordering upon anarchy largely prevailed. This caused national development to proceed very slowly. It was not until the days of the kingdom that Israel became a political unit, and a great nation.

The word that comes out of this book almost as its key word is, disobedience. Indeed from the moment of their deliverance from Egypt down to the very last day of their national integity, they were disobedient. All along the way to the promised land they had been disobedient in the land they continued disobedient; they had been commanded to exterminate the inhabitants, they did not do it; they did not keep themselves from idols.

This disobedience led to conflicts with Mesapotamians, the Moabites, the Ammorites and Philistines.

The several Judges of Israel were Othniel, Eliud, Shamgar, Deborah, a woman, and Barak, Gideon, Abimilech, Tola, Jair, Jeptha, Ibsan, Elon, Abdon, Sampson and Samuel.

Of these Gideon, Jeptha and Samson were by far the most picturesque and heroic in their achievements.

Gideon, whose famous band of 300 overthrew the Midianites by the hill Moreh, will always be remembered for his mighty military achievements and for his equally mighty faith, tested by the fleece wet when all the ground about it was dry, and again dry when the earth about it was wet with dew.

Jeptha, whose prowess in destroying forty and two thousand of the Ephraimites at the passages of the Jordan, where they were detected as strangers by their pronunciation of the word Shibboleth, has found immortality in a pieee of undying ritual known and loved by thousands the whole world round.

Sampson will ever live as one of the world's greatest heroes, who despite the weakness of the spirit and unconscious loss of spiritual power, yet in the darkness of his empty eye-sockets finally saw the light that never again shown on land or sea, and fought the enemies of Israel and Israel's God until the Temple of Dagon crushed the last spark of life from his body in the cateclymic destruction which slew more of the Phllistines in his death then he had slain in his life.

Every small boy who has ever heard the story of this Judge revels in his carrying away of the gates of Gaza, his snapping the new ropes like burnt tow, and his mighty conquest of the Philistines with no better weapon than the jaw bone of an ass. His riddle, too, is better known than any in the world: "Out of the eaten came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness."

If modern readers are looking for thrills, read the Book of Judges.

MT. LAKE PARK

This is the time when we should think more and talk less.

There seems to be a disposition to minimize such success a few are having and raise to the nth degree the many who have failed.

In every gathering, both men and women, a lively topic of conversation concerns the man or family who has lost a fortune; or, "it is said" that this or that merchant is on the verge of having to close up his shop; or that this or that man has turned out to be a crook, or that a certain financial institution has suffered heavy withdrawals.

Heaven knows that things are bad enough without making them worse by loose talk concerning matters about which we have no definite knowledge, and which, in a majority of instances, have no foundation in fact. Such irresponsible mouthings do not help a community to recover its equilibrium.

If we would but realize that we, along with other nations, are passing through the most gigantic struggle in history for economic and social stability, and that the war now being waged against unseen forces is fraught with more danger to our social, religious and economic future than all the German hordes of the World War, or sectional division in our Civil War, we would deem it a patriotic duty to push, not to pull; boost, not knock.

Let us remember that the solid business men of our community and of other communities, are doing the very best they ean under adverse circumstances, and that they are worthy of our confidence and esteem now the same as heretofore.

Conditions have changed.

The men of the community have not.

We can help a lot by refusing to repeat false and sometimes malicious tales.

If the first three days of spring rule the roost for the rest of the period, then we are certainly in for a disagreeable three months. But as everything seems to be going by contraries, and the world seems to be upside down, we may have beautiful weather from now on.

Misses Annie and Emma Springer, who have been spending the winter months with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comerford, returned to their homes in California, Pa., on Monday.

Va., in which he suffered the fracture of his collar-bone and several ribs. He is now in a hospital at Glendale, W. Va., and will be brought to the Park as soon as he is sufficiently recovered to permit the trip.

Mrs. Margaret Berghaus, who has been seriously ill, is somewhat improved at this time.

Mrs. E. O. Fouch continues quite ill at her home.

Miss Myrtie Finnell is confined to her home by illness.

Turney. They were accompanied on their return to Cincinnati this morning by Mrs. J. A. Turney, who will visit her son Harry, in Cleveland, Ohio, for a few days.

At a meeting of the Mayor and City council on Saturday night, it was decided to lower the wage rate of town workers 5 cents per hour. Preparations were also made for installing one additional fire hydrant.

BEER SALES PLANS IN THE COUNTIES ARE CONSIDERED

expenditures of the public schools in aggregate in excess of $1,000,000, were introduced in the Senate today by Chairman Ridgely P. Melvin of the Senate Education Committee.

The first of these measures ealls for a scaled reduction in teachers' pay as follows:

Salaries under $1,200, 10 per cent.

Salaries $1,200 to $1,799, 11 per cent.

Salaries $1,800 to $2,399, 12 per cent.

Salaries $2,400 to $2,999, 13 per cent.

Salaries $3,000 to $3,599, 14 per cent.

Salaries $3,600 or above, 15 per cent.

Teachers and principals in white elementary and high schools, teachers in colored elementary and high schools, teachers and principals in colored high schools, county superintendents, supervising teachers, helping teachers and attendance officers would be affected by this eut.

The bill further provides that there shall be no increase in salary over and above the salaries paid in 1932-33 because of additional experience.

To Limit Supervisors

Another feature of the measure is a provision that no county is to be required to employ more than one supervising or helping teacher but the employment of additional supervisors shall be optional and at county expense.

The second bill reduces from 60 to 47 cents the amount a county must levy in order to share in the equalization fund. It also provides for including in the minimum program the necessary costs of transporting pupils to public high schools.

A reduction from 34 to 30 cents in the minimum tax which must be levied for school maintenance in non-equalization fund counties is provided in the third proposal.

Normals To Charge Tuition

The fourth act makes it possible for the board of education to fix uniform fees and tuition charges at the state normal schools for white students.

It was upon the assumption that fees would be charged, Senator Melvin explained, that the normal school appropriations were reduced.

Senator Melvin said that his bills carried out Governor Ritchie's program as recommended in his revised budget. The program, he said, had been agreed to by the State Board of Education.

County Agent's Column

J. H. CARTER
Resident County Agent,
Office: Court House, Oakland, Md.

Farm Crops

Soil fertility and good seed are two of the most important factors in producing a profitable crop, states County Agent Carter. It is not good management for one to expect a maximum crop production on land that has been neglected and let "run down" in supply of plant food.

All farmers know the requirements of a productive piece of land. Why not check over your crop rotation asking yourself a few questions and see if you have played the game "put' and "take" fair with your farm?

Some questions are: Is my farm well drained, especially land that is being cultivated? Do I replace the lime as it is taken out in crop and by pasturing? Do I make extensive use of legumes to help keep up the supply of nitrogen in the soil and cut cost in grain feed bill? Have I kept up the humus content of my land? Do I plow from 7 to 10 inches deep? (Depth of plowing depends upon subsoil and previous plowing) If the above factors mentioned in the questions are taken care of properly you may expect a profitable crop in a normal season if good seed and cultural practices are used.

Anyone not using good seed on productive land is not giving the farm a chance to give maximum returns. It is just as important to have pure disease-free seed as it is to have purebred livestock free of disease. A good farmer would not think of keeping the "runt" pig for a brood sow or the "runt" calf for a herd bull. Then, why should he expect to grow crops from inferior seed?

In my opinion fewer acres and better care will net greater returns, Mr. Carter said.

Beyond The County

At Miami Beach, Fla., a golf professional, alleged to be a "Gentleman Raffles", has been arrested charged with looting appartments of the rich to the extent of $50,000 in jewels.

At Rome, Italy, Premier Mussolini and Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald, of England, met in a series of conferences in an attempt to avert a threatened European war.

In Oregon, scrip is being circulated, the one dollar denomination, "one buck", showing the picture of a buck deer with antlers.

In Rome, Italy, Duke Abuzzi, one time suitor of Katherine Elkins, daughter of the late Senator Elkins of West Virginia, died, a bachelor, having declared that if he couldn't marry Miss Elkins he would not marry at all.

In Uniontown, Pa., Judge Hudson, stating that the liquor law was still in force in Fayette county, sentenced one man to pay $1,000 fine and a year in jail, another violator $500 and another $1,000, each of the latter being given a year in jail, also.

In Idaho, a man, believing he had dropped his watch overboard from a small boat, dived three times in the icy waters in search for it, only to find it on his dresser at home when he returned for supper.

At Washington President Roosevelt expects to begin wielding the economy axe, thereby lopping off 500 million dollars in expenditure, including 280 millions in reduced veterans compensation.

At Aiken, S. C., a wholesale grocer placed a bucket of eggs at the window of a bank for deposit, but in the bottom was several thousand dollars, hidden by the 2 dozen eggs on top, to fool would-be hold-ups.

At Cincinnati, O., and other down-river midwestern towns, the worst flood since 1913 raged through the Ohio Valley from West Virginin through Indiana.

At Brownsville, Texas, an evangelist, noting that a circus was to stage a parade while he was holding services, put on a counter parade at the same hour the circus was holding one with the result that the revival meeting was generously attended.

SENATE IN FIGHT OVER GAS TAX DISTRIBUTION

County and Baltimore Senators Clash Over City's Right to Thirty Percent of Money

WAS APPROVED BY HOUSE

ANNAPOLIS, MD., March 30—The Senate early today refused to concur in a House of Delegates amendment to the budget bill which would give to Baltimore City a thirty percent share of gasoline tax receipts.

The vote was 17 to 9 for non-concurrence. The Senate's decision threw the bill into conference.

ANNAPOLIS, March 29— Senator David G. McIntosh (D., Baltimore county), tonlght moved that the Senate do not concur in House amendments to the budget bill granting the city a thirty percent share in gasoline tax receipts.

The McIntosh motion was seconded by a member of county senators and brought Senator Benjamin H. McKindless (D., Baltimore City third district), to his feet in defense of the amendment.

In answer to a question raised earlier in the day by Senator McIntosh as to the constitutionality of the increase, Senator McKindless declared that there was no constitutionality question involved.

"While it is true that the constitution says that the legislature cannot increase budget appropriations, this 30 percent item was originally fixed by the governor, reduced in the Senate Finence Committee, and later restored by the House.

Half the population of the state, the senator pointed out, is in the city of Baltimore, contending that it was not unreasonable in view of this to ask that the city get 30 percent of the gasoline tax.

"Is there any other city in the country that receives any share of any state highway taxes?" Senator William N. Andrews (Rep., Dorchester), demanded.

"I really couldn't answer that," Senator McKindless responded. "I haven't the faintest idea how many cities there are in the United States.

Unfairness Charge

For the next half hour, Senators McKindless and Andrews exchanged views on the relative merits of county and city support. Asserting the 80-20 division which has been extant up to the present time has never been a fair one, Senator McKindless pointed out that the House had voted a 70-30 split.

"Those delegates represent the same constituents that we do," Senator McKindless said.

When McKindless had concluded, Senator E. Milton Altfeld (Dem., Baltimore fourth), replaced him on the floor.

"We need money," Senator Altfeld said during an impassioned address on the question, "as well as do the counties. The county tax rate has been benefited by Governor Ritchie's budget changes. What the city asks now is only their just rights."

When Senator Altfeld sat down, Senator Nelson H. Fooks, (Dem., Caroline), chairman of the senate committee on roads and highways, took the floor to defend McIntosh's motion.

Effects of Recent Snow Are Fast Disappearing

The effects of the worst snowstorm of the year, which brought approximately six inches of snow to Garrett county over the week-end are fast disappearing beneath the rays of the sun.

The snow was accompanied by a high wind which made travel difficult due to many drifts. The snowplows of the State Roads Commission, however, kept highways open to traffic.

Temperature remained slightly below freezing.

FIREMEN DISCUSS DANGER OF INJURIES AT MEETING

Citizens Asked Not to Crowd About Fire House at Alarm

After discussing accidents and personal injuries at the last regular meeting of members of the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department an order was issued to the firemen to cease riding the running boards of the nootc the left running boards of the trucks on account of the danger of receiving personal injury.

The fire department is asking the public to cease crowding the doors of the fire house when an alarm is being answered, and citizens are also asked to keep a safe distance from the rear of the fire trucks when following them in automobiles, as there is a chance of some unforseen happening just ahead.

The speed of the trucks has been reduced to the minimum consistent with service requirements and personal injury risks, and the department asks for consideration and cooperation, keeping in mind that the members of the department donate their services for the good of the community in general.

A report from Mountain Lake Park states the installation of another fire plug and that the local department would receive fifty dollars from that municipality in the near future.

Chief Emroy Bolden reports that two hundred feet of leader line and two small nozzles have been purchased and put into service, thus increasing the efficiency of the equipment

When in need of the fire equipment citizens are asked to call the telephone operator, giving her the location of the fire and explicit directions. A great many calls have been sent to the fire house, causing delay. Since the telephone operator can operate the alarm signal from her office, much valuable time can be saved if the above instructions are complied with.

Found Guilty of Stealing Heifer From Hutton Farmer

In the Preston County (W. Va.) Court, in session last week at Kingwood, Dexter Friend was found guilty of stealing a heifer from Spencer Hardesty, a farmer, of near Hutton, and was re-committed to jail for later sentencing by Judge A. G. Hughes.

Brunner Friend and Theodore Smith, also charged with accessories to the crime, entered pleas of guilty after first pleading not guilty, and Judge Hughes said he would consider their cases and would give them light jail sentences.

The heifer was stolen from Hardesty's barn on the night of January 21 or morning of January 22. It was slaughtered in the barnyard and the meat carried away. The men left a trail which was easy for officers to follow and the arrest of the three men was made the same day at Freeport where one quarter of the heifer was found in the home of Brunner Friend and the balance in the home of Dexter Friend. Smith, an accomplice, was arrested later the same day.

Last spring Hardesty's barn was entered and robbed of a calf and during the summer he lost several lambs from his sheepfold.

ESTABLISH KEY STREAMS FOR SEASON OF FISHING

Conservation Department Inaugurates a New Method—Bear Creek Stocked with 3500 Trout

SEASON OPENS SATURDAY

Establishlng certain waters in various counties as "key" streams, the State Conservation Department will inaugurate a new method when the fresh-water trout season opens this Saturday in an attempt to better distribute the efforts of those who take to the brooks and runs in search of the gamey speckled beauties.

The "key" streams have all been stocked heavily, and if the plan of the Conservation Department works out so that all anglers do not flock to one or two of the best known streams and fish it to death during the first few days the key streams and others that warrant it will be restocked from time to time during the open trout season in order to guarantee good sport during the period of fishing.

20,000 Trout Planted

Approximately 20,000 brook and rainbow trout, all of legal size or better, are being retained in the rearing ponds at the trout hatchery stations for the purpose of restocking the streams during the open season.

Garrett county has been well stocked with trout and has the distinction of having the heaviest stocked stream in the State. That is Bear Creek, in which 3500 brook trout were planted.

The official plantings of brook trout in Garrett county streams from October, 1932, to March 11, 1933, is as follows:

Stream	No. Trout
Glade Run	200

Rock Lick	60
Hoyes Run	80

Gap Run	140
Ball Hill Run	140
White Rock Run	500
Bear Creek	3500
Brond Ford	300
Cherry Creek	900
Trout Run	300
Murley Creek	300
Shields Run	300
Herrington Creek	300
Deep Creek Lake	600
Total	9400

Plantings of rainhow trout were as follows:

Youghiogheny River (brood stock)	210
Bear Creek	200
Dunkard Run	100

One hundred thirteen residence fishing licenses have been issued thus far from the clerk's ofnce and 19 non-resident licenses, in preparation for the opening of the season.

The season in Deep Creek is open from April 1 to August 15, while rainbow trout fishing below Swallow Falls in the Youghiogheny river will not be allowed until July 1. Trout taken from streams must be not less than 7 inches in length, according to the fish and game laws, except from Deep Creek Lake, where they must be eight inches in length.

GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY AND ATTEMPT TO DEFRAUD

Jury Renders Verdict On Sixth Count Against Henry Menke; Case Was Hard Fought

OTHER CASES TAKEN UP

With Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan presiding, the second week of the Circuit Court for Garrett county convened Monday morning when the criminal docket was called and a number of cases were disposed of before the Court sitting as a jury, while one or two traversers demanded and were accorded a trial before a jury.

The most important proceeding before the court was the jury trial of Henry Menke, indicted along with Noah Moon for arson. Arrigned, Moon entered a plea of guilty, while Menke asked to be tried before a jury, the case being called Tuesday morning.

To secure a jury more than thirty talismen were summoned by Sherift Haenftling. In choosing the jury the State challenged eight and the defense challenged twenty talismen. The jury was completed early in the afternoon of Tuesday with Floyd Utterback, of Mountain Lake Park, foreman.

Menke's indictment charges him with having set fire to a building for the purpose of participating in a division of the money paid by a fire insurance company in settlement of the loss sustained by the destruction of the furniture in the building.

The chief prosecuting witness was Moon.

It was brought out during the trial that at Cassville, West Va., Menke owned a row of houses, one of which was burned one night. It was also shown that after a residence of eleven days at a point in Pennsylvania all of Menke's household effects were destroyed in a fire which consumed the dwelling occupied by him and for the loss alleged to have been sustained by the destruction of his furniture an insurance company paid him $3,800.

Menke is under a bond of $1,000 for his appearance in the Monongalia county (West Va.) Circuit Court on an indictment charging arson.

The case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon and this morning about ten o'clock that body rendered its verdict of guilty on the sixth count of the indictment which was set out as an attempt to defraud an insurance company and conspiracy. The verdict gives the court power to impose a sentence of from one to five years in the Penitentiary.

The case was hard fought by State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson and E. Ray Jones, who appeared with the State's representative, for the prosecution, while the traverser was represented by W. R. Offutt, A. T. Matthews and Shirley Taylor, the latter of Morgantown.

Other cases heard and determined during the week are as follows:

Laura Weicht, of near Swanton, sale of liquor; plea of guilty entered; $100 fine or six months in the House of Correction. Sentence suspended for one year in each of two cases.

James Hinebaugh, Deer Park, sale of liquor; plea of guilty entered; fined $100 or six months in the House of Correction.

Charles Fiekes, indicted for burglarizing a house in the vicinity of Swanton and stealing therefrom a lot of furniture belonging to a Mrs. Friend, entered a plea of guilty as charged in the indictment.

Mary Coulter, sale of liquor; second offense; $150 or 6 months on the present indictment and 8 months for having been convicted a second time. Both sentences were suspended by the Court.

JESUS MINISTERING TO JEWS AND GENTILES

(World Friendship Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:1-37.

GOLDEN TEXT—And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. John 10:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Little Neighbors.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Foreign Woman Meeting Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Attitude to Other Races.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Ministry of Jesus to All Races.

I. Jesus Dealing With the Pharisees and Scribes (vv. 1-23).

The Pharisees and scribes zealously sought to preserve Judaism from the encroachments of heathenism. In this effort they built up a wall of traditions which in turn obscured the very law of God. As they gathered together unto Christ, he taught them:

1. The emptiness of formal worship (vv. 1-7). The tendency of the human heart is to depart from the life and rest in the form which was calculated to express the life. Christ declared that worship which centered in forms was as empty and meaningless as lip service while the heart is away from God. This kind of service he calls "hypocrisy," and it is common today.

2. It made the Word of God of none effect (vv. 8-13). A case in point was the consecration of earthly goods to escape the responsibilities of caring for one's parents. This made it possible for a man to be living in luxury while his parents were in the poorhouse.

3. The real source of defilement (vv. 14-23). Sin is moral and spiritual. A man is defiled by that which springs out of his soul and not that which enters his mouth. The deliberate choice of the will is the source of defilement (v. 20).

II. Jesus Healing the Daughter of the Syrophenician Woman (vv. 24-30).

In sharp contrast with the apostasy of Israel and their rejection of the Savior, we see in the Syrophenician woman the foregleam of the offer of the Savior to the Gentiles.

1. The mother's awful distress. Her daughter was grievously vexed with the devil. The daughter was the one afflicted, but the mother carried the burden. Doubtless, this Gentile woman had heard of the fame of Jesus, his power to heal, and many times longed for him to come that way that her daughter might be healed. She now came straightway to him.

2. Her fervent appeal for help (vv. 25, 26). She humbly fell at Jesus' feet and besought him to cast the devil out.

3. Her faith rewarded (vv. 27-30).

a. Jesus' apparent refusal (v. 27). According to Matthew he answered her not a word. The reason for his silence was that she appealed to him on the wrong basis, addressing him as the Son of David (Matt. 15:22). An Israelite only had a right to seek his blessing as the Son of David. He was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Jesus said, "Let the children first be filled; for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and cast it unto the dogs."

b. The woman's quick response (v. 28). As soon as she perceived the real difficulty she addressed him as Lord and cried for help (Matt. 15:25-27). Only an Israelite could approach him as the Son of David, but all could come to him and own him as Lord. She willingly took her place as a Gentile, showing her willingness to receive but the crumbs from the children's table.

c. The glorious issue of her faith (vv. 29, 30). Jesus said, "Go thy way, the devil is gone out of thy daughter."

III. Jesus Healing a Deaf-mute (vv. 31-37).

1. The place (v. 31). This is the region where he had healed the Gadarene demoniac and where the people had requested his withdrawal from this country (Mark 5:20), because of the loss of their swine.

2. The method (vv. 33, 34).

a. "He took him aside from the multitude" (v. 33). He did this to avoid publicity.

b. "Put his fingers in his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue" (v. 33). This was a sign language designed to objectify to the man what Jesus was going to do for him.

c. "He looked up to heaven" (v. 34), to show to the man that his help was from God.

d. A command issued (v. 34). The cure was immediate and complete (v. 35).

3. The effect (vv. 36, 37). Though he charged them to "tell no man," so much the more they a great deal published it.

Larger Comprehension

If the message is to come to men with most effect, there is need for larger comprehension on the part of those who proclaim it, as well as of those who lay plans for its release.—John R. Mott.

The Master Light

In our world of the inner life we gratefully acknowledge Christ as the Master light of all our seeing, in whose radiant presence our problems are solved and our faith made plain.

SERIOUS COUGHS RESULT FROM SPREAD OF COLDS

Affect the Chest and Inflame Bronchial Tubes

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Obviously, any serious infection in the windpipe or in the voice box will produce a cough. Any interference with the vocal cords or any growth which prevents their proper opening and closing may be the cause of a constant coughing. Pressure on the windpipe will cause a cough, as sometimes occurs due to enlargement of the lymph glands surrounding the windpipe.

The more serious types of coughing involve colds which have spread down into the chest and produced inflamation of the bronchial tubes. The physician, by the use of his stethoscope, can tell that there is interference with the passage of air through these tubes. Asthmatic constriction of the bronchial tubes may also produce wheezing and coughing.

The other forms of cough that are especially serious are those involving actual changes in the lung tissues such as those due to tuberculosis or fibrous changes in the lungs, and also inflammations of the membranes lining the chest cavity known as the pleura. Such inflammations are called pleurisy.

In addition to these coughs which can be traced to the tissues concerned, the physician is concerned with the condition called whooping cough, and with the development of ulcers in various parts of the throat.

Finally, the child who has had whooping cough may develop the habit of coughing, and even though it is well, continue to whoop and cough for months, perhaps because it has learned that the cough makes it the center of interest. However, such diagnosis is made only with the greatest of difficulty and should never be made unless with certainty that every possible anatomical source of the cough has been studied and eliminated.

This is the important step to be taken in the treatment of any cough; namely, to eliminate or treat the cause as far as possible. After this is done it is possible to quiet coughing by the use of sedative preparations which a physician can prescribe. There are various drugs which tend to loosen a cough and others which tend to lower the threshold of stimulation so as to permit healing without coughing.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

We again turn aside from the regular series to present to our readers a brief story of an outstanding missionary project sponsored by the Maryland Bible Society. Nineteen hundred and thirty-three marks the twentieth anniversary of the Maryland Bible Society's gife of $10,000 to the American Bible Society for the revision and stereotype plates of the Arabic Reference Bible. This worthy enterprise was fostered and carried through by Dr. Franklin Goucher, the honored president of the Maryland Bible Society in 1913, when this subseciption was made. The entire amount was paid in four years.

The importance of this missionary enterprise will be appatent to all Christians when we consider the vast population of the several countries of the world where the religion of Mohammed predominates, and Arabic is the spoken or written language. While it was first spoken in northern Arabia, and does not appear as a written language four or five centuries after Christ, it is now the spoken or sacred language of a population of not less than 200 millions in Africa and in western and a part of southern Asia, large sections of the trans-Caspian region, and very important ethnic groups in the Phillipines and in the East Indies.

The distribution of the Mohammedan religion, shown by a world census of 1932, reveals 20,000 Mohammedans in North America, most of whom may be expected to have a reading knowledge of Arabic, 5,000,000 in Europe, 160,000,000 in Asia, 44,000,000 in Africa, making a grand total of 209,020,000, to say nothing of the Arabic island population.

The total number of Christians of all kinds—Roman Catholics, Greek Orthodox Catholic, Protestant, number through the world approximately 682,400,000.

Statistics are never altogether reliable. However, with a constituency of 209 millions who may be presumed to be capable of reading the Arabic language, one may see how rich and fertile a field is presented for the American Bible Society's work of translating and distributing the Holy Scriptures in that tongue, and how much of the spirit of the seer annimated Dr. Goucher when he advocated the gift of the plates for this glorious work, by the Maryland Bible Society in 1913.

The religion of the prophet Mohammed is and always will be the strongest competitor of Christianity, in Africa and in Asia, It is difficult for a western mind to conceive of the Bible as competing for a place in the religious world with the Koran. But we must never lose sight of the power of racial backgrounds, or of the prejudice men of every ethnic group feel toward what to them is new, or springs from different roots.

Yet the word of our God shall stand forever. When men of open mind in America or Arabia can have the Book in their own tongue, its appeal—when given an opportunity to speak its message—is never lost.

We rejoice that after twenty years the Arabic Bible continues to tell its story, old, yet ever new, to the followers of Mohammed in east and west alike. Thus indeed may the Arabic—the richest, the most flexible, the most difficult, and the most widely diffused of all the Semitic tongues its self be enriched by the message it bears to a waiting world.

The Book of Ruth is a poem in prose, a veritable idyl of the chosen people. It marks the beginning of the family through which the Hebrew nation would fulfill its Messianic mission. Ruth was the great grandmother of David, the family tree is given at the close of this book: "Now these are the generations of Pharez: Pharez begat Hezron, Hezron begat Ram, Ram begat Amminadab, Amminabad begat Nashon, Nashon begat Salmon, and Salmon begat Boaz, and Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat Jesse, and Jesse begat David."

Famine played a very large part in shaping the destinies of the Hebrew people. Abraham was drawn by it to sojourn in Egypt. Egypt usually enjoyed great plenty when famine devastated Palestine and the adjacent country, because of the regular annual overflow of the Nile, carrying the rich alluvial matter gathered from its upper valley out over the sandy shores of the river, and moistening the earth so that the harvests were not only well fertilized but well watered by the life-giving river.

So It happened that when famine overtook Abraham in Canaan, he went down into Egypt. Here the beauty of Sarai, Abraham's wife, attracted Pharoah, who, believing that Sarai was Abraham's sister, as indeed she was, took her into his palace intending to make her his wife. But the Lord plagued Pharoah and all his house with great plagues because of Sarai, revealing through this means the error he had committed and causing him to restore Serai to her husband and to send them both, with all their goods, out of the country. The marvelous preservation of this remarkable woman is demonstrated by the fact that at seventy years of age or more she won by her beauty and winsomeness the hearts of kings.

Famine also drove the entire family of Jacob into Egypt, where they were later held as slaves 400 years, or until the Exodus.

And now famine again becomes the pivot upon which the fortunes of the David line turn. A certain man of Bethlehem—Judah went with his wife and two sons, because of famine in the land, to sojourn in the country of Moab. There the man—Elimelech died. Naomi with her two sons, Mahlen and Chilion, continued in the land where the sons married two Moabitish women, Ruth and Orpah. Very early the two young men died, after which Naomi determined to return to Canaan, having learned that the Lord had visited his people with bread.

Orpah readily consented to remain in Moab, there to seek another husband. Ruth, however, clung to her mother-in-law, and pledged her loyalty in language that has added sanctity to many a family union since that distant day: Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest I will go, and where thou logest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people and thy God my God. Where thy diest, will I die and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me and more also, if ought but death part thee and me."

A love like this could not be denied. There followed the romance in the barley fields of Boaz, her marriage with this chivalrous son of Rahab, and the reward of her fidelity in becoming an ancestor of the Messiah. A thousand years later the world's Savior was born in Bethlehem of the family started by Ruth, announced by the Angels on the shepherd hills above the grainfields where Ruth gleaned her columns of barley.

NOT TO BE FORGOTTEN

A great deal is heing said about relief for the unemployed in this country, and everyone of course wants to help this unfortunate class of our citizens and to put those who are jobless back to remunerative work as soon as possible. This is our first duty. There are,it is said, about twelve million unemployed people in the United States. That is a terribly large number and in itself mute evidence of the neccssity for relieving the situation as fast as possible.

But there are some facts which ought not to be lost sight of. There are thirty-eight million people in the country who are still employed. They must not be forgotten, either. And one reason they must not be forgotten is that it is on them that we must count for support of any program to relieve the unemployemnt situation. The large army of the jobless must have immediate help, and is getting such help. The aid, however, and this must not be forgotten, must come from those fortunate ones who are still employed. Even the federal government cannot get money out of the air. It must ease it by taxing those who are still working.

In framing any program for the relief of the unemployment situation, and to put the idle back to work, we must see to it that the legistlation is sound and practical. If it is not sound and practical; if money is wasted and the burden of taxes increased there will be a further slump in business and more increases in the number of the unemployed. Depression feeds on itself. The greater the burdens which private enterprise and the individual citizen have to bear, the greater stagnation, and the more relief which is necessary. On the other hand as budgets are balanced, tax burdens lessened, confidence regained there is a quickening of the business pulse which will mean reemployment for the idle and less necessity for relief of the unemployed.

The best way back to normalcy is business and employment is through sane retrenchment and not through impractical schemes which instead of relieving the situation only add to the troubles of those who are still carrying on and doing their best to help in the present unpleasant situation.

UNITED STATES VICTIM OF CHEAP FOREIGN MONEY.

The United States is already the victim of cheap money—not of cheap money made in America, but of the depreciated currencies of foreign nations which enables these nations to undersell the American manufacturer in his own market, despite the provisions of our tariff laws, according to an interesting article in the current issue of the National Republic, The author is former Congressman Frank Crowther, of New York, and he says, in part:

Depreciated foreign currencies are serving as stepladders to scale the United States tariff wall. Several bills were introduced in the first session of the Seventy-second Congress: H. R. 8557 by Mr. Crowther. H. R. 8688 by Mr. Hawley and in the second session, H. R. 13999 by Mr. Hill. The purpose of this proposed legislation was to re-establish the tariff rates on imports that had been reduced by depreciated foreign currencies. At the public hearings held hy the Ways and Means Committee some fifty witnesses testified and twenty briefs were filed.

"The opposition to the passage of this remedial legislation came almost entirely from the so-called converting paper mills who were enjoying a material advantage by purchasing their wood pulp from European countries who had gone off the gold standard and materially depreciated their currencies.

"The industries hardest hit by depreciated currencies include pottery, steel, rugs and carpets, toys, metal novelties, salmon, tuna and sardine canning, electric storage batteries, pig iron, coke, anthracite coal, paper and fibre, electric equipment and lamps, and textiles of cotton, wool, silk, and rayon.

"Nearly every state in the Union is seriously affected by the resulting compensation and from Maine to California American producers raised their voices in protest against the demoralization of local markets and industries due to the depreciation of foreign exchange. Two serious problems were presented: first, the unfair competition the American producers were suffering from and second, the loss in revenue to the Treasury by decreased customs collections. The most conservative estimate submitted evidenced a loss of twenty million dollars in revenue annually under present foreign currency values.

"An article valued at one pound with a fifty per cent ad valuation duty entered the port of New York in 1930 at $4.86 plus $2.43, or a landed cost of $7.29. With the pound at $3.40 plus the fifty per cent duty of $1.70, the article's landed cost is $5.10, a differential of $2.19.

"What can the American producer do to retain his share of the business? Cheapen the product and reduce wages. He must act on one or possibly both of these alternatives unless he throws up the sponge and quits. If he follows the line of least resistance and quits, that means another contribution to the unemployment tragedy."

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MARYLAND

To Our Depositors and Customers:—

Due to the regulations recently issued by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency, this bank has not as yet been licensed to reopen on an unrestricted basis. The reason for the delay in receiving our license to reopen is due entirely to the fact that the bank had large investments in bonds which have depreciated in value during the present unprecedented slump in market values of securities of all kinds.

Under the new Department ruling, banks are required to carry these securities as an asset at present market prices, regardless of the intrinsic value of the securities.

We wish to assure our depositors and customers that prompt steps have been taken to meet the requirements of the Secretary of the Treasury in this regard, and we hope to to able to satisfy these requirements in the very near future and receive our license to reopen on an unrestricted basis.

We desire to thank our depositors and friends who have borne with us during this trying time and we ask that they disregard the false and unfounded rumors that have been circulated and that we may have your continued confidence and support until we can meet the situation and again be in a position to serve you as we have in the past.

In the course of the next few days our depositors will be fully informed as to the plans being made to reopen our bank.

Pending the authorization to reopen on an unrestricted basis, we have been authorized by the Comptroller of the Currency to accept new deposits which are subject to full withdrawal at any time.

We sincerely hope that our customers will avail themselves of this service until complete reopening of the bank.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Just how far the present Congress, and espccially the Senate, which is not bound by iron clad rules as Is the House, intends to go in conferring dictatorial powers on the President, will probably be disclosed in the not-distant future. Such powers were given to Mr. Roosevelt in the matter of budget balancing and reorganization of the government, because it was generally realized by Republicans and Democrats alike that a crisis had arisen and the job could be only done by the chief executive. President Hoover had sought the right to reorganize the government but was blocked by a Democratic Congress.

But now we are told there is to be another request for a grant of authority to the President by Congress, and especially by the Senate. It was annuonced the other day by the State Department that congressional authority would be sought by the President before he started out on the more or less long and winding road of negotiating trade treaties. The reason for this was said to be that European nations do not like the idea of making negotiations with the executive arm of our government when they know that the agreement is apt to be upset because the Senate fails to ratify it. In this respect it was pointed out that after President Wilson had gone to France and taken part in the negotiation, of the Treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations, the Senate refused to ratify the document and afterward negotiated a separate treaty with the defeated powers. The European powers, it is said felt that they had "bought a pig in a poke" because the Senate refused to ratify what President Wilson had agreed to.

It is true that European politicians were very critical of this action of the Senate for many years afterward, and that they do not yet like our method of negotiating international agreements, through the President with the advice and consent of the Senate as provided for by the Constitution. But it must be remembered that at the time of the Versailles negotiations, the powers of Europe had ample notice that the Senate, as representative of the American people was not in accord with Mr. Wilson's ideas of putting our country into the League of Nations. So they really had no cause for complaint. The fact is that the European nations conduct their treaties through representatives accredited to the government in power and the people are never consulted about the merits or defects of the treaties. Europe is unable therefore to understand our constitutional provision for the ratification by the Senate, an independent arm of the government, responsible, not to the President, or the Secretary of State, but to the American people.

The argument that the President is always handicapped in treaty making because the Senate is apt to upset the pact will not hold water. There is never any misapprehension, when the negotiation of an international pact is in progress, as to how the American Senate stands on the project. The senators of all political parties at such critical times do not hesitate to express their opinion either at the White House or on the floor of the Senate. If the President takes the wishes of the Senate, as representatives of the people of the various states, into consideration—and there is no reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt would not do so—then there need be no hesitation or emharrassment about foreign negotiations as traditionally conducted.

The Senate has always been jealous of its treaty control power and there is no reason to believe that it will now surrender any constitutional rights. There will be no crisis like the banking situation to be dealt with when these international negotiations are taken up, and there will be plenty of time for discussion and consultation with Congress. At any rate, this ultra-modern tendency of clothing the chief executive with dictatorial powers will receive a real test when the proposal outlined above comes up in the Senate, if it ever does come up.

Brush Burners Warned of Flre Hazards in April

Careless use of fire in connection with farming opcrations, as in the burning of brush, clearing ditch banks, etc., was responsible for more than 300 forest fires in Maryland during 1932, according to Richard Kilbourne, Forester for the University of Maryland Extension Service. This figure amounts to about one-fourth of all forest fires started in the State during the past year, Mr. Kilbourne points out, and all could have been prevented through care and a little forethought. During the last seven years that records have been kept by the State Department of Forestry, nearly 1,500 fires, started through carelessness, have been recorded, and the property damage has amounted to $383,000.

The Maryland law, It is pointed out, places entire responsibility for costs and damages upon the individual who permits the fire to escape and, as the escape of fire is considered primafacie proof of carelessness or neglect, flagrant violators are subject to fine or imprisonment or both. Hence, it behooves everyone to carefully consider the possible results before lighting any fire.

However, if it is found absolutely necessary to use fire in cleaning up, it is emphasized by Mr. Kilbourne that a few simple rules be observed.

All brush to be burned should be put in small, compact piles and a wide path or fire line, free from grass, logs, leaves or debris should be cleared from around the area. If a field is to be burned off, then ten or more furrows should be plowed around the field first, leaving no grass exposed in the furrows.

Brush should never be burned in extremely dry or windy weather and during the fire season, from March 15 to June 30 and October 1 to December 1, fires may be made only by a wise choicc of time and the use of extreme care.

Sufficient help should be on hand at all times to cope with any emergency that may arise, Mr. Kilbourne points out, and sufficient tools should be available for instant use. Burning should be done late in the afternoon, preferably after three o'clock, and against the wind or on the uphill side.

Last but by no means least, fire should never be left without a watchman until the last spark is out.

Give The Pastures Good Care

At this time of year the question of whether it will pay the farmers and dairyman to top-dress his pasture is uppermost in the minds of many. As a rule pastures are the most neglected part of the farm. They will give a profitable rcturn for the care and attention given to them, especially when the acreage on the farm is limited. Some good practices to follow to get the maximum from the pasture are: harrowing and reseeding when the stand of grass is not thick; mowing down the weeds at least once a year before they go to seed; scattering the droppings with a special harrow; top-dressing each year with manure, fertilizer, or both; and applying lime when the soil is strongly acid.

Onc of the latest practlces which some farmers are trying out is top-dressing rather intensively a small area of good grass located conveniently to the barn. It is well to remember that a good top-dressing of complete fertilizer will increase the yield of grass many times from two to three fold.

Only such an area as can be kept grazed down by the cattle should be top-dressed and by means of a system of rotation, which is still in the experimental stage, cattle and plots can be alternated so as to permit fertilizing and growth of grass.

In working the rotation system the pastures are divided into smaller areas and on good glade land and other rich soils one-fourth an acre per cow to be pastured is all that is necessary. This may be increased on average pasture to one-half acre per cow.

This area should then be fenced in and top-dressed in March with 600 pounds, or more to the acre, of some good mixed fertilizer such as early potato fartilizer, high in nitrogen. The plot should be ready for grazing ten days to two weeks earlier than the unfertilized area and will partly take the place of barn feeding for that time.

When the fertilized plot has been grazed down, the cattle are taken off and put on the regular pasture which should be ready by that time. The fertilized plot should then receive a second, smaller top-dressing of 100 pounds to the acre. This second top-dressing is composed of nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia or any other soluable fertilizer. Then, later in the summer, when the regular pasture is over, the fertilized pasture will again be ready with a good stand of grass.

PLANTING SALMON HERE TRIED HALF CENTURY AGO

Large Number in Youghiogheny And Savage Rivers

Experiments of planting Chinook salmon in Western Maryland waters were tried more than a half century ago, according to some fishing notes of Peter C. Chambliss, writing in the Sunday Sun. Mr. Chambliss writes:

"While the pros and cons are flying thick and fast following the announcement recently that the United States Bureau of Fisheries and the State Conservation Department are going to try out the experiment of planting Chinook salmon in out waters, it is interesting to know that more than half a century ago efforts were made to stock various Maryland waters with two species of salmon following some little success with that line in Delaware.

"The House and Senate Documents of 1878 contains among other things a most voluminous report of the State Commissioner of Fisheries in Maryland whlch, according to notation, was read In the House of Delegates on January 10, 1878 and ordered printed.

"The report addressed to his Excellency, John Lee Carroll, Governor of Maryland, was made by T. B. Ferguson, commissioner, and occupied 125 pages in the book of documents, being in itself a volume of goodly proportions. There were many prints and tables showing the propagation and distribution of fish.

"Both the Salmo salar of the northern Atlantic coast and the Salmo quinnant of the Pacific were tried in Maryland waters, but though it is not recordcd in this report of the success of either in this State, it is interesting to read the notes on Delaware:

" 'But to us in Maryland of more importance is the reappearance in the Delaware of salmon of both varieties: the Salmo salar of the northern Atlantic and the Salmo quinnant of the Pacific. I have received authenticated accounts of the capture of one weighing 8½ pounds at Riverton and one weighing 9 pounds, taken between Bordcntown and Trenton, and have myself seen a largc femade Penobscot salmon with maturc eggs running from her which was taken near Easton in the act of spawning. Thcse indications of the successful introduction of the salmon into the Delaware . . . strengthens our hopcs and confidence in the results of our efforts as the Delaware is not so unlike our own rivers.' . . .

"Subsequently the report tells of receiving thousands of salmon eggs which werc hatched " 'at the Hatching House" ' and continues:

" 'The total number of California salmon planted (in Maryland) during the two years ('76 and '77) is . . . 1,644,304.

" 'We have made the effort to stock Maryland waters with this variety of salmon on the very large scale shown as we are inclined to believe their introduction will prove successful. . . .

" 'That the eastern salmon can be acclimated at least in the Susquehanna and the Potomac seems now to be possible. We have from time to time placed a few thousand of the Penobscot salmon in the tributaries of these rivers.'

"The table showing the distribution of thc California salmon in Maryland waters during the years 1876 and 1877 brings out that they were planted in the Gunpowder, the Little Gunpowder, the Potomac, Wintres run, the Youghiogheny, the Savage river and the Patuxent.

"But coming back to the Chinook salmon proposition. It seems like to us that is a fine little example of a "tempest in a teapot"—the teapot in this instance being Deep Creek Lake.

"Thc facts, as given out by Commissioner Earle, are these: The State Conservation Department, through the coopcration of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, has decided to try an experiment in the planting of fish in Maryland waters. The species in the Chinook salmon; otherwise known as the Columbia river salmon. Thc Conservation Department has been furnished 4,000 five-inch fish, of which it plans to plant 2,000 in Deep Creek Lake, a wonderful body of cold water in Garrett county, and the balance, perhaps in the upper waters of the Potomac and the Susquehanna, both splendid streams.

"The announcement of the experiment has brought forth rounds of applause (?) that sound like razzing to our ears. Some have rushed into print to get their prophecies of failure before thc public even before thc experimcnt has been tried out.

"It is a well-established fact that the young of the salmon remain In the waters in which they are reared for somc timc before they seek thc sea and it is on this thcory, in the last analysis, that the Conservation Department plans to go ahead with the planting of the salmon. Commissioner Earle figures that In planting the salmon he may in time be giving the opportunlty to anglers to land perhaps a five-pound fish of the species before they are prompted by nature to leave the waters where they were reared and carry out their life cycle.

"Deep Creek Lake, the Susquehanna and the upper waters of the Potoma contain all the essentials of fish growth and we hope that he gives the salmon a break by allowing them to enjoy Maryland waters even for but a limited period."

BITTINGER

Love wrought long with a tender smile
The heart of man to win;
Hate sought too, for those he might beguile,
But his best was a loathsome smile.

March continues in our midst with all the gestures and characteristics of winter.

Attendance Officer John Fitzwater, of Oakland, accompaned by Constable Andrew Shartzer, of the same city, were official callers in this village last Saturday afternoon.

Messrs. C. E. Ellithorp and Gilbert Green, of this community, made a business trip to Oakland one day last week.

Merchant and Mrs. Oliver C. Buckle motored to Meyersdale, Pa., last Saturday evening.

Mrs. Perry Broadwater, Claude Broadwater, Ethelene Broadwater, John Beitzell and Randall Beachy, all of this place, were in attendance upon the grand jury at Oakland on Monday of last week.

John Lichliter, of Salisbury, Pa., a dealer in maple sugar and maple syrup, purchased a large quantity of maple syrup from local manufacturers during the past week.

George Stark and Adam Snyder, of this village, and Gus and Lester Hare, of Jennings, furnished some exjoyable music at the Parent-Teacher meeting held in the village school house last Thursday evening.

THE AMERICAN VILLAGE

One phase of the rural trend of population which has been almost overlooked is considered in a monograph on rural social trends just published by former President Hoover's Committee on Social Trends. That phase is the steady growth of the rural villages.

Not all the population drift out of the cities has becn to the farms. America has a larger scctor of citizcns who cannot bc classed as city dwellers, nor yct as farmers. They are, those who live in the small towns, the tradesmen, the professional workers, the common laborers. During the years from 1920 to 1930, when the strictly farming population was rapidly losing ground, the rural village population steadily gained. In 1920 there were approximately 20,000,000 Americans living in the villages. In 1930 this number had risen to 23,600,000. Meanwhile, the farms had lost only 1,300,000. So more than the gain in village population came from elsewhere than the surrounding farms.

Since 1930 the upward trend of farm population has more than made up the losses during the 1920s. But the migration has all been to the farms. The villages have continued to grow. And today more than one-quarter of the nation's population lives ncither on the farm nor in the cities, but in the villages, a point which cannot be ignored in any social planning for the future. The American villages and village life are major factors in any national problem.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

One-Dish Meals as Time and Money Savers

A whole dinner in one dish makes an inexpensive, time-saving meal, especially for busy mothers. The housewife can make very appetizing dishes which will provide, at minimum cost, all the kinds of food the body needs. These dishes are much less trouble to serve and may be much less trouble to prepare than the same foods in separate dishes. They are often a convenient means of utilizing leftovers.

Onion Soup With Cheese

Twelve medium-sized onions, chopped fine, ¼ cup butter, 1 quart boiling water, 2 quarts meat broth, ½ cup flour, ½ cup cold water, salt to taste, pepper, toast, 4 to 5 cups cheese, finely grated.

Cook the chopped onions In the fat until yellow, add to the hot water, and simmer for 20 minutes, or until tender. Add the meat broth. Blend the flour and cold water, add some of the hot liquid, mix well, and stir into the soup. Add the salt and pepper, and cook for a few minutes. Pour the soup into bowls or soup plates, place on top of each a slice of toasted bread, sprinkle the cheese over the bread and soup, and serve at once.

Corn Chowder

Two and one-quarter quarts diced raw potatoes, 1¼ quarts boiling water, ¾ pound diced salt pork, 9 ounces chopped onion, pepper, 5 No. 2 cans corn, 1¼ cups dried whole milk, 5 cups cold water, 2¼ tablespoons of salt.

Cook the diced potatoes in the boiling water about 10 minutes. Fry the salt pork until brown and very crisp, then remove the pork and cook the onions in the fat. Add the onions and corn to the potatoes, and cook until the potatoes are done. Mix the cold water with the dried milk, (1 quart of fresh milk may be substituted for the water and dried milk), beat until smooth, and add to the first mixture with the salt and pepper. Bring to the boiling point and serve over crackers. (Dried skim milk may be substituted for the dried whole milk. If this is done the amount of salt pork should be increased. One pound of dried skim milk will make 5 quarts of liquid milk).

Peanut Loaf

Two and one-half cups chopped peanuts, 5 cups bread crumbs, 5 tablespoons melted fat, 1¼ to 2 cups milk, 3 eggs, 1¼ teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Mix, using enough milk to make a moist loaf. Put in buttered pan and bake an hour in a moderate oven, keeping covered the first half hour. Baste once or twice with melted fat. Turn onto a hot platter and sprinkle with chopped peanuts.

The Fable of the Right One for Kirby

By GEORGE ADE

©, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ONCE there was a prominent and unduly prosperous Pair and after a Time there appeared in their Home something that answered to the Name of Kirby. To the Intelligent Reader much will be conveyed by the simple Statement that he was an Only Child. And, as so often happens, his entranced Parents seemed to believe that he was the Only One in the World.

There is an Old Saying that every Mother thinks her own Goose is a Swan, and to carry the same Thought a little further it is not surprising that in this Case the overjoyed Parents looked at their cunning little Noodle-Head and saw in him the budding Greatnesses of Julius Caesar, Willism Shakespeare and Douglas Fairbanks, all packed into one Parcel.

Those who have made a careful study of the ill-favored Children of the unusually Rich must have been, at times, oppressed by the Thought that Washington struggled and Lincoln suffered and countless Brave Men faced the Dangers of Border Warfare in order that the more recent Specimens of the Rising Tide may sleep under Velvet Hangings in gaudy Palaces and have Serfs to wait on them, while all the Courts are organized to protect their Property Rights and large detachments of Motor Cops are stationed on the Highways to prevent them from committing Suicide.

Now, as this Piece of Veal emerged from the Nursery and began to be talked about in the Neighborhood in which he lived, it was not evident that he had any Characteristic Trait of any particular kind except a sublime Faith in his own Superiority.

Shooting Would Be Merciful.

The Surface of the Earth and the overhanging Firmament and the twinkling Stars had been assembled into a Stage Setting in preparation for his Entrance upon the Scene.

At the age of Fourteen he spelled it with two Ts but he had a magnificent Contempt for all Persons who were either older or younger than himself.

For a Youth who had the vivid Personality of a Mud Turtle, the moral Fiber of a Fish Worm and the nimble Wit of a Last Year's Bird Nest it was surprising how many Folks noticed him and discussed him. There was a good deal of arguing back and forth about Kirby.

Those who had him directly under Observation couldn't seem to agree. Some said the Thing to do was to stand him up against a Wall and shoot him. Others stood out for Cyanide of Potassium. A third Faction favored throwing him from a high Cliff on to some jagged Rocks below.

At the Age of 22, when Kirby was a rare Orchid to his Mother and a String of Garlic to the World in General, his Custodians began to work on what was known as his Intellect in order to induce him to formulate and sort of get together an Idea in regard to getting married.

No sooner was it whispered around that the Bermuda Prince was on the Market than a lot of apprehensive Parents got ready to secrete their eligible Daughters or hand them over to the first Applicants or do something desperate in order to save them from a Living Death.

Home Talent Not Worthy.

They need not have had any Tremors. Kirby and his Mamma, with the Face which had been hoisted by a Plastic Surgeon, and Papa, who had inherited so much Jack that he could wear side-Whiskers, all agreed that there was no Deb, Sub-Deb, Flapper, Cutie, or Damosel within a Radius of Fifty Miles who was sufficiently beautiful and talented and socially prominent and loaded down with Assets to qualify her to stand alongside of the World's Best and receive a Life Sentence.

No use talking, any Woman worthy of Our Kirby would have to be out of the Ordinary. So they took him to Florida where the Picking was said to be good.

There is no Truth in the Report that they transported him in a Crate and occasionally pushed a Marshmallow to him, through the Bars. The Boy was very bright and snappy. He could go into the Diner, all by himself, and order Food unless he had to write it out, and often he would sit on a Chair and hold a Morning Paper in front of Himself and decide that most of the People in the World were very crude and everything that happened was awfully silly, after which he would smoke a Pill, always getting the Right End in his Mouth, because the Ends were similar. Of course, if they had permitted him to use Cork Tips, the Results might have been serious.

From all of this foregoing Blurb and Blah it will be gathered that much depended upon finding some Sweet Girl who was worthy, in every way, of the Lollipop. It would have been a shame to let the Breed die out just as the Universe is facing so many Intricate Problems.

The Girl Who Didn't Know a Good Thing When She Saw It.

On a Beach near the Gulf Stream they found One that weighed and measured all right and had an Invalid Father who owned a Railway, but after they talked to her a few Days they discovered that she was Dumb. Beautiful, but absolutely still and lifeless above the Pearl Necklace.

If she had married Kirby probably the Offspring would have turned out to be Dancing Instructors. So she went into the Discard.

There was another Candidate who was there with the Pep and the Bank Roll and a Family Tree and about four tons of Pulchritude but she fled a Can to Kirby within Five Minutes after meeting him and that Prospect went cold.

This was the first Intimation the Parents had ever received that any Member of the so-called Weaker Sex could possibly turn down a chance to hook up with the Heir-Apparent. In the Home Town, where Kirby and all of his Kin were Sacred White Elephants, the Impression had been that he was a Capital Prize, the Answer to the Maiden's Prayer, Idol of the Women and Envy of the Men.

In the great Outside World he came into direct Competition with those genial Lads who combine University Training with the playful Instincts of a Cave Man. They can drink Tea on a Bet and do a lot of Dancing just to avoid going to Bed, but their real Trade is licking Taxi Drivers. Alongside of these hard-boiled Burlies, the refined and well-mannered Kirby seemed to belong to the Vegetable Kingdom. He not only had no Sex Appeal but had not heard much about it.

He was taken from one Place to another by his careful Guardians in the Hope that somewhere, at some time, the Perfect Woman would show up and discover in Kirby all of those lovely Traits which were evident to his Parents but otherwise non-existent.

Kirby Is Captured.

Possibly everything would have turned out O. K. but for the Fact that one Evening in the Lobby of a Hotel in New York, the Keepers allowed him to ramble along Peacock Alley, where he was vamped and abducted by a large and sinewy Amazon who needed Money.

When she went at Kirby it was just like a Battle between a Boa Constrictor and an English Sparrow.

Of course you are saying now that his People paid her a large sum of Money and arranged for a Divorce. Nothing of that kind. She was a large, masterful self-supporting Creature who had knocked around the World and done almost Everything except brake on the Nickel Plate.

She put into the Partnership everything which Kirby didn't have—Courage, Determination, Business Sense, Initiative and a first-hand knowledge of the Wicked World.

It seemed that her wire-haired Spaniel had been stolen the Week before and Kirby was just what she needed to keep her from being lonesome.

To the Parents she proved her entire Fitness for the High Honor by agreeing with them that Kirby was desirable.

Now she counts his Money for him every Morning and tells him what Necktie to wear and everything is Great.

MORAL: The only Marriages which fail are those preceded by Proposals in which the Man does the Talking.

Old Flashlight and Other Scraps Make "Stararium"

Long hours of intensive study and effort over paper, wood, wire and parts of an old flashlight have given Stuart O'Byrae, 27-year-old amateur astronomer of Hatton Lane, Brentwood, a miniature planetarium that unfolds the drama of the firmament in much the same manner as does the $1,000,000 Adler Planetarium of Chicago.

While a true planetarium, of which there are only two in the United States, will show the movements of the stars, planets, the sun and the moon in their proper position with relation to the time of year and the latitude from which observed, O'Byrne's model will show only star movements. For this reason he has coined the name "stararium" for it.

Instead of a dome 70 feet across, under which several hundred persons can sit, the portable model has a three-foot half-dome into which only a dozen or so persons can look. However, they do not have to risk a stiff neck as they would under a large dome.

And although the apparatus may look rather crude, so precisely was it constructed that the revolving foot-long projector—a polyhedron of 13 surfaces—throws scientifically exact representations of 850 stars, in more than 50 constellations, onto the half-dome.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Blind Flying"

An aviator is flying "blind" when he cannot see, either from the construction of his plane or from the weather conditions, such as fog, rain, etc. When flying "blind," an aviator guides his plane by means of instruments. The most important of these instruments is the earth indicator compass. Other essential instruments are a turn indicator, a bank indicator and a drift meter. While the precision of these instruments is great, they are by no means perfectly accurate. Skill is required to read the scales.

Mine Crater "Pool of Peace"

One of the largest mine craters formed on the western front during the World war has been officially named "the Pool of Peace." It is three miles from Ypres on the Messines road, and has a diameter of 140 yards. In making it 40 tons of explosives were used and 8,000 yards of galleries were dug. The explosion was heard in London. British soldiers knew it as "Lone Tree Carter," and since the war it has slowly filled with water.

You Can Depend On The Man Who Advertises

"DEAL WITH HIM"

NINE times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only--but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good will.

You can get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell it if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.

Fishin' and Depression

There is usually something in this life to take one's thoughts from his troubles. It is certainly a relief to turn, even for a short time, from the contemplation of the effects of the depression and dwell on the fast-approaching open fishing season.

For the person who likes to whip a stream, cast a lure in a deep, milky pool in the early morning or just before twilight, there is an all-absorbing, quiet enjoyment that brings to mind the old, familiar quotation: "The world forgetting, the world forgot."

There promises to be some rare sport for the Knights of the Rod and Reel this spring. We learn there has been nbout 10,000 brook trout and several hundred rainbow trout of legal size and up, planted in the streams of Garrett county. Bear Creek received the greatest number of any stream in the state—3500 brook trout.

In addition to the trout about 2000 five inch Chinook of Columbia River salmon have been or will be planted in Deep Creek Lake as an experiment. Even if they should not spawn, it is hoped they will decrease the number of tench—and that's something. Besides, where planted in mid-western lakes, they have attained great size.

3.2 Beer Is The Bunk

It is interesting to note the reaction to the legalization of 3.2 beer. Even among those who delight to scatter the suds off the foamy stein and are not adverse to taking a few shots of hard liquor, the advent of legal beer is the bunk. It would seem that the declaration that it is a non-intoxicating beverage has knocked the "prop" out of the propaganda. They declare it is simply "beer for revenue only," and the fact that it is said "there is not a kick in a carload" makes it but a weak competitor for the old standby for the last 12 years—geneuine old-fashione home brew.

But to many there is balm in Gilead, for it is thought that many dispensers of the so-called innocuous beverage will take advantage of their license and have a safe hideout for a bottle of "moon," thus saving from utter oblivion "Sweet Adeline" and other songs of breath-scented memory.

And Now We Have Spring

It may be that Nature beat April 1 to it, but be that as it may, we have all been made fools of on that date. Possibly we have not given much thought to the origin of the custom of trying to fool one another. Writers themselves differ on that question.

Suffice it to say it originated in the dim, distant past and is possibly traceable to some ancient pagan festival, such as the festival held by the Hindus on March 31, or the Feast of the Fools eclebrated by the Romans on February 17, when tricks were played.

Were you ever, as a boy, sent to the blacksmith shop for a left-handed monkey wrench? Or to a neighbor's to get a pint of pigeon's milk? Or kick a hat placed on a sidewalk under which a brick had been placed? Or stoop to pick up a pocketbook, only to have it suddenly jerked away by some fool boy who had attached a string to it? Well, if you haven't, you haven't done nothing yet.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop HImself

And am I sore at the State Roads commission? Last Sunday morning after I had shoveled out to the highway through a gigantic drift, by aid of a narrow spade, I was reviewing my noble efforts with pride when one of the snow plows came along—and you know the rest.

They were not content to just fill up the opening completely. They packed it in.

Col. Bell wonders if it wouldn't also pay to open up a chipped beef factory at the foot of the turbines of the Hydro-electric company, since they seem certain of the salmon industry here.

Over in the Preston county court, when Dexter Friend had been found guilty of stealing a heifer from Spencer Hardesty at Hutton in January, he was heard to remark that they had proved he had five quarters of the animal.

Up in our own court room Tuesday a girl fainted. I didn't blame her a bit. The air was strong enough to make a horse collapse. A ventilating system for the room wouldn't be bad, or better still, they ought to air each individual every half hour. And even then that wouldn't keep the jury from getting drowsy.

Courtin' time is right, judging by the couple who just came out of the bank building across the street. Holding hands and seemingly oblivious to anything going on around them. And not only that but they are swinging them like a couple of school kids, or college students. She has grabbed his arm and is leading him on—to a minister eventually, only the chances are ten to one that he doesn't know that part of it yet.

Court brings another couple to town. Dressed according to Dame fashion, milady boldly takes cigaret from pocketbook and attempts to light it, right in front of postoffice. That's taboo even among those who smoke almost continuously, but she is trying to be very nonchalnnt about it all.

But one can't be nonchalant and light a cigaret in a strong wind. No one can do that but an Irishman, according to Jim Kerins.

Taken From Fairview Items

The Fairview correspondent this week is feeling a little gay. He writes: "Roy Harvey, who stoved his toes when kicking his dog, was unable to attend school for two days." Three weeks ago I would have sided with the correspondent, but now I am not sure. Maybe the correspondent never had an untrained puppy.

But he also writes: "Jesse Blamhle went to Mr. Ritchie's home to get a haircut but had a close shave. Tip, the family dog gave him a thrill when he met him at the corner of the porch. Jesse made a flying tackle and tip made a perfect three-point landing." I'd have given him the gun or shown Tip a real strong tail wind, had it been I.

All week I have been trying to think of an April Fool for this column. Just see how freely my thoughts flow. Here it is Thursday noon and the paper is still blank.

SENATE IN FIGHT OVER GAS TAX DISTRIBUTION

ranks of the Baltimore City delegation over the city beer bill held the House of Delegates locked in controversy for more than three hours tonight before the bill was passed to its third reading as amended.

Beginning early in the afternoon at meeting of the city delegates, the proponents of a $50 license fee as against the $150 license fee adopted as a compromise late yesterday, fought on in an effort to bring about a reconsideration of the compromise or the death of the city bill. Defeat for the city bill, it was pointed out, would put the city under the statewide measure calling for a $50 license fee.

After a favorable report on the beer bill was adopted, the House adjourned until noon tomorrow.

Another liquor fight in the House seemed probable as the outgrowth of the temperance committee to report unfavorably Delegate Douglas Huntley Gordon's state liquor control act, sometimes referred to as the "Beer Garden" bill. The unfavorable report was voted 4 to 2 by the committee.

In order to prevent a filibuster or possible lengthy debates in the House during the remainder of the session, that body adopted a rule brought in by its rules committee, headed by Speaker T. Barton Harrington, providing that each member may speak for no more than five minutes on a bill and that no member may have more than three minutes to explain his vote.

The major center of interest in the House session yesterday came as that body adopted a favorable report on the bill calling for a referendum on the proposal that the state treasurer shall be prohibited from being an officer or director of any bank or deposit or trust company.

VOLUME 57. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, APRIL 6, 1933. NUMBER 8.

SCHOOL BOARD REQUESTS $291,363 FOR NEXT YEAR

Of This Amount Garrett County Is Asked to Furnish $103,365, The State To Pay Balance

MANY REDUCTIONS MADE

A total of $283,137 for current expenses, $6,900 for capital outlay, and $1,326 for debt service, making a grand total of $291,363, was the amount estimated as necessary to run the public schools of Garrett county for the school year 1933-34 in the annual school budget presented to the Board of County Commissioners.

The amount requested from the county commissioners was $103,365. Recepits from the State to help pay current expenses were estimated at $187,998, or $15,313 less than last year.

State aid was divided as follows: $3,414 for general control; $141,934 for instructional; $42,650 for auxiliary agencies.

Capital Outlay

Requests for money for capital outlay was greatly reduced from $116,195.10, to $6,900, which included $2,100 for Accident elementary and High schools; $1,500 for Oakland Elementary school; $800 for Swanton water and toilets; and $2,500 for Kitzmiller toilet room and toilets.

The largest item in the estimated receipts from the State and other sources was $89,501. from the equilization fund, but this is $46,590 less than the amount received from this fund for 1932-33. Another item of $36,125, is estimated as the apportionment of the $1,500,000 new tax. The state reduced its appropriation for transportation of pupils from $54,000 to $42,650. Last year they furnished the entire amount, whereas this year $8,038 is requested from the county for this item.

It is estimated that teachers' salaries in elementary schools will cost $129,576, $112,255 of which is furnished by the State, leaving $17,321 for the county. Estimated cost of high school teachers was placed at $51,729, $22,547 of which is furnished by the State.

Many Reductions Made

Many reductions were made in the estimated budget, printing and advertising being reduced from $600 to $300; legal services from $350 to $250; Superintendent's salary from $4,500 to $3,825, of which the county pays $1,479 as compared to $1,740 last year; traveling expenses of the superintendent from $500 to $300; salary of clerks from $3,000 to $2,000.

The salary of the attendance officer was reduced from $1,800 to $1,584, of which the county pays $516, compared to $600 last year, and his traveling expenses were cut from $500 to $300.

Salary of supervising teachers is $4,118 as compared with $6,720 last year, a reduction of $2,602. The county is asked to pay $1,373 of this sum compared with $2,240 last year. The traveling expenses are cut from $1,000 to $700.

Janitors' wages are reduced $2,500 and supplies cut in half. The entire operation and maintenance of school plant is reduced from $11,000 to $6,500. Total fixed charges increased from $1,451 to $2,117.

The amount requested was estimated from the assessable basis of the county, which is $20,242,282, making a total tax rate to the county for public schools .5071 per $100 valuation.

The budget was submitted by the County Board of Education to the Board of County Commissioners as provided by law and according to the rules and regulations of the Maryland State Board of Education. It is necessary, to comply with the law, that the budget be in the hands of the commissioners twenty days before the usual date for levying county taxes.

Resolution Sent To Governor Ritchie and Other Officials

The request was in the form of a resolution and pointed out that the State of Maryland owned some 31,000 acres of forest land in Garrett county suitable for reforestation, and that all World War veterans who are out of employment are anxious to return to work rather than to accept charity.

HENRY MENKE SENTENCED TO FIVE YEARS IN "PEN"

Others In Case Paroled For 5 Years—Others Convicted Sentenced By Judge Sloan

SESSION ENDED THURSDAY

The March Term of the Garrett County Circuit Court adjourned last Thursday afternoon after all cases appearing on the dockets had been either completed or continued, and sentences upon those convicted before the court or by a jury, were passed by Judge D. Lindley Sloan.

Henry Menke, of Cassville, West Va., who was found guilty by a jury after a deliberation of nearly twenty-four hours of plotting a series of incendiary fires and participating in the division of the money collected from insurance companies as a result of the fires, was sentenced to serve five years in the Maryland Penitentiary.

Upon condition of good behavior of Carl Hardesty, Noah Moon and Elmer Mayle, who were indicted along with Menke as having participated in the conspiracy and who confessed and gave damaging testimony against Meke, were paroled for five years.

The three men told the Court that Menke had entered into an agreement with them to burn their homes and collect and divide the insurance money.

In passing sentence upon Menke Judge Sloan dwelt at length upon the enormity of the crime, saying that what he (Menke) had planned and carried out was one of the worst cases of criminality he had ever heard. "I am sentencing you to five years in prison, Menke; that's all I can give you," the Court said.

Other sentences imposed were as follows:

Charles Fickes, who entered a plea of guilty to the indictment charging him with burglary, sentence was suspended for one year, as was also the sentence of William Upole, indicted with Fickes on the same charge.

The Oakland Fire department was notified and they kept the fire from spreading to the Gibson store and home, and the old auditorium. Sparks set the auditorium on fire several times, and the wall and roof of the Gibson house were scorched and blistered from the intense heat.

The building was erected many years ago by Richard Richardson and was sold two or three years ago to Mr. Upton Cuppett. Mr. Cuppett lives in another section of the Park.

FISHERMEN BRAVE STORMY WEATHER ON OPENING DAY

Many Out to Try Their Luck, Despite Unfavorable Condition

Despite unfavorable weather conditions, many fishermen and just ordinary people who would like to be called fishermen, decided to try their luck upon the opening day of the season last Saturday. Due to strong winds, high waters and snow which lined the banks of some of the favorite streams, fishermen found much difficulty and little success in their attempts to land the members of the finny tribe.

Probably a hundred Garrett countians took advantage of the opening day to try to get their share of the 10,000 brook and rainbow trout which have been placed in various streams in the county. The majority of them centered their attention on Bear Creek, where 3,500 trout have been planted.

Scores of Cumberland anglers as well as those from Pittsburgh, Altoona, Johnstown and other Pennsylvania cities turned out early to tackle the well-stocked streams, Judge Fred A. Puderbaugh, of Cumberland, topping the cateh wth a 14-inch rainbow.

While Garrett countians reported no large catches, it remained for 14-year old William Glotfelty, of Oakland, to snare eight or nine of them from Wilson Creek, which runs through town, all of them between eight and ten inches long.

The more seasoned and experienced fishermen were content to wait until more favorable weather, claiming that fishing was supposed to be a pleasure.

Garrett County Law Calls for Referendum Before the Beverage Can be Sold Here

OTHER BILLS ARE SIGNED

Governor Albert C. Ritchie last night signed the bills regulating and controlling the sale of beer in the state and in those counties exempted from provisions of a state-wide measure.

There was little ceremony, Walter J. Mitchell, president of the Senate, and W. Barton Harrington, speaker of the House of Delegates were present in their official positions to affix their names to the bills.

The state-wide bill was signed at 6:28 p. m., and the other bills were signed afterward in rapid succession.

The Garrett county law calls for a referendum before beer can be sold here. Carroll county is expressly exempted from provisions of the statewide act and another measure prohibits the sale of beer in that county. In Allegany county a week must elapse before a license is issued. The statewide measure also provides for $50 and $25 licenses in counties not exempted.

Other Bills Signed

Besides signing the Statewide and the several local beer bills, Governor Ritchie also affixed his signature to four other important measures passed by the recent general assembly.

The four approved by the governor are bills to fix the state tax rate at 22 cents on $100 assessable property; to fix the county levy to share in the equalization fund at 47 cents; to place a one percent tax on all race track bets and to set up the machinery for the state convention to consider repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

He also approved a number of bills aimed at strengthening the state banking system.

The new state tax rate is three cents below the rate fixed by the 1931 legislature and the new school levy is 20 cents under the previous figure. These with the race track betting tax are companion measures on the state budget bill.

The repeal convention bill fixes the dates of the election of the delegates on September 12 and the convention on October 19 and describes the manner in which the delegates are to be named.

The General Assembly adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock a. m., April 4, the prolonged session which technically terminated at midnight Monday, kept the lawmakers in almost continuous session from about noon monday until the curtain was drawn.

A bill imposing a tax of one cent on all sums to be bet at the four mile race tracks of the state was shot through at the final session, and such matters as bills placing a special tax on chain stores, prohibiting banks on a restricted withdrawal

AKRON, WORLD'S LARGEST AIRSHIP, FALLS INTO SEA

Seventy-three are Dead as Result of Crash in Storm

In a blinding electric storm, the Akron, mightiest dirigible ever to cruise the skies, was plunged into the turbulent Atlantic early Tuesday morning, about 20 miles off the New Jersey coast, and 71 members of the crew are still missing. Of the 76 men aboard, four were rescued by a German tanker, but one of them died before he was brought ashore.

In searching for the bodies and the wreckage of the airship, the J-3, non-rigid navy airship, crashed into the sea, with a loss of two lives.

The ship was as long as three city blocks and cost over five millions of dollars.

Lesson for April 9

JESUS REQUIRES CONFESSION AND LOYALTY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-38.

GOLDEN TEXT—And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. Mark 8:34.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Being True to Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Passing a Hard Test.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loyalty to Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Jesus Expects of His Followers.

The time had now come for Jesus to take account of his ministry. Having been rejected by the rulers he went into retirement with his disciples. The primary object in his teaching at this time was to prepare the disciples for the tragic hour of the cross which he knew was so near. His teaching centered in the great cardinal doctrines of the Christian faith. He instructed them, touching his atoning death, resurrection, and glorious coming again. He knew that in the measure that they intelligently apprehended these things they would be able to pass through the ordeal before them.

I. Peter's Confession of Christ (vv. 27-30).

This confession was provoked by two questions of Jesus.

1. "Whom do men say that I am" (vv. 27, 28)? This question referred to the opinions of the people regarding Jesus. Some believed him to be John the Baptist; some Elijah, and some, one of the prophets. They all recognized him to be a teacher or prophet with more than human authority and power.

2. "Whom say ye that I am" (vv. 29, 30)? Jesus persistently claimed to be the God-man, the very Son of God, incarnate. He wanted the disciples to know him personally as the Son of God.

II. Jesus' Teaching Concerning the Cross (vv. 31-33).

He charged the disciples not to make public his Messiahship as that would precipitate a crisis.

1. What he taught (v. 31).

a. "The Son of man must suffer many things." He suffered weariness, hunger, ridicule, contempt; and even misnnderstanding and lack of appreciation on the part of his friends and disciples.

b. "Be rejected of the elders, chief priests, and scribes." These were the nation's official representatives, who should have known and received Christ and recommended his reception on the part of the nation.

c. "Be killed." Jesus now states with definiteness that he must die on the cross. The disciples had not yet come to know that redemption was to be accomplished through the passion of the cross.

d. "Rise again." Though this was utterly incomprehensible to the disciples, he showed them that this would be the glorious issue of his death.

2. How the disciples received his teaching (v. 32). So unwelcome was his teaching, touching the cross, that Peter, the spokesman of the disciples, rebuked him.

3. Jesus rebukes Peter (v. 33). He told Peter plainly that his attitude was due to his being under the influence of the devil.

III. Jesus Going to Jerusalem to Die (Mark 10:32-34).

He went to Jerusalem with the consciousness of the awful tragedy before him, the treachery of Judas, the fiery persecutions of the priests and scribes, the unjust judgment, the delivery to Pontius Pilate, the mocking and scourging, the crown of thorns, the cross between malefactors, the nails and the spear—all were spread before him. He had not only come to minister but to give his life a ransom for many. The joyous outlook of the victory which was to be accomplished through the shedding of his blood led him forward (Heb. 12:2).

IV. The Cost of Discipleship (Mark 8:34).

The law of the Christian life is suffering. To follow Christ means to turn one's back upon the world and share his sufferings.

1. There must be denial of self (v. 34). There is a vast difference between self-denial and denial of self. All people practice self-denial, but only Christians deny self.

2. The cross must be taken up (v. 34). This means that suffering and shame will lie in the pathway of the one who is loyal to God (II Tim. 3:12).

3. Christ must be followed (v. 34). The blessed issue of following Christ is a life of freedom here and now, and eternal life hereafter.

Study Brings Light

I have never in my life begun to study one single part of divine truth without gaining some light about it, when I have been able really to give myself to prayer and meditation over it.—George Muller.

Washes Away Sins

"The power of the Blood avails for the blackest and deepest sins, and no man is beyond the reach of God's mercy till the gates of hell have closed upon him."

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Get Wet

The time has come when you should go
Out where nature is all aglow
With radiant beauty rare and sweet
That lures you from the busy street,
Where you can sense the joy of life
And be immune from the city strife.

Birds are warbling, buds are budding,
Clouds are drifting, the sun is shinling;
Fish are biting—spring is here,
The call of out-doors is everywhere;
Just slip away for one little hour—
It's so nice to get caught in an April shower.

The above is not occasioned by the passage of the beer bill.

Col. Bell was busy last week-end at Annapolis taking pictures of a lot of beer lobbyists. While strolling about the capital streets he saw a number of Garrett countians lined up on a fence and he snapped them too. "We're just down here visiting the Naval Academy," admitted Bill Miller, Bill Browning, et al.

It is rumored tha ta gigantic parade will be formed this evening and it will head anywhere the members can find 3.2 percent. As coming events cast their shadows before, all will stuff their fronts with pillows. A bunghole is to be the emblem carried.

Just watch for the flower of our citizenry to appear in public.

Curses on this April fool business. They had me stopping at Archibaldson's house to take home a pan of rolls, and when I had cared for them gently until I reached home I uncovered them only to find some shriveled potatoes. And just as my mouth was beginning to water, too.

The spot left when they tore down that building on Alder street recently certainly leaves an eyesore. Whoever owns the property should be made to clean it up at once.

And speaking of cleaning up, Bob Stanton has made that vacant lot next to his garage a lot more attractive than it used to be.

Fashion Hints For Easter

At a meeting of the tailored dummies from the stores of Frank A. Smouse, H. C. Sincell, Half Price, Miller's Meat Market and Coffman-Fisher on Tuesday, it was decided what the well-dressed man and woman should wear for Easter this year.

A number of ladies were called into the conference before this important information was disseminated to the unsuspecting public.

Men's suits are apt to burst out in spots, or may even go so far as to show flesh color. Shiny materials will be chic for spring wear (look out for the veteran serges).

There will be little change in trouser pockets this year, with combination of fabrics for day and evening wear. (Good old patches. A stiteh in time saves embarrassment, you know).

Prints for day will be dark, according to one of the staff, but what he must have meant was that the day for printers is dark.

Gold belts will be seen, especially when going to visit your banker.

Checks will be everywhere (just returning to the men from whence they came). Vertical stripes will be noticeable, especially on zebras, while the new spring prison garbs will carry out the color scheme of black and white in horizontal stripes.

Everybody will show a trend towards trimming, while trying to put one's square shoulders foremost. However, there will be a tendency toward looser lines, as will be evidenced by salesmen, gossips and members of the Amalgamated Society for the Prevention of Work.

Winnie Judds will fasten at the neck and hang loose, and dresses will double cross at the neck, corner, store or in fact anywhere they get a chance. Opinion is liable to be on the bias.

Shoes will lean more to the sandal type, with the sandal effect on the bottom as well as the sides, while runnerless stockings for women are becoming a thing of the past. In fact so are stockings.

A question to be asked in measuring for a suit or fitting for a dress is, "Are you beery or anti-beery?" The beeries will have more rubber put in their vests and waistlines.

Corsets will not be worn except in extreme cases. Patches over one's eye will be fashionable for women, as only one eye will be availableanyway when wearing the hat of the day. The feather of the Empress Eugenie will be missing, but the body is still there, faintly disguised.

For the men, fashion decrees the slouch hat, with multi-colored sweatband. Dark gray and dirt color are to be the favored shades with dusty brown the runner-up. Brims are to be flabby and frayed around the edges. Dark colored straws may be worn as the season advances. No derbies will be worn this summer.

Resort jackets may find favor with the legislators and lobbyists, as they are ready to resort to most anything.

Ties with hand-made gravy spots will be popular and as a safety move trousers will be held up this year with both suspenders and belts.

Bathing suits are expected to be worn this season. (But please don't rush the season.

As for my own Easter suit. There will be no checks on it. It's either credit or no suit for me.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

That the United States Senate will confer no dictatorship on President Roosevelt, at least so far as international affairs are concerned, was evidenced the other day by the outburst of feeling which greeted the newspapers reports that the administration would now insist that the much discussed and much argued World Court resolution be reported out of committee and passed. So great was the commotion that the sponsors of the resolution postponed action in the committee for a week, and serious doubt was expressed by several Senators as to whether or not the Senate would have a chance to vote on the resolution during this session of Congress.

The principal objection to spending the time of the Senate with the World Court just now is that there are so many more important matters which should be considered. With twelve million Americans jobless, and a great many of the nation's banks in the hands of conservators, with rail and farm problems yet to be solved, a great many statesmen in both parties are of the opinion that the question of whether or not Uncle Sam enters the League Court can well be left for the future to decide. The League of Nations has lost a great deal of prestige during the past few months, culminating with the withdrawal of Japan, which even the French, who control the League, admit was "unfortunate," and the League Court has lost prestige along with the parent body.

Perhaps the most significant thing about the newly developed opposition to the World Court movement is the fact that a great deal of this opposition comes from Democrats and Independents who supported Mr. Roosevelt very effectively during the 1932 campaign. Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, dean of Republican progressives, who aided Mr. Roosevelt, was outspoken in his opposition to consideration at this time. Senator James Hamilton Lewis, the cultured Democratic Senate from Illinois, declared, "This is no time to call up League Court protocols. Events of the world give warning to the United States that it should go about its own business and should make no alliances or compacts to give other nations a voice of authority in directing affairs of the United States."

Senator Dill, liberal Democrat, declared of consideration of the World Court resolution: "It can only lead to confusion and delay economic recovery. It is my convicition that if the question was submitted to a popular vote, 75 per cent of the American people would vote against it." According to one newspaper, several of the newly seated Democratic senators are against ratification of the League Court resolution. Among those specifically named were McCarran of Nevada, Bone of Washington, Russel of Georgia, Dieterich of Illinois and Lonergan of Connecticut.

Washington political observers attached significance to an editorial which appeared on the front page of the Washington Herald, William Randolph Hearst's morning paper in the national capital, the day following the announcement that the World Court resolution was about to be taken up and considered. The Hearst newspapers were among the most active and consistent supporters of Roosevelt and Garner in the 1932 campaign. Under the caption "This Is No Time for League Court Folly" the Herald said:

"Senate Democrats will jeopardize the success of the Roosevelt program for the restoration of prosperity if they attempt to jam through the ratification at the present special session of the League Court protocols.

"These protocols do not provide any relief for our twelve million unemployed fellow citizens.

"These protocols will not reopen any of our closed banks or release to depositors any of their hard-earned savings which are tied up in these banks.

"These protocols will not purge our banking system, nationalize our transportation system, reduce our unemployment, rehabilitate the American farmer or relieve the American taxpayer.

"To attempt the ratification of the League Court protocols in this national emergency would plunge the Senate into a prolonged debate and divert the minds of the American people from their own pressing problems to the political quarrels of Europe and Asia.

"To force the United States into the League of Nations by the trap-door of its Court at the very time when Japan is leaving the League through the front door, would be an act of national folly that could and should cost the Democratic party the control of the House in 1934 and control of the Senate and Presidency in 1936.

"It would seem that the idol of gold has feet of clay."

CHILD HEALTH DAY TO BE CELEBRATED IN STATE

Observance Is Nation-Wide—To Be Held Here Late in May

Maryland will join with other states in the nation-wide celebration of May Day—the first day of the month—as Child Health Day. Garrett County will be the only exception, according to Dr. George E. Clarke, county health officer. Due to the lateness of spring in the extreme western portion of Maryland, May Day will not be celebrated in Garrett county until the latter part of the month.

In announcing the plans for the observance of the day, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said:

"There is special significance in this year's celebration of Child Health Day because children are always among the greatest sufferers during any period of hard times. So, more than ever, the day comes as a challenge to all grown-ups to stop! look! and listen! to the health needs of the babies and young children as well as to those of the boys and girls of school age, in their own communities. And having stopped and observed, to join with all who are interested in community well-being in the furtherance of all available meausres to conserve the health and promote the happiness of these youngsters. The National Committee for Child Health Day has asked that special consideration be given this year to the health needs of mothers and young children. The slogan adopted for the year is "Mothers and Babies First."

"For some years, Child Health Day has served as a mile-stone in the year round activlties in the interest of ehild health in Maryland. It has marked the beginning of the spring and summer recreational activities for the older boys and girls, of the special health conferences for babies and young children and for the examination of the five and six-year olds in preparation for their admission to school in the fall. It will do so again this year. Arrangements for the conferences in the counties will be made in each county under the direction of the county health officer. Emphasis will be laid at all of them, on the importance of protecting young children against diphtheria and of vaccinating them against smallpox. In accordance with the health laws of the State, no child can be enrolled in any school in Maryland, who has not been vaccinated against the disease.

"May Day was designated as National Child Day, by an Act of Congress in 1928. Because of the opportunity it affords to direct public attention to the health needs of growing children and to the inherent right of every ehild to intelligent care and health protection, the nation-wide observance of the day is sponsored by the Conference of State and Provincial Authorities of North America—the official organization of State Health Officers.

"The Maryland Child Health Day Committee is composed of representatives of state, city and county representatives of health and education; of parent-teacher associations; state and county medical societies; service clubs; organizations concerned with the care of handicapped children; recreational groups, and others interested in the health and welfare of the children of the State. Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, is Chairman of the State Committee."

ONLY ELEVEN MARRIAGES PERFORMED DURING WEEK

One Applicant Refused a Permit on April Fool's Day

Only eleven marriage licenses were issued during the week ending Monday at noon form the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett county. The continued slump in the matrimonial market during the past two or three weeks made March the lowest number of any month this year, and made the total for the first three months of 1933 thirty-two less than for the same period last year. Thus far only 202 licenses have been issued during the current year.

One couple did not seem to mind securing a license to marry on April 1st, but to another couple who applied on that same day, it was no April Fool when they were refused a permit. One of the parties applying was under age. Two licenses issued were marked "don't publish."

THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1933

WHERE WILL IT BE?--

Last week a notice came to The Republican office concerning the annual Garrett county field and track meet, stating it would be held this year on June 1, at either Grantsville, or Oakland.

In wondering why the meet might not be held at Oakland as usual, or at Mt. Lake Park, it was discovered that Grantsville had an ample playground and its citizens were urging that it come there. At Oakland, with three places where it might be held, there was no interest in the affair. At one available place, they want to charge at least $25. At another place, Washington Spring Park, those in charge are not enthusiastic, believing that its beauty will be greatly lessened.

At the other place, Mt. Lake Park, where the meet was held last year, the automobile traffic and great amount of dust are not favorable toward having a successful meet.

Oakland, the county seat, is the proper place to hold the county-wide meet. Other schools in the extreme sections of the county could reach here without too great mileage. It is more thickly populated and more schools in this section enter their students.

But there should be a little interest shown. What Oakland needs is a playground.

MAKING ARSON UNPROFITABLE

The recent three and a half years of depression are little different from previous years of business inactivity in their effect on human emotions, good or bad. Those who always seek to take advantage of the misfortunes of others come to the front during such times. Nowhere is this more strikingly illustrated than in the unusually large number of suspicious fires which occur. As soon as hard times oppress the country, many people whose moral fibre is weak, yield to the temptation to "sell out to the insurance companies."

Ordinarily, fire losses are paid immediately after proof of loss. During depressions, however, it is evident that this prompt payment actually encourages arson and fraud and is thus contrary to the public interest. In view of this situation, the National Board of Fire Underwriters has recommended withholding payment of losses on all claims in excess of $100 for a period of sixty days after proof of loss, unless otherwise provided by the printed conditions of the policy or by statute, with exception made to cover the recent California disaster.

This action will make it more difficult for the arsonist to profit by a prompt payment and a quick getaway after his crime, and it will work no disadvantage to the honest claimant. On the other hand it will aid in crime detection and promote public safety.

A CHANGE OF VIEW

Politics is the profession of quick changes in methods and conduct. Sometimes the change is so sudden and inconsistent that it would be amusing if conditions were not so serious.

During the four years of President Hoover's administration there was consistent baiting of the administration from the opposition. The Democratic National Committee conducted a campaign of poison gas against the chief executive that was unique but complete and effective. This was regarded by the opposition to the administration as smart politics. Whether it was smart or not it was at least effective, although of course nobody will ever know how much of President Hoover's defeat for re-election was dnt to the efforts of his Democratic opponents and how much to the depression.

But now the shoe is on the other foot, so to speak. The Democrats are in the saddle and there is a Democratic President in the White House. The Democratic leaders in the House and Senate who enjoyed so much firing their verbal stink bombs at President Hoover have now become the doughty champions of defending the sanctity of the White House. There must be no partianship, they say. Conditions are too serious for that. The administration program must be swallowed without batting an eye. The old days of accepting things without dotting an "i" or crossing a "t" have come back to us again—for the first time since the Wilson administration when the war crisis was the basis of non-political bi-partisan support.

There is of course much in what the Democratic leaders have to say to the effect that times are too serious for mere partisanship on fundamental issues. The remarkable thing, however, is the way in which they have reversed their views on the subject since March 4. What they regarded as good sport before that date has now become anathema.

Of course politics is a game indulged in by the statesmen of both political parties. President Hoover got support from constructive Democrats during his efforts to halt depression just as President Roosevelt has been getting constructive support from Republican sources.

The duty of Republican leadership is now plain. It is to support constructive measures of the administration and to fight to defeat unsound measures, offering sane and reasonable substitutes for these. Standing by the President in time of economic stress is laudable and proper but cannot go to the length of shutting one's eyes to measures which do not deserve support, if any of these should happen to be offered.

In the meantime there is something almost laughable in the way that certain Democratic leaders have sudden discovered, since March 4, that it is unpatriotic and reprehensible to criticize any expressed thought or action of the President.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Maple sugar was selling in the stores of Oakland at seven cents per pound.

Thieves entered the confectionery and cigar store of C. J. Newman in Oakland and robbed it of considerable candy, fruit and tobacco. Storehouses of Julius Scherr and W. S. Lantz, at Eglon, were also robbed of merchandise.

Heavy rains checked forest fires which had been ranging for some days in the mountains of the county.

Fish Commissioner R. T. Browning received and placed in Deep Creek 50,000 trout.

A new store building for Ashby Brothers at Crellin was nearing completion.

Weber and Sons, florists, had about 20,000 square feet of ground beneath glass and were still crowded for room in their hothouses.

Easter Sunday of 1893 was such as poets dream of: the weather being ideal and Easter bonnets plentiful.

A gust of wind carried a window out of the Baltimore and Ohio railway station and landed it on the roof of the building.

Improvements were being made at the electric light station, including the erection of a water tank.

William Groves was injured when he fell from a load of hay.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The West Virginia Tuberculosis sanitarium was opened at Hopemont when a receiving building and two cottages were completed.

The taxable basis of Garrett county was fixed at $11,990,830.

Members of the Mountain City band reorganized with Prof. McIlwee, of Keyser, W. Va., as director.

Town Council reorganized by electing Henry Lauer, president; John C. Dunham, clerk; George W. Legge, Sr., collector; George W. Legge, Jr., attorney; Thomas Little, treasurer; James O. Hinebaugh, weighmaster; Bartlett Nethkin, bailiff; Michael Maroney, street commissioner.

The public schools of the county closed.

An organizer was attempting to form a lodgeof Owls in Oakland.

The barn of John Paul, noth of the Cove, was destroyed by fire.

C. M. T. C. APPLICATIONS GREATLY EXCEED QUOTAS

Garrett County, With Quota of Ten, Has 24 Applications

A record for applications for enrollment in the Citizens' Military Training Camps of the Third Corps Area, of which Garrett county is included, was set when the total reached 13,896 last Saturday, it was announced by Col. Allen Smith, C. M. T. C. official, Baltimore.

In some cases assigned procurement quotas in the various counties of the corps area have been exceeded by two hundred percent, while twenty-seven out of the 192 counties in the area are behind their quotas so far.

Procurement activities have been suspended in all counties except four in the Maryland district, five in the Washington district, one in Western Pennsylvania and seventeen in Virginia.

The number of applications now on file for the corps area exceeds by nearly 4,000 the total filed at this time last year and is several hundred in excess of the number received by May 15, 1932, the closing date for all applications last year. Garrett county applications total 24, according to the last report, while its quota is ten. The entire training quota is 4,300, thirty per cent less than the procurement quota for the area.

Six camps will be conducted this year, all starting July 11, and lasting thirty days. The basic course, taken by all youths who are in the camps for the first time, and the advanced infantry course will be given at Forts Howard, Washington and Meade, in Maryland; field artillery courses will be given at Fort Hoyle, Md.; while candidates taking coast artillery work will go to Fort Monroe, Va. All cavalry courses will be conducted at Fort Myer, Va.

Unlawful to Permit Dogs to Run at Large

The attention of the public has been called to the law relative to dogs running at large pursuing game. A mother rabbit does not have a chance to escape pursuing dogs, it was pointed out, and keeping under leash or confined will save much game which will assure an adequate supply at the next hunting season.

Paragraph F of Section 20 of Article 99 provides it to be unlawful for any person to allow any dogs belonging to them to run at large on other property than that owned or tenanted by them between March 1 and September 1, and pursue game or destroy eggs or nests. The penalty for violation is not less than $25, nor more than $100 and costs for each offense, and $5 additional for each game bird or animal caught or killed illegally.

Mayor Grover Stemple, of Oakland, also called the attention of the citizens to the town ordinance against dogs running at large. He stated the ordinance would be strictly enforced.

FOUR STEPS OUTLINED AT MEETING OF TABLELANDS

To Encourage Series of Festivals Sponsored by Local Groups

Four definite steps for the Allegheny Tableland association were outlined at the meetings held last Thursday afternoon and evening in Kingwood, W. Va., when the governing board met and a public banquet was held.

They were the encouragement of a wide series of Tableland festivals to be held throughout the area and sponsored by local groups; the plan of one large festival in the Tableland to be held under the direct auspices of the Governing Board which shall serve as a round-up for the program and talent developed through community festivals the planning of a Tableland Fair to be held in Pittsburgh in the fall by meeting with the Tableland council of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; and the appointment of a committee for the development of a Tableland brand design.

Members of the governing board present at Kingwood included J. Fred Reed, Kingwood; Cheston Browning, Oakland; E. M. Hansel, J. B. Watson, Bushrod Grimes, P. C. Rouser, W. F. Lipscomb, John S. Miller, and I. S. Middaugh, director of Mt. Lake Institute. A delegation from Pittsburgh headed by H. W. Correll, of the Tableland council, brought greetings and the expression of a desire to assist in all the Tableland festivals. Approximately 135 delegates representing 15 or more communities, were present for the evening dinner meeting.

Institute Directors Meet

Twelve members of the Mt. Lake Institute board met for the annual session on Monday and I. S. Middaugh was re-elected director; W. B. Brock, secretary; and O. T. Graser, treasurer.

Plans were discussed for financing and arranging a program for 1933. There are already more programs available for the Sunday afternoons than the season will permit, according to Mr. Middaugh, and tableland community units, civic clubs, bands, choirs, extension and religious organizations are urged to plan their participation early and arrange with Mr. Middaugh for their dates and places on the program.

To Take Part in Music Week

Through the leadership of Miss Sara B. Huff, music director, community groups in cooperation with Mountain Lake Institute and the Tableland program, will participate in the celebration of National Music Week, the second week in May. Recently a Garrett county maple sugar producer received an order from a very prominent resident and business man of Boston, Mass., for twelve gallons of maple syrup. When it is taken into consideration that the maple sugar makers of Vermont and New England are much closer to Boston than Garrett county, it is presumed that the Garrett county product is superior to that of our Yankee fellow-countrymen and that the Boston man is acquainted with this fact. Anyway the syrup has gone forward and no doubt will be enjoyed by the consumers.

MARYLAND HAS HIGHEST AVERAGE SIZE FAMILIES

Census Takers Find Median Size of Households in State 3.47 Persons

The average size of families in Maryland is slightly higher than in the United States as a whole, any analysis of 1930 census figures, made public by the Census Bureau, indicates.

Census takers from the median size of families in Maryland 3.47 persons, as compared with 3.40 persons in the country at large.

The median for urban families in Maryland is listed as 3.38 persons as compared with 3.47 persons for rural non-farm families and 4.07 for rural farm families.

The median size of native white families of Maryland is listed as 3.48 persons, as compared with 3.98 persons in foreign born white families and 3.12 in negro families.

Curiously, the lowest median listed for any class of families in Maryland is 2.79 for negro urban families, and the highest is 4.47 persons for negro rural farm families.

North Carolina is rated highest among the states in the size of families, the average there being 4.24 persons. California is rated lowest with 2.77 persons.

Only actual members of the families, with lodgers and boarders excluded, were used by the Census Bureau in its computations.

The total number of families in Maryland listed in the 1930 census was 385,179, of which 282,287 were native white families, 41,442 were foreign born white families and 61,160 were negro families. Two hundred and ninety families were of "other races."

Historic Nuts Planted by Oakland Scout Troop

Three hundred walnuts from historic trees in various parts of the United States were planted last Saturday on city property by members of the Oakland Boy Scout troop. The nuts were provided by the Oakland Civic Club, which organization had obtained several hundred last fall and had distributed nearly all of them to persons throughout the county.

Approximately forty of the nuts were planted around the edge of the town lot on Third street where tennis courts will be made and a playground marked off this summer. The remainder of the three hundred were planted on the "Water Farm" northwest of town.

The Scouts were assisted in the planting by A. L. Sines, forest warden, and Grover C. Stemple, mayor.

The scouts present and doing the work included John Darby, Howard Smouse, Bill Grant, John Michael, and Jack Lawton, Eagles; Jack Hinebaugh, Crow; George Stuck, Ralph Kahl, Wilbur Altstetter and Walter Stevens, Beavers; Charles Mason, Guy Hinebaugh, Foxes; Edward Lauer, Bill Glotfelty, Bill Johnson, Rattlesnakes; Robert Altstetter, junior assistant.

WEST VIRGINIA'S BACK-TO-THE-LAND WORK

One State's Experience Throws Light on a General Movement In This Country

By HAL CURTIS, In the Baltimore Sunday Sun

For many years a "back-to-the-land" movement has been urged in the United States, but it has taken hard times to make its argument effective. Mr. Farmer's lot is still a hard one, but the powerful magnet of three square meals a day and a comfortable place to sleep has lured to the country a good many people who lately have found only mockery in the bright light of the city. In the first three months of 1932, for example, the net farm gain of the United States was 263,000. Department of Agriculture estimates placed the 1931 farm population of the nation at 31,504,000, and experts say if the gain made in 1932 should equal that of 1931 the total would be 31,897,000, or nearly as great at the peak figure of 32,000,000, reached by the nation in 1910. Figures compiled by the Agriculture Department's bureau of economics show that the movement to and from farms, by geographic divisions, in 1913, the last year for which complete and accurate figures are available, was as follows:

	To Farm	From Farm
New England	46,000	48,000
Middle Atlantic	92,000	90,000
East North Central	265,000	217,000
West North Central	356,000	288,000
South Atlantic	156,000	184,000
East South Central	134,000	119,000
West South Central	381,000	300,000
Mountain	105,000	92,000
Pacific	144,000	134,000
Total	1,679,000	1,472,000

One of the most interesting things, and one of the strangest, in connection with the present "back-to-the-land" movement, is that the Jews are taking a leading and active part in it. They are taking to farming in repidly increasing numbers, and they are displaying the same system, planning and organization which they have brought to department stores and other commerical activities.

According to the 1932 report of the Jewish Agriculture Society, there are today 100,000 Jews obtaining their sustenance, in whole or in part, from farms. At the end of the last fiscal year the societie's loan department had granted more than 10,000 loans scattered over forty States and totaling $6 750,000. Several successful Jewish farm settlements have been established throughout the country. The latest plan in the establishment of "agro-industrial" farms, which appears to be a practical application of what Henry Ford has long been recommending. The society furnishes truck gardens, within commuting distance, to city workers. These men, usually getting small wages, are thus enabled to grow most of their own living and raise their families in the open, healthy country. In New York, headquarters of the society, for instance, a tract of land was bought thirty-two miles from the city and divided into five-acre poultry and truck farms. A selected group of workers settled on them and Gabriel Davidson, secretary of the society, says they have made a good start.

The accomplishment of the Jewish society is especially interesting in the light of the efforts made and advocated in many places to put large numbers of idle needy on small farms and truck gardens. Colonization schemes or cooperative enterprise are clearly indicated as the best method for a poor fellow with a willingness to work but without either capital or experience could hardly make a start all alone. In a colony, or cooperative society, members can confer, exchange opinions, swap help, aid each other and get assistance from without, and have a social life that buoys the spirits and keeps up the morale of the new surroundings and activities. Many agencies which have been helping the needy, both private and public, have begun to consider, or to experiment with, this method of helping the helpless to help themselves.

When General Glassford, police chief was in Washington he suggested that something of the sort be done for the thousands of men in the "bonus army." The Governor of Florida sent word that much good land was available in that State, and that the men would be welcome if they could come without being a burden on the communities in which they settled. August Hecksher, capitalist and philanthropist, writing in the New York Times recently, declared that Florida has millions of acres available for colonization; that he knew of one property of 40,000 acres which had been compared in fertility with the valley of the Nile, which could be made ready immediately for planting, and which could be leased for 25 cents an acre. Comparable places, he added, could be found in other States.

It is said that large colonies of unemployed could be settled on these lands for less than it takes to feed them in cities—and they could have work, ambition, social life and self-respect.

But aside from colonization schemes there is still another and more practical angle to the situation. Last summer more than thirty States in the Union carried out agriculture programs of subsistence gardening, designed to help the unemployed feed themselves. In West Virginia, for instance, an extension service of the state Department of Agriculture distributed several hundred thousand pieces of special literature on gardening and food preservation. Articles on raising and saving food were printed in daily and weekly newspapers of the State. Hundreds of meetings were held where, by charts and lantern slides, thousands of persons were shown how to combat bean beetle, and taught many other facts helpful to them in raising something to eat and saving a portion of what they raised.

Working in close cooperation with other agencies and organizations, six men and three women extension workers are now devoting practically all of their time to preparing for future subsistence gardening and food preservation programs in West Virginia.

Typical of the specific results obtained by these united efforts in industrial counties of the State during the past summer are the following:

Fayette county has 6,000 gardens with industrial concerns. Their values ran from $5 to $200, with $35 as an average. In this county fifteen hundred unemployed workers were furnished seed and in some cases potatoes for their gardens. These 6,000 gardens produced crops with a total value of $37,500, and in addition to feeding their owners during the summer gave enough surplus to allow them to can and store 30,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables; 5,000 glasses of jellies; 3,000 quarts of sauerkraut; 1,500 quarts of pickled beans; 1,500 bushels of beans; 3,000 bushels of potatoes; 50,000 pounds of cabbage and 500 quarts of carrots, it all having a total value of $11,000.

In Monongalia County twenty-two garden clubs in mining communities now represent a family membership of 4,000. Last summer help was given in this county in securing land for 3,500 gardens, as well as 1,400 seed packages, thousands of tomato and cabbage plants, ten tons of fertilizer, over 2,500 pounds of spray material and thirty-one pressure sprayers.

These two counties, one in the northern and the other in the southern part of West Virginia, are typical of the work being carried on in each one of the fifty-five counties in the State. Not only does the value of foodstuffs raised and saved by these garden clubs run into thousands of dollars, but the participation by men and women in the activities of the clubs has been an important factor in keeping up their morale during the period of unemployment, State extension workers say.

"Raise Something, Save Something, Give Something" is the slogan of this new agriculture campaign in West Virginia. Community surveys have shown that about half of the 80,000 farmers in the State have been accustomed to wages from public works or other jobs off the farm. It is safe to assume that to the families with reduced incomes, the increased gardening and preserving will make a great difference in their living. If this increase is even so small at $10 per rural family it is estimated that the eampaign has already meant $40,000 worth of foodstuffs to the farmers of West Virginia.

"Give Something" was added to the slogan of "Raise Something, Save Something" when it was found that there was a surplus in some sections of the State and a shortage in others. For instance, 2,000 Marion county farmers who raised more products than they could sell or preserve for the winter have been dividing with less fortunate folks. This is not only true of garden products, but also of meat, milk, eggs, etc. Many West Virginia farmers have given city relatives and industrial workers land and, in some cases, buildings to live in.

As an example of what can be done with a small piece of land when necessity demands it, the following is of interest: On Mill creek, in Randolph county, Ralph Russel succeeded in growing 531 bushels of potatoes on one small tract of ground. An accurate cost record was kept by Mr. Russel, and his cost sheet shows that $38.30 was spent for man labor, $19.40 for horse labor and $4 for use of a tractor. His seed, fertilizer, manure and spray materials cost $103.07. Rent of land was entered at $10 and storage at $2, making a total cost of $176.77, or 33 1-3 cents a bushel. His potatoes were sold at the farm for 50 to 65 cents a bushel, which, it will be seen, gave him a good margin of profit.

The general effectiveness of the cooperative extension program to help West Virginia's unemployed feed themselves has been commended enthusiastically by Government agriculture experts. It is also the opinion of competent investigators who have studied the rural life of the State that the morale of farm people in West Virginia is unusually high. There is a feeling of security based on the knowledge that they have enough food for winter as well as summer.

The program of subsistence gardening is not abandoned in the winter. Rather, extension workers go about encouraging the unemployed to make ready for the warmer months when plowing and planting is done; they assist many in obtaining land to till, and give inexperienced persons instruction on how to plant and care for gardens. The whole thing is on a cooperative basis and depends upon cooperation for its success.

ANNUAL REPORT OF CIVIC CLUB MADE BY PRESIDENT

Miss Loar Reviews Work of Organization for 1932

Miss Loar's annual report for the 1932-1933 season follows:

"Keeping in mind the purpose for which we are organized, we again sponsor a yard and garden contest in which beautification of surroundings and need of gardens were stressed. More than fifty per cent of our home owners were entered, most of whom seemed glad to express in this way their desire to make home and town more attractive. Two features were a garden pilgrimage in midsummer and a special program at the end of the season, when prizes of trees, of plants and bulbs were awarded the winners. This program included a pageant of the Martha Washington days, vocal music, fancy dancing out-of-door concert by the Boys' Band and an address and presentation of the prizes by Mayor Stemple.

"We are indebted to and desire to thank Miss Margaret Burtis and Mrs. Howard Reinhardt, who acted as out judges and were most conscientious and thorough in their work.

"Continuing our Bi-Centennial program, 48 trees, consisting of sugar maple, white birch and mountain ash, were added to those in Washington Park. Two thousand white pine transplants and seedlings were planted on the hillside back of this park as a windbreak or background. This planting was under the supervision of E. R. O'Donnell. Forty historic walnuts were planted through the woods back of these trees.

"We have distributed for planting more than 1400 historic nuts to more than 200 persons. Each will receive historic nut planting certificates. A hundred twenty of the walnuts were from Mount Vernon, 84 of which were given to as many babies who were born in 1932—George Washington's Bi-Centennial year. With these, soil from seven historic shrines will be presented by Mrs. James Dorsey, conservation chairman, to each baby when nut is reported as planted. So far, 61 have reported; 21 of this number have also planted a tree to honor their babies.

"A white birch was planted in the park by the Legion Auxiliary for Mother's Day. The Siberian elm, donated by Mrs. John Alcock, which died, was replaced by the firm from which it was purchased. The native elm, planted on Washington's birthday, was broken by children and will be replaced by one already ordered. The baby elm, grandchild of the now famous one under which Washington stood when taking command of the American army, and presented by Mrs. Alcock, has also been replaced. As a compliment to our club for its interest in this work, Mrs. Dorsey presented us with pictures of the original elm.

"Through the State Extension Department we obtained a blue-print plan for planting of trees in the park. Part of the ground has been surveyed and stakes driven showing where each kind of tree is to be planted.

"On town's 'Clean-Up' day five truckloads of unburnable rubbish was removed. One of wood was taken to needy women; grass was mowed once and many stumps removed and burned.

"In aid of unemployment we obtained a vacant room where we are conducting a good-will exchange, collecting articles of all kinds and giving in exchange for money, work or other articles. We repair shoes, sew, mend, darn and alter clothing. We have received the support of men and women in our community and wish to thank all who have in any way aided us in this work.

"Under the leadership of Mrs. W. B. Brock two full programs were devoted to American citizenship, with papers and discussions on its different divisions.

There were discussions of bills before the legislature, including the jury bill, and sending of telegrams to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate approving its passage; also letters were sent to the Governor by the chairman of the Welfare Committee and a personal visit of our Senator requesting an appropriation in aid of the Maryland League of Crippled Children from which organization our children have been receiving aid.

In July, Mrs. Ellwood Offutt, chairman, we celebrated our club's twenty-first anniversary with a luncheon, at which eighteen of the twenty-five charter members were present. Our first president was Miss Thekla Fundenburg, who presided. This was an enjoyable occasion.

Mrs. Emily Bolgiano, of Baltimore, was sent as a delegate to the annual meeting of the federated clubs in Baltimore. We listened to addresses by Mrs. Lyda Gano, of Chicago, on the Science of Numerology; Mrs. Bolgiano on club work, Its Opportunities and Benefits; Mrs. Orie Grover, Experience in West Virginia as Medical Examiner in Schools; Miss Sara B. Huff, extension music director, "Music Week"; reading of by-laws at the request of the State president.

We added our names to a petition for World's Congress of Women to be held in Chicago in June.

A spot of brighness that all might enjoy was a flower bed and border at the railroad crossing where once were matted weeds and a pile of rubbish. More than two hundred plants were donated by H. Weber & Sons Co., florists. Mrs. Owen Treacy was chairman.

Respectfully submitted,
LOTTIE M. LOAR, President,
Oakland Civic Club.

March 28, 1933.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

It is not definitely known who wrote the Book of Samuel. This last great Judge of Israel may have been the author.

Whoever may be responsible for its authorship, the history it records marks a sharp transition in the government of the chosen people. Hitherto their political condition was much like that of the thirteen colonies before the adoption of the Articles of Confederation, and later the Constitution. They were, as Benjamin Franklin sagely remarked, like a barrel made of staves but without a hoop to hold them together.

The history covers the life of Samuel, and deals with the organization of the Kingdom, the reign of Saul and in the first book, David's early life.

Up to this time Israel had been twelve independent states, with no unifying principle except their religion, which was taken none too seriously by the rank and file of the people. They had attained no great national development. To survive in a predatory work it was necessary that a nation be fairly strong: so, after the apparent failures of the Theocracy, because of the continued disobedience of the people, God permitted His nation to unify like other nations, under a King. However, they were duly warned of what this would mean, of how much of personal liberty would have to be surrendered under the new system. Yet when they urged: "Give us a King like other nations," their request was granted, even though it meant their hurt rather than fuller blessing.

The history of this period centers around three characters: Samuel, the last of the Judges; Saul, the first King of Israel; David, Israel's most versatile, and in many respects, noblest King. This is a period of transition. The rules of the Judges end, the Kingdom begins and is established.

Among the leading topics and events in this book are the birth and dedication of Samuel. Samuel was well-born. His parents were godly people who returned to their city, as ancient custom demanded, for their yearly sacrifice to Jehovah.

While praying at Shiloh that a son might be given to her, Hannah was accused of drunkenness by Eli the priest, who, upon discovering his mistake, bads her go in peace and added his own petition that the God of Israel might grant her request.

A child came to bless the home of Hannah and Elkanah, and according to his prenatal dedication, Hannah presented him unto the Lord at Shiloh as soon as he had been weaned. There he was brought up in the Temple by Eli, and there the Lord spoke to his childish heart, calling him even before the years of accountability, to exercise the office of Prophet.

Other events of this Book that are outstanding are: The capture and return of the Ark of the Covenant, the defeat of the Philistines through the prayer of Samuel, and the anointing of David to be King.

Chapter 17 tells the dramatic story of David's conflict with Goliath of Gath, a vindication of the God of Israel, and a victory which broke the Philistines' morale, paving the way for David's ultimate triumph over all the enemies of Israel.

The First and Second Books of Samuel are also called the First and Second Books of Kings. The latter title is somewhat confusing since the books which immediately follow in the canonical order are also ealled First and Second Kings. Of course if the alternate designation were used, First and Second Kings automatically become Third and Fourth Kings.

Today we glance at the Second Book of Samuel, and in the briefest manner touch upon its central messages.

Thus far in our studies of the Book of Books, three great characters have been presented to our view: Moses, whose mission was to deliver and organize the Israelitish nation; Joshua, called to conquer Canaan, and steele the nation there; Samuel, to whom it was given to inaugurate the Kingdom. The Second Book of Kings deals with the development of a powerful Kingdom under David's rule.

Saul, the first King of Israel, was a failure. Arrogant pride and disobedience brought their inevitable result in his overthrow, and the destruction of his dynasty. David was magnificently suceessful. A self-reliant, resourceful leader, but also humble and God-reliant in his personal soul, God was so well pleased with David's behavior as King of Israel that he chose him and his line for the fulfillment of the Messianic promise.

David was not perfectly loyal to Jehovah's plan. He had faults, glaring ones, and did many things that were very wrong. Yet he possessed many fine traits, and taking into consideration the times in which he lived, and the usual character of an original despot of that period, he was a most remarkable man. Among a people who were constantly falling into idolatry, he stood like a rock for Jehovah, and because of that fact was called a "man after God's own heart." He understood that the purpose of Jehovah was to establish faith in the one living and true God. To the achievement of this purpose he gave himself without stint.

The world has always loved David, the son of Jesse, the Bethlehem shepherd boy, musician, warrior, statesman, born for great exploits; short of stature, auburn haired, sparkling eyes, strong and agile; more than a match for wild beasts or wilder men.

Too loyal to raise his hand against God's anointed; too chivalrous to take advantage of a foe when a dagger thrust meant an open path to power and Kingship.

David's two grand achievements are the Kingdom and the Psalms. In no way does the real character of a man reveal itself so completely as in his writing. As long as human hearts need comfort men will love the Shepherd Psalm. As long as men err, and erring needs repentance, they will turn to the 51st Psalm for the expression of their self-abasement and earnest plea for pardon. Nor can any language portray in more adequate phrases the glory of the stellar universe than the 19th Psalm, closing with the matchless prayer for an inward perfection of soul parallelling the outward perfection of the material universe as it is written in the stars: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable to thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer."

Washington Excursion

One of the most outstanding spring floral events is the annual blossoming of the famed Japanese cherry trees at Washington, D. C., which will take place by April 15 and continue for several weeks.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will operate, especially for this occasion, a low rate excursion from West Virginia and Western Maryland points to Washington, D. C. Trains will depart from local communities at specified times on Saturday, April 15, in order to allow for practically the entire Sunday to be spent in the Capital City, leaving for the return trip on the evening of that day. This arrangement also permits of full opportunity to take in the many unusual sights of the National Capital, which attracts visitors from all sections of the country, but with the added attraction of the Japanese cherry trees there will undoubtedly be a large number who will take advantage of the excursion.

The Japanese cherry trees, which were presented by the City of Tokyo as an expression of goodwill and friendship from one capital city to another, never fail to arouse admiration and wonder as they burst into bloom, with the millions of pink and white blossoms transforming the picturesque water-side drives of Washington's Potomac Park into a scene of oriental beauty and splendor. It is a sight worth coming to see year after year.

In view of the interest which the excursion has created, arrangements are being made to provide ample train equipment, but to insure everyone being comfortably accommodated the railroad representatives have requested that all those who will make the trip purchase their tickets in advance if possible.

Merchants must have profits to live; but all of them do not live for profits alone. They are not all of the hard-bitten, tight fisted type some like to picture them when they are no longer permitted to further extend their credit. We are apt to forget that the merchant must pay his bills promptly if he expects to keep his stock replenished—more promptly now than ever before, for the jobber or wholesaler from whom he buys must likewise pay the manufacturer for his purchases. Many a storekeeper has unselfishly performed services, and even extended credit farther than dictated by good business judgment, during the past distressing winter.

What we have in mind particularly is his aid in the distribution of the Red Cross flour. The Harvey and Ream store and the Martin store have both given their space and their time to this service, and, this in face of the fact that every sack distributed gratis meant a possible sale of bread or flour lost. Public appreciation is thus acknowledged, not alone because we have been asked so to do, but because appreciation and thanks are merited.

The venerable weather prophet, Mr. Murray White, whose past predictions have been remarkably accurate, early this week predicted that we were due seven more snows this spring. Well, we had one of them Tuesday, so, in order that "a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country, and in his own house," may not be verified in this instance, we are due for six more.

It is entirely possible that we will have the pleasure of reporting the marriage of a very charming young lady of this village in the very near future—possible next week. It is your guess.

We have heard more expressions of renewed confidence in increased business activities in Garrett county during the past few days than at any time recently. There seems to be a very general feeling that "old Garrett will soon be doing business as usual." And why not? We are rapidly adjusting ourselves to the new deal and the new order of things whether we like it or not. If we will just discount about eighty per cent the mutterings of liver-bound grouches and personal spite artists, and have confidence and a little patience while readjustments are in progress, we will find we are off dead center and moving forward.

Mrs. Isobel Hill, who spent the winter months in Washington, D. C., has returned and opened her cottage for the summer.

basis from levying a service charge on frozen deposits, and reducing the required school levy for counties sharing in the equalization fund from 67 to 47 cents, all passed without hesitation.

The final night's work in the Senate included the passage of the administration gasoline tax revenue distribution bill, rejection of the proposal for the establishment of an unemployment insurance system in Maryland, and passage of the measure authorizing a $4,000,000 bond issue for the improvement of the two Philidelphia roads.

Quite a fight developed concerning the sale of beer in Garrett county during the closing days of the legislature. The Senate on March 31 passed a bill by Senator H. W. McComas calling for an exemption for his county. But in the House of Delegates, a local Garrett County bill relative to fencing was amended to strike out all after the words "a bill" and to substitute a complete beer licensing act similar to the state-wide measure. The bill was reported favorable. The bill actually passed, however, prohibits the sale of beer here until a referendum is taken.

The Maryland State budget for 1934 and 1935 became law in April 2, calling for the expenditure of approximately $60,000,000 in the two-year period.

Regulating the sale of beer in Garrett county.

CROP PRODUCTION LOANS NOW AVAILABLE IN STATE

Applications to be Received at Office of County Agent

Due to State and Federal laws conflicting there was a temporary delay in receiving applications for farm loans, John H. Carter announced, but the new legislation has been passed and a committee appointed ready to receive any applicants for such loans. These applications are entirely for a crop production loan for 1933, it was stated.

The County Committee, composed of Delbert Davis, Oakland; Henry P. Miller, Grantsville; and C. A. Ashby, Deer Park; will meet Thursday, April 13, for the purpose of forwarding the applications to the Department of Agriculture.

Anyone desiring a loan is asked to have his application on file at the office of the county agent prior to four o'clock, Wednesday, April 12. The county committee probably will not meet again for the next ten days.

Assistance will be given to anyone at the county agent's office in making application for the loan. Since the new application blanks have been received it will be necessary for applicants to appear at the office in person to fill in the blank.

Donald E. Clark has been named the new field inspector of the crop production loan office and was here on Tuesday explaining about the loans. He will return to Oakland on Thursday, April 13. Mr. Clark takes the place of Lester Johnson, who had charge of last year's loans.

Should Check Cars For Any Mechanical Defects

Because traffic will increase as the weather gets warmer, motorists are urged by Col. E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, to help make the streets and highways safe by having any defects in the safety factors of their cars corrected.

"It is six months since this department conducted the Save-A-Life Campaign, during which motor vehicle owners were required to have their brakes, lights, horn, steering mechanism, rear-view mirror, and windshield wiper inspected, and, if necessary, put in good order," Col. Baughman said.

"Since that time some of the factors that were approved as safe may have become defective and should be inspected.

"Fatal accidents are decreasing. Last month, eighteen persons were killed as compared to thirty-one for March 1932, but the automobile death toll is still too great. There should not be any."

Comparisons Helpful in Choosing and Preparing Vegetables

Asparagus—18 to 22 stalks equals 1 pound for creaming. One pound cut for creaming equals 2 cups.

Beans—1 pound shelled equals 3 cups ready for cooking.

Beets—1 pound equals 4 or 5 medium sized beets.

Cabbage—A medium sized head weighs about 3 pounds.

Carrots—1 pound equals 2 cups cleaned and diced.

Corn—1 dozen medium sized ears equals 3 cups cut from cob.

Greens—1 pound spinach cooked equals about 2½ cups—maybe much less if stems have been discarded.

Lettuce—1 large head equals about 1 pound. Has from 20 to 30 leaves—makes four generous lettuce salads.

Peas—1 pound when shelled equals 1 cup.

Potatoes—1 pound equals 4 medium sized potatoes.

Helpful Hints in Preparing Vegetables

Cook as short a time as possible and serve immediately to retain the most flavor, color and food value.

Add one teaspoon of salt to a quart of water in cooking vegetables. Cooking in salted water helps to retain the green color.

Use little if any water in cooking leafy vegetables such as spinach.

Do not use soda. It destroys some of the vitamins.

Cook beets covered to keep color. Soft water or in most cases a tablespoonful of vinegar to each quart of water if hard will help retain the color.

PEAS AS NEW CASH CROP SEEN FOR FARMERS HERE

Experiment to be Conducted This Summer by Extension Department—Seed is Donated

MEETINGS ARE HELD HERE

Believing that Garrett county's climate is suitable to the growing of peas throughout the entire summer, and in an attempt to bring a new cash erop to the farmers of this section, the extension service of the University of Maryland in cooperation with the State department of Markets and other agricultural organizations, is planning to conduct an experiment here, according to C. E. Temple, professor of plant pathology, and W. R. Ballard, extension horticulturist, who were in Garrett county Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Contact meetings were held at Oakland and Accident where farmers were told of the project, its possible accomplishments, and what was necessary for them to do if they cared to participate in the experiment.

The Extension department feels that peas for Baltimore, Washington and Pittsburgh markets could be grown here to advantage during the months when it was impossible to grow them in the other counties of the state, and when it was necessary to have them shipped from Michigan, New York, and Colorado.

Bring Good Prices

A chart for the past few years showed the minimum price for peas during the summer months to be $1.45 per bushel with the maximum $2.15, and it is thought that farmers in this county who will grow peas for market can eventually show a substantial profit from their labors. The variety to be grown would bear around July 15 until frost.

The farmer who accepts the experiment must have good soil, plenty of available labor when the time comes to pick the crop, and he must keep records of his production costs and output. At least 30 farmers asked to participate, and each one will plant between one-fourth to one acre in peas, from seed donated by a seed company to the Extension department for the purpose of carrying on the project.

Aim to Establish Market

The ultimate aim is to establish a market industry here that will furnish the farmers with a new cash crop, and supply an outlet for surplus labor. Extension officials expect to cooperate with the farmers and assist in the marketing of the crop for two or three years. It is hoped by that time a cooperative organization will be formed and a definite market established in the three cities—Baltimore, Pittsburgh, and Washington.

Baseball League Meeting Held at Crellin Last Friday

Six towns were represented at a meeting of the Mt. State Baseball league, held last Friday evening in the town hall, Crellin, when organization of a baseball league for this county was discussed. Approximately 60 people were present.

Kempton, Vindex, Swanton, Oakland, Crellin, and Sunnyside had representatives and towns voted into the league included all but Swanton. The Swanton club must first decide among its members whether or not they want to join the league. Besides Swanton, Gormania, Deer Park, and Steyer are expected to make application at the next meeting, which will be held on April 25, at Sunnyside Grange hall. There are to be elght teams in the league.

The team will play a split schedule, the winner of the first half meeting the winner of the second half in a series of games for the championship. Games are to be played on Wednesdays and Sundays, and the opening games will be on May 14.

Has Right Arm Broken

Playford Glotfelty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Glotfelty, of Meadow Mountain, had his right forearm broken while at work near his home Tuesday morning. Mr. Glotfelty was engaged in sawing some wood with a tractor driven saw when his clothing became caught in the belt connecting the two machines and was thrown for some distance.

The injured man was brought to Oakland where Dr. Broadwater reduced the fracture.

STATE NOT TO TAKE OVER ROADS UNTIL JUNE FIRST

Chairman Had Previously Stated Work Would Start April 1

The State Roads Commission will not take over the roads of the county until after the law passed at the recent session of the Legislature, authorizing them to do so has become effective, it was stated by George W. Harvey, president of the Board of County Commissioners, this morning. The bill becomes a law on June first.

The County Commissloners were notified several weeks ago by a member of the State Roads Commission that the State would take over all county roads on April 1st or thereabout and in consequence the Board of Commissioners notified all county road workers to suspend operations on April 1st.

Last Saturday, however, Mr. Uhl, chairman of the State Roads Commission, in a telephone conversation with the County Commissioners, stated that the State would hake no action until after the law becomes effective. Thus all road workers of the county are now being notified by the County Commissioners to proceed with the work of repalring roads until June first.

LEGISLATURE IS PRAISED FOR WORK ON TAX RELIEF

School and Road Levies Materially Reduced; State Tax Lowered

Holding that the accomplishments of the 1933 General Assembly in the field of tax relief unduly had been overshadowed by beer and banking legislation, Governor Ritchie issued a statement in praise of the Legislature's record.

"I know of no Legislature which has had to its credit anything of more vital, practical, present importance than the program which the Legislature of 1933 adopted for the relief of the people of this whole State in a way and to an extent which challenges comparison with any other State in the land," he said.

The Legislature accomplished a balanced State budget, a lower State tax rate and local tax relief for Baltimore city and the counties.

Relief given by the State to residents of the counties includes:

Reduction of three cents in their State taxes.

Diversion of the counties' share of the 1½cent gasoline tax to the reduction of county road levies and debt service, which will relieve some of the countics of these levies altogether, and the remainder very materially. What each county will actually save from this relief depends, of course, on what it levies. These tax reductions run from approximately 15 cents to 25 and 30 cents and upwards per county.

Application of the counties' $1,500,000 of the aforesaid $3,000,000 fund to the reduction of county levies for school purposes. This, together with salary reductions, will cut school levies in the thirteen counties which will share in the equalization fund from 67 cents to 47 eents, or 20 eents, and will reduce these levies in the ten non-equalization counties in amounts varying from 11 cents up to 20 cents.

Those participating in the hike included Bernard Gonder, Jr., assistant scoutmaster; John McIntire, scribe; Irvin Feld, Hopwood Woodell, Jack Lawton, Walter Dawson, Horace O'Donnell, Robert Broadwater, John Darby, Howard Smouse, Irving Broadwater, William Grant, Robert Browning, Robert Lawton and the scoutmaster.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR FORMER LEGISLATOR

Nathan R. Selby Succumbs at His Home Late Sunday Night

Nathan R. Selby, of near Selbysport, Garrett county, died at his home late Sunday night after more than a year's illness.

Mr. Selby was born at Selbysport on June 28, 1869, the son of Richard and Rebecca Selby, and spent his entire life in this county, being a farmer, lumberman and school teacher.

Becoming interested in politics as a member of the Republican party, Mr. Selby was chosen by that party as a member of the House of Delegates from Garrett county, being elected in 1917. He was defeated for the nomination to the same office in 1919. He was ambitious to represent his native county in the Upper House of the Legislature but failed in the primaries in 1921, 1926 and again in 1930, but remained an ardent supporter of those who opposed him.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Lucretia Collins Selby, and the following sons and daughters: Ernest Selby, Selbysport; Mrs. Lettie King, Baltimore; Mrs. Mary Ituraletta, Williamsburg, Va.; Mrs. Theresa Murphy, Friendsville; and by one brother, Luther Selby, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; and a sister, Mrs. Laura Miller, of Mountain Lake Park.

Mr. Selby was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and a number of organizations and was active in the social and business life of the Selbysport community, contributing much to the welfare of the less fortunate fellow-citizens of his home section.

Funeral services were conducted from his home at Selbysport yesterday (Wednesday) afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. H. E. Sumner, of the Friendsville Methodist Episcopal church, conducting the service. Interment was made in the home cemetery.

The following classes are open for competition: stamps, boat models, sail, sloop, schooner, etc.; airplane models, automobile models, maps, leatherwork, including pocketbooks, keytainers, whisk broom containers, belts, moccasins, etc.; art and sheet metal work, such as hammered articles, candle sticks, dust pans, ash trays, etc.; bird houses, carved woodwork. The final class will include any miscellaneous article made by a boy not included in the above list, such as kites, etc.

All exhibits will be judged on Wednesday and may be removed by the exhibitor on Wednesday evening. Announcement of this contest will be made in the Oakland High and Grammar schools. The contest is not being limited to boys of Oakland, but any boy in the county may enter, providing he is under 18.

One hundred were in attendance at the Kelvinator cooking school, held last Friday afternoon under the direction of the Oakland Supply company. Mrs. A. H. Warren, of Hagerstown, demonstrated "cooking with cold," and various articles were awarded to those present. The following were awarded:

RURAL SOCIOLOGIST WILL TALK WITH YOUNG PEOPLE

Round Table Scheduled For Mt. Lake Park Sunday Afternoon

Young people from every section of Garrett and surrounding counties are being urged to be present and take part in the round table discussion which will be held at the Methodist Episcopal church at Mountain Lake Park on Easter Sunday afternoon, April 16, beginning at 2:00 o'clock.

Dr. E. L. Kirkpatrick, rural sociologist, University of Wisconsin, will deliver an address and later open the discussion on the opportunities open to young people who cannot go to college at present, how they shall use their time and what qualities of leadership they shall cultivate within themselves to meet this problem.

Dr. Kirkpatrick has been conducting a number of youth conferences in the mid-west and east during the past several years. He will come ao Mountain Lake Park from Keyser, West Va.

REFORESTATION CAMPS TO BE SET UP IN THIS AREA

State Forester Besley Says Two or Three Will be Placed Here

Two or three large work camps for Garrett county are planned under the national reforestation program, according to a letter received here this morning from F. W. Besley, State forester, by the local post of American Legion, which last week sent a resolution to the Governor asking that camps be established here and that ex-service men be given the preference for jobs.

"The forestry department has developed plans for doing a great amount of forest work in Garrett county under the reforestation program, to the extent of two or three large work camps," Mr. Besley stated.

"As to the enrollment of men in this work, that is being taken care of through the relief agencies under supervision of the U. S. Department of Labor. The forestry department does not come actively into the picture until the men are turned over to us for work in the woods. We will lay out the work, direct and supervise it from the work camps, which we expect will be set up and operated by the War Department, although this has not been definitely decided."

Twenty-four Garrett Countians Apply for C. M. T. C. Training

Twenty-four applications for training in the Government C. M. T. C. Bowman, Crellin; James W. Eisentrout, Selbysport; Samuel A. Glotfelty, McHenry; Harry Lewis, William A. Morris, William R. Povish, Kempton; Robert Lowdermilk, Friendsville; Francis C. Sereno, Norman L. Sereno, Loraine Wotring, Hutton; James E. White, Mt. Lake Park; Justin E. Arnold, Don S. Bender, Paul F. Ridder, Kitzmiller; William S. Beaver, Bloomington; Earl G. Interest Growing Among Community Tableland Units

Community units of the Allegheny Tableland Association are sending in their pledges for financial support of the Tableland program, according to I. S. Middaugh, director. Terra Alta was the first unit to remit, and Kingwood, Grantsville and Mount Storm have reported their pledges. New units are being reported each week, Mr. Middaugh stated.

Pittsburgh Makes Plans

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce at its meeting in May will consider changes in its constitution which will permit the complete organization and functioning of the Tableland Council within the Chamber of Commerce.

This Tableland Council will then meet in joint session with the governing board of the Tableland at a meeting at which a summer plan of cooperative work will be outlined.

R. F. C. TO ACT SOON ON STATE'S IDLE-AID LOANS

Officials Indicate Decision Will Be Made in Few Days; County Request Approved

GARRETT ASKS FOR AID

Speedy action on the Maryland application for unemployment relief funds for needy counties and municipalities in the State was promised by officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to Walter N. Kirkman, secretary of the Advisory Unemployment Relief Commission of Maryland.

Mr. Kirkman consulted with officials of the R. F. C. concerning the applications of counties and cities in Maryland for short term loans to be used to relieve unemployment in the various political subdivisions. He reported that the application of the several counties had been approved and officials of the R. F. C. emergency department had indicated that a decision would be forthcoming within the next two or three days.

Nine Applications Made

To date eight counties and one city have made application for relief funds, and their petitions were forwarded to the R. F. C., after being approved by the Governor.

The counties asking relief are Allegany, Anne Arundel, Cecil, Dorchester, Frederick, Garrett, Montgomery, and Washington. Cumberland, which was not included in the Allegany county application, also has asked for relief. Garrett county has requested $15,000 per month for a period of three months and $500 for administrative purposes.

The original request from the state was for loans over a period of three months, but under R. F. C. requirements that period has been shortened to two months. Last month the Governor announced that he would make application for relief funds for those political units of the State which gave evidence of acute distress.

A survey conducted previously by Miss Anita J. Faatz, executive secretary of the Board of State Aid and Charities, had revealed that about 10,000 county families were in need of aid. Later the Advisory Unemployment Relief Commission reported that the banking crisis had caused conditions to become acute in several of the counties.

Miss Edna Marshall, Former Supervisor of Schools Here, Dies

Dr. Edna M. Marshall, who for a number of years was connected with the faculty staffs of various Maryland educational institutions, died at Salisbury, Md., on Monday, April 10, following a four months' illness. Funeral services are being held this afternoon at the Salisbury State Normal school with interment to be made at Easton.

Dr. Marshall had received the degrees of bachelor of science, master of arts and doctor of philosophy from Columbia University, and did her first teaching in several of the public schools of Talbot county, of which she was a native.

Dr. Marshall taught in Frostburg Normal school also and came to Garrett county as an elementary school supervisor in the fall of 1919. She remained here until the fall of 1922. She was a member of the faculty of Salisbury Normal school since 1925. Surviving are her mother, one brother and two sisters.

Graded Schools High in State Attendance for February

Garrett county graded schools tied for first place in percentage of attendance among the counties of the State for February with 93.7. Two-teacher schools of the county stood fourth with 94.4; elementary schools stood fifth with 91.8; one-teacher schools stood eighth in their class with 80.3; while the High schools were 10th with 93.3.

Students Receive Certificates

W. R. Ballard, extension horticulturist, University of Maryland, spoke to students of the High school yesterday afternoon on landscaping and the importance of a playground here, after which he presented students who had planted trees with certificates.

Mr. Ballard also visited the Methodist church and made suggestions on beautification.

Lesson for April 16

JESUS TRANSFIGURED

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:2-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. John 1:14.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus God's Son.
JUNIOR TOPIC—With Jesus on a Mountain Top.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Glory of Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of the Transfiguration.

In II Peter 1:16-18 is given an inspired interpretation of the transfiguration by one who was present and knew all that transpired. When Christ announced his death which was to take place on the cross, the disciples were greatly perplexed as to how victory could issue from death. Peter, James, and John accompanied Jesus into the mountain. They went there to pray (Luke 9:28).

In order to revive their drooping spirits and restore their confidence he was transfigured before them. Two men were sent from the realms above to talk with Jesus about his approaching death at Jerusalem (Luke 9:31)—the very thing about which the disciples had refused to talk (Mark 8:31-33). The transfiguration is, therefore, a foregleam of the coming Kingdom. It gives the outline of the order and method of the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

I. Jesus the King Glorified on the Mountain (vv. 2, 3).

He took the disciples "by themselves" and was "transfigured before them." This shows that the purpose of the transfiguration terminated upon the disciples and not upon Christ. Christ's rebuke to Peter for his unwillingness to hear concerning his death seemed for a time to estrange the disciples from him. His shining raiment was typical of that glory which shall be manifest when Christ comes back to earth. His appearance on the mountain typifies his visible appearance on the Mount of Olives (Zech. 14:4, 9).

II. Peter, James, and John Represent Israel in the Flesh in Connection With the Kingdom (v. 2).

Christ is peculiarly the King of Israel. According to Ezekiel 37:21-27, the Israelites are to be the central people in Messiah's Kingdom.

III. Moses and Elijah Appeared in Glory With Jesus (vv. 4-13).

These men in the glorified state are typical of the state of the saints in glory. Moses who was once denied an entrance into Palestine now appears in glory. He represented the redeemed of the Lord who shall pass through death into the Kingdom. Elijah represents the redeemed who shall pass into the Kingdom through translation. Some shall be living upon the earth when the Lord comes, who without dying shall be changed and thus pass into the Kingdom (I Cor. 15:50, 53; I Thess. 4:14-18).

1. Peter's proposal (vv. 5, 6). So definitely was the method of the Kingdom unfolded before Peter that he proposed to erect tabernacles, one for Christ, one for Moses, and one for Elijah. It is true that the unveiling of the majestic person of Christ somewhat disconcerted Peter, yet he grasped its central meaning and proposed to celebrate the advent of his Kingdom which had been prefigured in this tangible way.

2. The divine voice out of the cloud (vv. 7, 8). God declared Jesus to be his beloved Son in whom he was well pleased. The way to know what is pleasing to God is to study Jesus.

3. Christ's charge (vv. 9-13). He charged them that they should tell no man concerning the things which they had seen until he had risen from the dead.

IV. The Purpose of the Establishment of the Kingdom Demonstrated (vv. 14-29).

When they descended from the Mount of Transfiguration they witnessed a great multitude in a state of perplexity. The immediate cause of this state was the grievous condition of a young man possessed with a demon (v. 18), whose father had appealed to the disciples to cast out the demon, but they were unable to do so. When they brought him unto Jesus, the foul spirit was rebuked and came forth. This young man's state is representative of the nations who are grievously oppressed by the devil. Just as this young man was grievously oppressed, causing him to cast himself into the fire and into the waters, so the nations even today in their great perplexity are doing the things which will result in their own destruction. The devil will be peculiarly active in the oppression of men and nations in the last days.

Confess Christ

There cannot be a secret Christian. Grace is like ointment hid in the hand; it betrayeth itself. If you truly feel the sweetness of the cross of Christ, you will be constrained to confess Christ before men.—Robert McCheyne.

God's Revelation

Unless we muse much on God's revelation of his word, no fires of zeal for his glory will glow in our souls.—D. O. Shelton in The Bible Today.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

The theory of being able to write under pressure is all the bunk this week. Usually it works, but here it is a short time before the zero hour and no column. We shudder to think what might happen to the subscription list of The Republican if we were to fold up our tent, so something just has to be done about it.

It may be the power of suggestion, or something but the fact is that some men are working on that Alder street eyesore that we spoke about last week.

* * *

All right! I'll give every citizen just three weeks to get busy cleaning up his property or include his name in the list of town's eyesores. Don't be like the fellow who kept his property as dirty as he was. He boasted that he had a hide like a rhino and that he wasn't due to take a bath until June 30th.

Some people take a bath each day,
And some three times a week,
But we don't take ours, we're free to say,
Until our wrinkles squeak.
That is, if we have wrinkles.

Eggs have become so cheap. It's well the hen cannot know how much she makes for a day of hard labor. It would break down the morale.

And speaking of poultry, have you heard of the representative of the pillow and mattress concern who was sent to Oakland to contract for a carload or so of chicken feathers from a "large" hennery in the East Oakland section?

Although coming a little late, we have just found out what "Technocracy" is. It is the hydroputical inconsequential circumbulocution of the thermistatical parallelogram, and it was first discovered by Dr. Rollinzomoski Sepigelgotoski, of Russia, and the only known remedy is ipecac.

* * *

When you want any information, just call us. We know everything, including who lobbied for the beer bill. Just a few minutes ago somebody called from Crellin and wanted to know whether the Titanic which sank in 1912 was an English or American vessel. After finding the information bureau behind the linotype machine (the boss editor himself), we discovered that it was an English vessel, making its maiden voyage to this country.

Just ask us anything. If we don't know it, we won't admit it.

After listening intently over the radio for new jokes and new ideas, we wish we could sprinkle formaldehyde on some of the jokes they are springing over the air. Eddie Cantor and Fred Allen are as guilty as the rest of them. If they keep on going backward I'm going to feel like a two-year-old (not a two-year-old egg).

If the county gets $45,000 to distribute to the unemployed of this county it's going to be much nicer being unemployed than having a job. With less than 20,000 people in the county, why not just give each of us $2.00 and let it go at that. My address is Scoop, care of The Republican. Send cash or money order, and just watch my dust.

Seems to me a lot of those who got Red Cross flour, Red Cross cotton and supplies through the Relief Committee had less to worry about and got along better than a lot of others who were trying to make an honest living.

I could go on like this forever, and I take back what I said at the beginning of this column. The boss editor informs me he'll leave me out altogether unless I hurry up, and as we're crowded anyway, I shall buss you all goodbye. And if you don't know what buss is, watch out for it next week, or consult old man Noah.

T. B. IN YOUNG CHILDREN AND IN INFANTS IS SERIOUS

Disease Develops Rapidly and Is Likely to End Fatally

Tuberculosis is usually associated with young people and grown-ups, not with babies and very young children. Accordingly, it comes as a surprise to find that one out of every thirty-three deaths in the total deaths from tuberculosis in the white population in Maryland, in 1931, was that of a child under five. In the colored population, one out of every twenty deaths at all ages, from tuberculosis, was that of a child under five.

Speaking of children and their susceptibility to tuberculosis, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said: "Few people realize that babies and young children are very likely to catch tuberculosis if they are kept in the rooms with people who have the disease, use the same dishes, sleep in the same beds or are handled and kissed by people who have tuberculosis.

"Babies and young children pick up the germs of tuberculosis just as readily as they pick up the germs of measles or whooping cough or of any other of the so-called children's diseases. But tuberculosis is different from other diseases in certain particulars. Unlike most diseases, it has more than one form. Babies who get tuberculosis may not show the symptoms we associate with the dicease in older people. But the disease in most cases develops rapidly and is likely to end fatally. Tuberculosis in babies and young children is a very serious matter, but recent studies have shown that if young children are removed promptly from contact with the disease and given the necessary care, many lives can be saved.

"A great deal can be accomplished whenever tuberculosis develops, whether in young or old, if the presence of the disease is recognized when it is in its early stages and if medical attention is secured promptly.

"Beginning this month, the tuberculosis organizations all over the United States—our own Maryland Tuberculosis Association among them—are starting their sixth annual drive to interest people in the possibilities of preventing the spread of tuberculosis in people of all ages, of checking the disease, if it has started, and of saving countless lives through the early discovery of the disease and intelligent cure.

"Tuberculosis doesn't just simply happen. Nobody is born with the disease. Everybody who develops tuberculosis gets it from some other source. Children and young people who have been in contact with persons ill with tuberculosis are especially likely to contract it.

"A special effort is made in the tuberculosis clinics held each month throughout the counties under the joint direction of the State Department of Health and the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, to reach persons who have been in contact with tuberculosis so that they can be advised as to the care that should be taken to check the disease if it has already developed. Nearly all of the people—young and old—who have been examined at these clinics have been referred to them by their own doctors. Persons who are interested in these clinics can find out about them from their own doctors, the county health officer or the public health nurse."

Junior Safety Campaign To Be Inaugurated In State

E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, announces the inauguration of the "Junior Safety Campaign" from May 1 to May 7. This campaign will be state-wide in scope and it is designed to reduce the number of children injured or killed in traffic accidents.

This campaign is to be a direct appeal to the children through the medium of the city, county, and parochial schools, as well as the "Kiddie Clubs" of the various radio stations and theatres throughout the state. The Baltimore Safety Council, through its director, John P. Rostmeyer, is cooperating fully with Mr. Baughman in the interest of the success of this campaign.

During the week of the campaign members of the State and City police will visit all the schools and will give short talks to the children to impress upon them the importance of the drive in respect to their own safety by carrying out the campaign slogan "Alert today: Alive tomorrow."

The "Junior Safety Campaign" means that we must teach the child that it is equally as important for him to stay out of the way of the motorist, as it is for the motorist to avoid the child.

Distress and Perplexity

For several years past one evil upon the people has been quickly followed by another and greater evil. Now the whole world is in a state of distress and perplexity. Human remedies have failed to relieve that world distress. In the language of Jehovah's prophet now, "all the foundations of the earth are out of course." (Ps. 82:5). The final evil will be reached at Armageddon. When will it come? Concerning that time God by his prophet has said: "My determination is to gather the nations, that I may pour upon them my fierce anger." (Zeph. 3:8). In his last prophetic utterance when on earth Jesus foretold Armageddon, describing it as a time of "tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." That will be the final trouble. (Matt. 24:21). Is that great cataclysm rapidly approaching?

WHAT IS THE WAY OF ESCAPE?

These questions are of the greatest public interest, convenience and necessity, and God has provided the radio that the people may collectively and calmly hear them discussed. J. F. Rutherford, the man best qualified to dispassionately and instructively answer these questions, will do so, in person, in a lecture to be delivered

Sunday Evening 6 to 7 Central Standard Time 7 to 8 Eastern Standard Time APRIL 16

The purpose of this lecture is to aid the people to find the way of greatest safety in this crucial hour.

Maryland Opens Her Trout Streams

THE FRESH WATER FISHERMAN, AIDED BY CONSERVATION, FACES SPORT

By PETER C. CHAMBLISS.
In the Baltimore Sunday Sun, April 2, 1933.

Maryland's fresh-water trout fisherman came into their own again two weeks ago with the opening of the '33 season. They'll remain in that blissful state until June 30, when the rainbow and brook trout will have protection for another year.

Aiding the ambition of the State's anglers is the Maryland Conservation Commission Department, which has followed out the policy adopted hy Swepson Earle, commissioner, and A. M. Powell, superintendent of hatcheries, of planting in Maryland's streams only adult or legal size trout of seven inches in length or more.

This policy and that of following it up with additional plantings in streams that are most heavily fished as the season progresses guarantees trout fishermen lusty specimens.

Maryland's present method of fulfilling the wants of the fresh-water angler goes back to the very source of the problem—the stream itself. Nothing is taken for granted and before trout that have been hand spawned, hand hatched, and hand reared are planted, streams to receive them must be certified of a purity and temperature to sustain trout life and contain food elements so necessary for the growth of the species.

In years gone by the planting of trout may have been more or less of a hit-or-miss proposition with millions of trout fry simply dumped into the streams. But that day has gone forever and it is safe to say that few of those millions ever survived and grew to proportions sufficient to take the angler's hook.

Nowadays the very first move in the scheme of stocking a stream, whether it be with fresh water trout, bass, crappie or whatnot is to first learn through a thorough survey of the waters whether it is suitable for the planting of the fish.

Of the fish found in Maryland waters the brook trout is by far the most fastidious as to his environment, thriving best in mountain or spring streams that seldom attain a temperature higher than 68 degrees, and containing a minimum of pollution; while the brown trout can stand a water temperature at least fifteen degrees higher ami will thrive in waters lacking the purity essential to the well-being of the hrook trout. Between the two extremes is the rainbow which, however, leans a little closer to the characteristics of the brook trout.

The term "hand reared," denoting care in rearing never applied to anything more aptly than it does to the production of hatchery-bred fresh-water trout. Even before the egg stage in their life history the greatest amount of scientific knowledge and application is expended on these trout.

Superintendent Powell, who with his assistants has played nurse to millions of trout, estimates that a brook trout from the egg stage to the ten or twelve inch size represents an outlay of probably 50 cents. What the angler spends for each trout he lands is another story, but it is almost safe to say that the total will stand up against what the average ducker spends to bag each duck—which is plenty!

First on the program of trout development in Maryland hatcheries is the selection of the parent fish, and none but the healthiest, strongest and most perfectly formed are kept as brood stock. Brook trout usually spawn when they are two years old, and the period of their greatest productivity extends from that age until they reach five years. Upon attaining the latter age, Superintendent Powell feels, their best days as brood fish are over and they are released in suitable streams of the State.

Birth control is a great factor in the production of fish on a large scale. This is not the birth control as we know it; in fact, it is the exact opposite, the idea being to control upward instead of limiting the amount of the progeny.

In December brook trout reach the spawning stage under propitious circumstances. And it is then that nature is halted in her stride and man takes a hand in the baby trout business. From that time onward neither Papa Trout nor Mamma Trout has one thing to do in the rearing of what might have been their brood.

Left to carry out their scheme of life in a natural way, Mamma Trout would have deposited her spawn or eggs in a grnvel nest, where they would he fertilized by Papa Trout, and ir due course hatched. And from then on the battle of the infant to exist—to find food and dodge enemies—would be an endless one with the chances largely again the baby ever growing to be a lusty parent fish.

But with the "hand-reared" method what a different picture. The trout ready to spawn is lifted from the brood pond and skillful hands assist her in depositing her spawn into a waiting vessel. This is called stripping. A healthy, full-grown trout will spawn hundreds of eggs. Next a male trout is chosen and the milt extracted by stripping him in the same fashion as the female. Finally, the milt ar l spawn are brought together in the same vessel in the hatchery and kept constantly in motion in water of correct temperature until spawn and milt are thoroughly mixed and each egg is fertilized.

Eighteen days elapse during which the spawn is kept in flowing water at a temperature of 52 degrees. By this time it has reached what is known as the eyed-egg stage. What appears to be an eye is really the yolk sac, the self-sustaining lunch basket upon which each baby trout lives until he is able to take food.

At forty-five days or thereabouts the eggs hatch and the baby trout are then known as fry. At first they are tiny little splinters of animation seemingly all yolk sac which continues to furnish them with all the necessities of life. When the fry stage is reached the newly hatched trout are taken from the hatching troughs and put in the first of the rearing troughs, which are long wooden affairs, probably two feet wide and twelve to fourteen inches deep and filled always.

Gradually the yolk sac seems to disappear. In reality the sides of the baby trout's body grow downward, finally meeting and inclosing the yolk sac, which then becomes the little one's stomach. And each of these little wisps seems to know immediately just what that stomach is for, and the one idea seems to be to keep it as crammed full as possible. This occurs at about sixty to seventy days from the time of spawning. Such fry are known as advanced fry and are about one inch in length.

The advanced fry stage lasts until the babies are about two inches long, when they enter the fingering stage of development, being characterized as two-inch, three-inch or four-inch fingerlings. These are moved to outdoor rearing ponds, where their growth continues.

In former days the fry stage and the fingerling states were held to be the proper time for planting in the streams, but now it is believed that even the frys and the fingerlings have slight chance of surviving and becomings legal sizs fish when put into streams.

During the remaining stages the fish are constantly under the surveillance of their keepers, who watch the water temperature, see that they get proper food and plenty of it, and are graded as to size to make sure that the more rapid-growing hrothers and sisters don't mnke meals off their less favored kind. Trout are notably cannibalistic.

Some of the baby trout grow faster than others, and from the December spawnings there will be some that have reached the legal length of 7 inches hy October and are ready for planting in the streams.

From the time their ever-ready supply of food in the yolk sac is exhausted at the beginning of the fry stage until they are released as game for the angler the young trout are voracious feeders, consuming almost unbelievable quantities of food. The idea is to produce as big a trout in as short a time as possible and "their table is nlways set," though surplus food is always carefully removed at the end of the day to prevent pollution of the water and consequent death of the baby fish.

Beef and hog liver and beef heart ground fine are the staple foods of the young trout's diet and apparently they thrive upon it.

As a variation, Superintendent Powell has found that canned tuna is acceptable and furnishes a cheaper side dish than the fresh beef and hog organs.

Ground-up fresh fish, the hybrids and cast-offs of numerous goldfish-farming enterprises in Frederick county forms another variety of diet; for this is also cheaper than the heef and hog livers and hearts.

Some idea of what the food item in a fish hatchery means may be obtained from a few figures. In the Lewistown hatchery at present are 200,000 trout fry, the result of the December spawnings. They are from an inch to an inch and a half in length, and it takes about 100 pounds of food a week to appease their appetites.

In addition to these, there are about 20,000 adult trout ready for distribution as needed during the fishing season and about 35,000 three, four and five inch fingerlings held in the rearing pools of Lewistown, Cuswa Springs, Washington county; Bear Creek, Garrett county, and the Lawrence Richey camp, near Catoctin Furnace, in Frederick county.

The entire trout population in the hatchery and rearing ponds consumes approximately 1,100 pounds of food per week. The last financial statement of the Conservation Department discloses that from October 1, 1931, to September 30, 1932, $9,100.18 was spent for food for fresh-water fish.

It is interesting to note that in comparison the fish consume less as they grow older, for upon being transferred from breeding troughs in the hatchery to outside rearing and retaining ponds a certain amount of natural food is carried to them by the running streams which furnish water for the ponds.

The State's propagation of fresh-water fishes upon the present broad scale and with increasing facilities assumed really definite shape about 1917 when the Legislature passed an act authorizing the construction of two new fish hatcheries—one for salt-water fish and the other for fresh-water fish.

The fresh-water hatchery, upon the advice of a Government expert engaged to carry on the work, was established near Lewistown, Md., at the foot of the Catoctin Mountain, as the most desirable place.

From the hatchery in 1918, it was reported 240,000 trout fry were distributed. The following year a total of 2,049,115 fry were distributed, among them being: 662,786 brook trout, 189,550 rainbow, 271,771 largemouth and 60,269 small-mouth bass.

In 1929, with the passage of the fresh-water anglers' license act, which required all persons 16 years old or over, except those fishing on their own lands, to obtain a fishing license, the department was furnished with additional revenue for the operation of the fresh-water hatchery.

The number of licenses has increased from year to year until last year 13,797 licenses were issued to fresh-water anglers. This is exclusive of non-resident licenses and special licenses required for Deep Creek Lake in Garrett county. The total sum realized was $17,458.87. Revenues from other sources brought the total list up to $22,354.13.

With the increase of revenue it has been possible to increase the scope of the work until at present fresh-water fish propagation has spread to other counties. The main hatchery at Lewistown is a modern structure in which all the incubation of eggs and the rearing of trout up to two inches in length is carried on, after which they are distributed to the rearing ponds of stations at Cushwa Springs, Bear Creek, White Rock, the Richey Camp, near Lewistown, and Fairlee Station, Kent county.

The Richey Camp, owned by Lawrence Richey, former secretary to former President Hoover, is in the Catoctin Mountain and has a series of wonderful trout-rearing pools.

At the beginning of this year the report of Superintendent Powell of the fresh-water fish population at the hatchery and at the various stations was as follows:

Lewistown Hatchery—300,000 brook trout fry, 75,000 rainbow trout fry, 4,000 rainbow fingerlings, 4 to 6 in. in length; 3,000 brook trout adults for distribution, 160 small-mouth bass (adult brood stock).

Richey Camp—300 adult brook trout (brood stock), 200 adult rainbow trout (brood stock), 5,000 rainbow trout fingerlings, 4 to 7 inches.

White Rock Station—8,000 brook trout fingerlings, 4 to 7 inches.

Cushwa Springs Station—10,000 rainbow trout fingerlings, 4 to 7 in.; 7,500 rainhow trout for distribution.

Bear Creek Station—10,000 brook trout for distribution; 6,000 brook trout fingerlings, 4 to 7 inches; 2,000 rainbow trout fingerlings, 4 to 7 inches.

Fairlee Station, Kent County—1,500 adult crappie for distribution, 30,000 fingerling crappie for distribution, 5,000 large mouth bass fingerlings for distribution; 1,200 large mouth bass (brood stock), 150 crappie (brood stock).

While numbers of streams in the various counties of the State that will stand stocking have been planted with fish, some of them have been made "key" strenms, with the intention of attracting as many fishermen to those bodies of water as possible so that brooks that have not been stocked so heavily will be overfished.

In Anne Arundel county, for instance, Severn Run, above the Crain Highway, has been made the "key" stream. It is a splendid stream in which the Conservation Department has planted a total of 1,360 brook trout, running from 7 to 12 inches. This stream was stocked heavily, principally to divert some of the Baltimore fishing fraternity from the Western Mnryland streams that have been overfished during past years. If the anglers take to this little known stream, it is the plan of Commissioner Earle to continue to stock it throughout the season. It is but a short run from Baltimore to where it crosses the Crain Highway.

In Baltimore county all the old standbys with exception of Western Run have been well stocked. Western Run, which many regard as one of the best trout streams in the State, particularly for brown trout, is not being stocked this year because so many of the residents along the stream have posted their land against fishermen.

In Frederick county, Fishing Creek, with 2,735 brook trout, all of legal size or better, and 300 rainbow trout, some of them whoppers, and Big Hunting Creek, with 1,720 brooks of legal size, are the key streams.

Garrett county streams have all been pretty well stocked. Savage River, with 1,700 brook trout of legal size, and Bear Creek, regarded as the best trout stream in the State, has been planted with 3,500 brooks of the size that any man would be glad to put in his creel. Youghiogheny River, Bear Creek and Dunkard Run have been plentifully stocked with rainhows.

None of the streams in Washington county has been stocked with brook trout, but all of the principal ones have received good plnntings of rainbows.

Approximately 20,000 brooks nnd rainbows have been retained by the department for stocking as the season progresses.

MT. LAKE PARK

Quo Vadis

There is food for thought in the frequent house breaking incidents which have occurred in the Park during the past several months.

The long series of felonies of this character, beginning last winter a year ago, ended with the last (or is it the last?) when the Allegheny House was entered, makes us wonder whither we are going. Evidence seems to indicate that at least two persons were concerned at the Allegheny House, as marks on the lattice enclosing the underneath portion of the rear of the house was broken and several spots of mud from the ground up looked as though some one had been "boosted" by a second person, and thus gained entrance. The padlock and hasp fastening a back door leading from the porch direct into the kitchen had been "jimmied" off, breaking the wood to which it had been fastened. A heavy refrigerator, which had been left against the door on the inside had been moved away. Finger prints were evident in the accumulated dust on a secretary in an office in the front of the house with evidence that it had been hastily ransacked.

Whether anything of value had been taken or not, makes but little difference, except as the loss might effect the owners. The main point is, that every incident of this kind batters down the sacredness of property rights and lessens the security of property owners. It brings home the truth of the statement frequently heard these days that we evidently have some undesirables in or about the Park.

What is the remedy? We confess we do not know. There are 800 acres within the Park area, with houses scattered here and there, widely separated. The very nature of the place, with trees everywhere and consequent deep shadows, makes the Park an ideal place to escape observation. We have only one policeman to patrol the whole area, and he drawing a very meagre salary. Bailiff Wiley, we believe, is alert, fearless and anxious to do his duty. But a thorough night inspection of the Park by one man is a physical impossibility. The small revenue received from taxes by the corporation raises an impassable barrier to additional expenditures by the Mayor and Council. After the payment of the necessary bills for light, road and street improvement and other small items, there is but a small surplus.

However, some scheme must be devised to put a stop to house-breaking and other flagrant violations of the law about which we hear but know nothing.

There is widespread confidence in State's Attorney Dawson. He is impartial, fearless and honest. Give him the evidence to place before the grand jury and see petty and other crime here disappear as mist before the morning sun.

Furtive, slinking, looking neither to the right or to the left, with shoulders hunched, dressed all in black, black caps pulled low over the eyes, long, black overcoats—who were the two men seen walking along one of the streets, in the middle of the road, after ten o'clock on the night before the Cuppett fire?

Were they on an honest mission bent? or were they—?

Was the Allegheny House broken into that night?

For what purpose were the five pistol shots fired just before the fire was discovered? Did the same person fire them that fired five shots just before a previous fire was discovered?

Mysterious? Yes, but facts. The answers might prove interesting.

Further: Were the low mumbling voices and the dull, scraping noise, heard by a lady of the Park as she passed the Allegheny House, returning around ten o'clock Wednesday evening from a neighborhood call, the voices of the men who broke into that house as they moved the heavy refrigerator?

Fire Hydrants Tested

The fire plugs recently installed by the Mayor and Council, at least the one on the Winchell corner, got a real test last Thursday morning. For over an hour a constant stream from lines laid to the plug were played on the fire which destroyed the Cuppett house and on the adjacent buildings without apparently diminishing the water supply. The pressure was all that was expected. Other hydrants placed at strategic points would certainly lower the fire hazard in the Park.

Boots Disappeared Last

Having occasion to return to his garage after putting his car to bed following a trip to Terra Alta about eleven o'clock one night last week, Rev. J. A. Jessee heard a big commotion just as he was about to open the garage door. Hastily unlocking and jerking the door suddenly open he cast a beam from his flashlight inside when he beheld a pair of boots disappearing through an opening beneath the alley door. No doubt there was a pair of legs just preceding the boots.

On entering the reverend gentleman found that a number of his car tools had been gathered together and placed in a seat cover ready for quick removal. Had the thief been apprehended we imagine Christian forbearance and ministerial dignity would have been temporarily forgotten.

Since writing the foregoing we have learned that the Mayor and Council have posted a reward of fifty dollars for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons breaking or entering any dwelling or other building.

The Council has also posted notice of the ordinance requiring all fallen leaves to be removed or otherwise disposed of from all occupied or vacant lots in the Park on or before the first of May.

Sealed bids will also be received for the removal of garbage during the summer months.

Council also calls attention to the necessity for all water users to keep all spigots and openings for water closed during a fire in the Park, as water permitted to run during such times causes the fire engines to pump air, which may mean wasted effort at a very critical time.

Missionary Pageant

The Easter Missionary pageant, entitled "New Life In Our World," will be presented at the M. E. church in the Park at 7:30 o'clock at the evening service on April 16. Special Easter music will be rendered by the choir.

Sunrise service under the direction of the Christian Endeavor Society, will be held in the U. B. church, Loch Lynn, Easter morning at 6:00 o'clock.

Mrs. Effie Bowman, of Crellin, and Mrs. Madge White, of near Oakland, were visiting their uncle, J. A. Enlow, a day or two ago.

Old and former residents are returning to the mountain top. The latest arrival to be noted is Mr. A. T. White, who came with his family from Frederick and will become residents again. They are occupying Mrs. Cornwell's property.

Mr. Groves has rented and moved into Mrs. Dixon's property.

GARRETT COUNTY RELIEF WORK BEGINS THIS WEEK

Road Projects and Repairs To Provide Employment—First Money Allotment Received

SOCIAL WORKERS TO AID

Relief work was started today in Garrett, Allegany and Washington counties under the plan for the distribution of the first of the Reconstruction Corporation loans.

The first allotment of the supplemental relief funds was turned over to Governor Ritchie and will be paid out in weekly installments to Allegany, Anne Arundel, Ceeil, Dorchester, Frederick, Garrett, Montgomery and Washington counties and the city of Cumberland. The State was granted a total of $153,530, and the weekly installments will be $19,191.

Welfare workers, loaned the State by various welfare agencies, are setting up machinery for distribution of the fund in Allegany, Garrett and Washington counties, where the need for outside aid in relief has been reported to be urgent.

A meeting is called by the Welfare organization for this afternoon when the work will be outlined by Miss Anita Faatz, welfare worker, from Baltimore.

Plan Road Work

Projects which will be started in the three counties will take in special road construction and repair and forestry work, on which the Federal aid funds may be expended.

Walter N. Kirkman, of the State Advisory Unemployment Relief Committee, said no county is to know how much is allotted for supplemental nid within its boards by the Federal agency.

Under the plan for handling the money, Governor Ritchie is to deposit the weekly checks in a special fund in the State Treasury in the name of the Advisory Committee. The committee will pay out the funds through the county commissioners of the various counties and to the officials of Cumberland.

Welfare agencies in the counties will be asked to account to the County Commissioners for expenditures. The County Commissioners in turn will certify these to the committee which will draw vouchers on the State Treasury for the various amounts. Kirkman said the theory of keeping the political sub-divisions in ignorance of the total amount allotted to them is advanced by the R. F. C. as a means for more efficient administration of the aid funds.

Map Forest Work

The Advisory Committee has been given the work of recruiting Maryland's county quota of 2,500 reforestation volunteers. It was announced F. W. Besley, State Forester, was mapping out forestry projects on which to employ the units assigned to the State by the Department of Labor.

Kirkman said the State plans to place the volunteers, following a period of training in army camps, on the State game preserves and in the State forest reserves. He pointed out the county quotas will be acquired thru various private welfare agencies.

GARRETT COUNTY MINER LOSES CLAIM ON APPEAL

Court Also Gives Verdict For County in Claim of Widow

In the Allegany county Circuit Court at Cumberland on Friday the jury that heard the appeal of James Hanline, claimant, against the Shallmar Mining Corporation and State Accident Industrial Commission, returned a verdict in favor of the defendants on the issue.

Hanline was allowed compensation for loss of his finger. He also filed claim that by reason of the amputation of the finger he had lost the use of his hand.

Widow Loses Claim

The court also returned a verdict in favor of the Accident Commission and the County Commissioners of Garrett county, defendants, in the case of Mrs. Beda McKenzie, of Finzel, the claimant, whose husband, the late Clem McKenzie, was injured while in the employ of the County Commissioners. McKenzie, according to the evidence, was injured about the head in a fall from a grader. Later he underwent an operation for appendicitis, from which he died. The claimant contended that the fall caused the appendicitis attack which resulted in her husband's death. The case was taken from the jury by the Court.

FORESTRY INCENDIARIST IS CALLED MEANEST MAN

Twenty Percent of Fires Are Traceable to Incendiarism

The incendiarist has been termed the "Meanest Man" in an article in the April issue of the forestry News Letter, and his deeds demand that he be eliminated from among men or that his desires to burn never get beyond the stage of temptation.

In 1931 incendiarists caused fifteen percent of all forest fires, and in 1932 their activities increased to 20 percent of the total number.

Forest wardens are requested not to hire any suspicious or questionable men to figst fires, who have probably set the fire in order to get paid for fighting it.

To Provide Camps

The officials of the Baltimore office of the State Department of Forestry have been called upon to present detailed plans for the use of unemployed for forestry projects on State forests. State Forester believes that approximately 50,000 acres of State forests and State game preserves in Garrett and Allegany counties will provide sufficient work to warrant the establishment of three camps of two hundred men each. A fourth camp, of like size, seems possible for Prince George's and Charles counties.

The work contemplated includes improvement cuttings, construction and maintenance of forest roads, forest trails and fire breaks; white pine blister rust control, lookout tower construction, roadside improvement, recreational developments, water hole construction, forest planting, boundary survey, clearing of streams and springs, building of telephone lines, and construction and repair of various buildings.

The bride was formerly employed at Hopemont Sanitarium while the groom is at present employed as clerk by the Western Maryland Railway Company at Cumberland. The groom is a graduate of Oakland High School, class of 1926, where he took a commercial course.

FURTHER TAX REDUCTIONS ARE SOUGHT AT MEETING

Taxpayers' League, With Less Than 100 Present, Advocate Abolishing Many Offices

WANT VOTE ON BEER BILL

Various tax-reduction proposals for Garrett county and a move to ask the County Commissioners to call a special election to vote on the beer bill referendum, were approved at a meeting of less than 100 people, held in the Court House in Oakland last Saturday morning.

Resolutions calling for elimination of appropriations for the health physician, the two health nurses, the home demonstration agent, the truant officer, all grade supervisors but one, and a reduction in appropriations to incorporated towns of the county of $100 each, were adopted at the meeting.

The separate motions for all these reductions were made up by William Miller, chairman, and passed out to individuals at the meeting, to be read when called for, and in two instances the individuals were not able to tell what they were about. A motion also was introduced asking that the county commissioners cease spending money on county roads until June 1, when the State is to take them over, except in case of emergency.

About seventy attended the meeting. At the conclusion when only about fifty were present, W. R. Browning offered a motion to appoint a committee to ask the county commissioners and the board of election supervisors to call a special election to vote on the beer question. The motion was carried 27 to 18 after heated arguments, and Mr. Browning, Lawrence Fraley, and C. N. McIntire were named on the committee.

The Legislature passed a bill designed to prohibit beer in Garrett until the question is submitted at a referendum to be taken at the next special or general election.

Wm. Browning, H. J. Speicher, C. E. Hardesty, S. T. Brenneman, O. S. Fike and A. G. Cullers were named to present all the resolutions to the County Commissioners and several of the committee appeared as requested last Saturday afternoon.

Committees Named

William Miller, Harvey Speicher, and Wm. Browning were appointed to appear before the Board of Education.

George D. Browning, county commissioner, asserted at the meeting that the commissioners were not bound to accept any of the motions advocated. Bills passed by the Legislature already have reduced the county tax rate approximately $1.00, it was estimated. A special election, if ruled legal by the Attorney-General, it is believed, would cost the county in the neighborhood of $4,000. Estimated revenue from beer licenses was $2,500.

Deep Creek Lake Is Nearing Its Capacity

As a result of heavy rains during the past month, Deep Creek Lake is now within three and one-fourth feet of the top, according to a statement this morning from C. E. MacMurray, of the Power house at Sines.

Eighty-five hundredths of an inch of rain fell yesterday and it was estimated that the lake would be full in about three weeks, should such weather continue. Between March 13 and April 17, there was a 9-inch rainfall, which raised the water in the lake eight feet.

Weather continues cool.

ACCIDENT MAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE ON MONDAY NIGHT

Harold Burch Swallows Quantity of Chloroform Liniment at His Wife's Home in that Town

RETURNED TO END IT ALL

Harold Burch, about 35 years of age, made an unsuccessful attempt to end his life Monday evening at his wife's home at Accident when he swallowed a quantity of chloroform liniment. He was given medical aid by Dr. N. I. Broadwater, of Oakland, who was notified shortly after, and was brought to the hospital ward of the county jail by Sheriff Walter H. Haenftling and State's Attorney W. W. Dawson for observation.

Mrs. Burch, the widow of the late Dr. Playford Rush who died at the close of the World War in 1918, had been living in Accident for the past year or more. Her husband came here from Baltimore for a visit some months ago but had returned to that city. When Mrs. Burch returned from a visit with Mrs. Martin Rush and family on Monday evening, she found her husband in her room. He told her he had come back to "end it all" and drank the contents of the bottle containing the chloroform liniment.

While still suffering from the effects of the liquid, he told officers Tuesday morning that he would "finish the job some other way," but later in the day decided that he was through attempting his own life. Mr. Burch is said to be an electrical engineer.

Authorities here were waiting until his parents arrived from Baltimore to see what would be done. It was thought he might be sent to the House of Correction on a vagrancy charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Burch have two young children, a boy and a girl.

Blackwater Falls Claims First Victim

Blackwater Falls claimed its first victim last Thursday morning when William Effland was swept over the falls and drowned. Mr. Effland, his son George, home from Akron, O., on a visit, and a friend accompanying him, were out on a sight-seeing visit to the falls and while crossing on a plank bridge to the opposite side of the river, Mr. Effland for some reason lost his balance and fell into the swift stream about 100 yards above the falls, and despite his struggles was carried by the strong current which was swift from a recent rain and snow, over the falls, a distance of about 60 feet and went out of sight of the eyes of his son and friend. Unable to locate the body the two men hurried to Davis for aid, and a searching party was organized and returning to the falls the body was found about 200 yards below, caught against a rock.

Mr. Effland was aged 45 years, a miner hy occupation, and is survived by his widow and several children.

JESUS REBUKES SELF-SEEKING (Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:30-50.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Romans 13:10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—My Playmates.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Test of Greatness.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Others First.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Sin of Selfishness.

I. The Stupidity of Self-Seeking (vv. 30-32).

Jesus with his disciples was on his way to Capernaum for the last time. He sought a way of retirement in order to be alone with his disciples so as to lend them to apprehend the meaning of the cross. The teaching which was interrupted at Caesarea by Peter's rebuke is now resumed and with definiteness he declares the future event as already present.

1. "The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men" (v. 31).

2. "They shall kill him" (v. 31).

3. "He shall rise the third day" (v. 31). While pressing continually upon them the fact and necessity of the cross, he always showed them the bright side—his triumphant victory over death in the resurrection from the dead. The hearts of the disciples were so steeped in selfishness that they failed to grasp the meaning of his teaching.

II. The Wrangling of Self-Seeking (vv. 33-37).

1. The searching question (v. 33). Because Christ was omniscient he knew the secrets of their hearts. The fact that the disciples were wrangling about official position while the Lord was facing humiliation and death for them and for the whole world, shows how completely alone he was in his sorrow.

2. The silent disciples (v. 34). They were ashamed in his presence when the selfishness of their hearts was revealed.

3. The stinging rebuke (v. 35). "If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all." The greatest men are those who are willing to take the lowest place and serve others.

4. The striking illustration (vv. 36, 37). He took a child and set him in the midst of them, thus in a concrete way enforcing his teaching. The child was an illustration of ignorance and dependence. By example and word he showed that true greatness is expressed by willingness to aid the weak, to enlighten the ignorant, and to serve those in need. All who render such service do it, not merely to the needy ones, but to Christ and God. True greatness, therefore, consists not in self-seeking, but in rendering cheerful service to the needy in the name of Christ.

III. The Intolerance of Self-Seeking (vv. 38-41).

1. John's guilty conscience (v. 38). In the light of the teaching of Jesus, John was disturbed over having forbidden a worker for Christ who did not follow after him. Doubtless, this intolerance was in part due to jealousy for Christ, but also for selfish ambition. Many times bigotry is mistaken for zeal for Christ.

2. Whom to tolerate (vv. 39-41).

a. Those who are casting out devils (v. 39). We should really satisfy ourselves that supernatural works are being done. Are demons being cast out? However, this is not final, for there is a supernatural work not of God (Matt. 7:21-23).

b. Those who are doing supernatural works in Christ's name (v. 41). All workers going forth in the name of Christ and for the glory of Christ should be given Godspeed, even though not members of our church or school. "Forbid him not."

IV. The Awful Issue of Self-Seeking (vv. 42-50).

1. Ruin to others (v. 42). Self-seeking usually results in ruin to others.

2. Ruin to the individual (vv. 43, 45, 47). In both cases the issue is eternal torment. Selfishness is opposed to God; and that which is opposed to him must be eternally separated from him. Self-renunciation should be so complete that we should be willing to abandon the most necessary and lawful things in life—hands, feet, eyes—when they become occasions for stumbling either for ourselves or others. No matter how dear or how necessary the friendship, faculty, or possession, if it leads to disloyalty to Christ, it must be forsaken. Spiritual surgery must be employed even when the loss is as great as the sacrifice of a hand or foot. Better suffer the temporary loss and pain of such separation than to suffer eternally.

Leaving the Gospel

"Wrong views of Divine truth among the people of God are always the immediate forerunners of a total departure from the Gospel on the part of a great body of professors of religion."—Robert Haldane.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Hinseif

In case you didn't look up that word "buss" that was used in this column last week, it's time you knew. It's an old one, as I found it in a Republican of forty years ago.

Buss—to kiss. If that is it, rebuss is to kiss again; buskin is kissing your cousin; blunderbuss is a kiss plastered on the wrong party; omnibus is kissing everybody, like Frances Filsinger said she wanted to do at the close of the recent high school play, and one who makes a habit of it is a regular buster.

Parsing the word buss, or kiss—it is a noun, but is usually used as a conjunction. It is never declined and is more common than proper. It is not very singular in that it is usually in the plural. It agrees with me.

A girl could have been choked to death at the dance the other night and nobody would have interfered. Everybody would have thought they were dancing.

Beg Pardon

Pardon me, please, for taking credit for getting that Alder street eyesore fixed up. It was just the party next door putting in a foundation to keep their house from falling into the abyss.

But I still think it ought to be cleaned up, and the citizens have only two more weeks to get started on their lawns or be exposed to the all-seeing eye of publicity.

And speaking of publicity, maybe Grover King, of Wilson, will snap out of it and quit trying to make people believe he has lumbago. It's a good excuse, Grover, when you can get by with it, but your friends are onto you.

However, all the money must not be in socks. Some of it is in milk cans. We just recently heard of a fellow who bought an eighty acre farm for twelve thousand dollars. (Heavens no, not in Garrett county). When he and his wife went to town to settle for it he took in a milk can and he dug down in it and brought out eleven thousand dollars and then said to his wife: "Why, we are one thousand short," and she said: "Why John, you must have brought the wrong can."

At the Last Court Session

Neil Fraley had asked the witness a question.

"I think——," he began.

"We don't care what you think; we want to know what you know," remarked Neil the Cusser.

"Well, I may as well get off the stand, then," said the witness. "I can't talk without thinking. I'm no lawyer."

The Poor Unfortunates

One of life's poor unfortunates, the kind who have been out of work for ages, are hungry and just out of gas, met an Oakland traveling salesman on the Morgantown road a few days ago.

He told his story with tears in his eyes and requested just enough gas to get into the next town. "I've got the gas," said the salesman, "but no way to get it out of the tank, or nothing to put it in."

"That's all right," said the poor downtrodden unfortunate, "I've got a can and a siphon down the road a piece." And it was not until he had filled a two-gallon can that the salesman began kicking himself in the pants.

What a racket, what a racket. But then the poor unfortunate might become a gasoline distributor some day if he can hook enough customers.

The Voice of the People

Such a cut and dried meeting was never before held than that which took place last Saturday in Oakland.

Proposals that the Grand Goslin wanted brought up at the meeting were passed out to innocent citizens to be read when occasion demanded, and some were unable to make them out. They slashed right and left, even passing a resolution to cut off $100 from the appropriation to each incorporated town, which if carried out would have cut two-thirds from one town and one-sixteenth from another.

A square deal, sez I.

A "representative" group of about 70 out of a population of almost 20,000, dwindled down to about fifty when a deep and dark conference was concluded and the question of beer was brought up, asking that the county commissioners spend about $4,000 for a special election to vote on the question.

At a meeting for tax reduction, this sounded a great keynote. After a heated argument and the exit of several disgusted ones, the motion was passed 27 to 18. The voice of the people must be heard, ladies and gentlemen!

Whoever thinks that prosperity can come riding back on the tidal wave of beer, had better think again. In 1914 beer consumption in the United States would have filled a ditch 6 feet wide, 3 feet deep and reaching from New York to Seattle. And who paid the bill?

The family—in lessened comforts, lessened food, lessened clothing, lessened happiness, lessened respect, lessened money for education.

The drinker—in loss of job, loss of love, loss of standing.

Society—in hospitals and charities for the drinker and his family, in accidents and deaths.

The initial revenue, the initial boom—if any—is no yardstick by which to measure the effects on the country. For every nickel spent on beer there is less to be spent on other industries. Sez me.

We realize that a lot of people will say we are crazy. We hope they do, for when they tell us we are crazy it is evident that blank minds have started to function, and when the public mind begins to function and realizes that prosperity depends upon individual effort and not upon beer, or the Government, we will begin to see our way out of the woods.

But think, farmers and others. Don't let five or a dozen men do it for you.

Yes, I don't like beer. And just what are your sediments?

Plant a Garden for a Cheap Balanced Diet

"Grow your own food"—or some of it. "Save by living at Home." A good garden is always a very important part of a live-at-home program.

A good garden is one which will supply:

1. A variety of fresh vegetables from early spring until killing frost in the fall.

2. A surplus for canning or drying, and

3. Certain vegetables for storage when harvested.

The carrying out of the above requirements will constitute a year-round garden.

Among the most practical or emergency vegetables which should be raised are beans, peas, cabbage, beets, carrots, corn, potatoes, lettuce, onions, radishes, sweet potatoes, spinach, and tomatoes. Plan the garden before beginning to plant. By planning is meant, know the kind of vegetables to be planted, where in the garden or field the different vegetables are to be planted, and how much of each kind is to be planted.

Steamed Carrot Pudding

One c. ground, raw carrots, 1 c. ground tart apples, 1 c. raisins, ½ c. brown sugar, 1 c. ground suet, ½ c. molasses, ½ t. soda, 1 t. baking powder, 1 c. flour, ½ c. bread crumbs, ½ t. each nutmeg, cloves, and cinnamon.

Steam two and one-half hours. Serve with hard or soft sauce.

Greens Casserole

Three T. butter, 4 T. flour, 2 c. milk, 1 T. grated onion, 1 t. salt, pepper, 2 c. cooked, chopped greens, 1 c. cooked, chopped ham or other cold meat.

Make white sauce from butter and milk. Fill the buttered mould with alternate layers of greens, meat and white sauce. Finish with top layer of greens. Sprinkle with grated cheese and brown for 25 minutes in oven.

Corn Chowder

One pint milk, ½ t. salt, pepper, 2 T. chopped parsley or celery leaves, 1 quart diced raw potatoes, 1 pint boiling water, 4 T. diced salt pork, 1 onion, chopped, 2 C. canned corn.

Boil the diced potatoes in the pint of boiling water for 10 minutes. Fry the salt pork and onion for about 5 minutes, and add these and the corn to the potatoes. Cook until the potatoes are done. Add the milk, salt and pepper, bring the mixture to the boiling point, and add the parsley or celery leaves. Serve very hot in soup dishes and place two or three crackers in the dish before pouring in the chowder.

Failure to Use Hand Signals Causes Incrase in Accidents

Because of an increasing number of accidents caused by disregard of hand signals which were reported last week to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in Maryland, the system of signals is being pointed out to motorists by the Motor Vehicle Department.

The straight extended left arm with the finger pointing to the left means that the operator is going to make a left-hand turn, the driver meanwhile easing himself over to as near the middle of the street as possible.

The signal for the right-hand turn is made by extending the arm well out so that it can be seen from the rear and making a slowly circling movement with the forearm.

The extended left arm, at a slight downward angle, with the palm facing the rear, indicates that the operator is going to stop.

REAL HELP FOR FARMER

In the debate in the Senate over the proposed enactment of the administration farm bill, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, is quoted by the press dispatches as stating that the law of supply and demand has failed so far as farm prices are concerned. Senator Robinson evidently hopes to repeal or modify this law through the kind offices of the proposed new farm bill. The task will be a little difficult even for a body so august and important as the United States Congress.

Since the law of supply and demand is a natural economic law, it might be well to see whether we have not failed in taking advantage of it before we charge the law itself with having failed to function. It would seem to the average layman that the law has been functioning only too well. We have had more farm commodities than the people, in their depleted financial condition, have been able to consume. The law of supply and demand has been working only too well.

Any legislation which is to help the farmer must take into consideration the idea of decreasing the supply and increasing the demand for agricultural commodities. The supply can only be decreased by curtailment of production by agriculture itself or thru the vagaries of the weather. Up to this time, curtailment by agreement has always seemed to fail and there is no assurance that it will succeed in the future. Human nature being what it is, the average individual always depends on the other fellow to curtail, and prefers to raise a full crop for himself. But perhaps nature is coming to the rescue this year if we can believe some of the advance crop predictions.

The most satisfactory way to help the farmer, of course, would be to increase the demand for his product. Here is where Senator Robinson and his friends can be of real help to the farmer. The demand can be increased not by an unnatural tax on the consumer which will arouse his indignation and induce him to curtail as much as possible, but by giving the consumer more money to spend for what the farmer raises.

In order to give the consumer more money to spend there must be more and steadier jobs. One of the first things to do to bring this about is to cut off the flood of foreign goods pouring into our markets from Japan and some of the countries of Europe, who are able to surmount our tariff walls because they have gone off the gold standard and depreciated their currency. These nations would not eat our wheat, our pork and beef products, our butter and cheese if they were supplying all of our finished goods requirements.

Why not then, cut off these imports, and turn the job of making these goods over to American workmen who will buy the meat products, the butter, eggs, cotton, wheat and corn of the American farmer if they get the money to do it?

AS TO BARRING CHEAP ALIEN LABOR

An unwarranted attack was made before the immigration committee of the House of Representatives on the executive order under which 500,000 would-be immigrants have been kept out of the United States in the last three years. Some congressmen are annoyed because action was taken by President Hoover under existing law without giving them a chance to chew it over for a couple of years. But every man who has a job is thankful to President Hoover for barring cheap-alien labor in this period of widespread unemployment.

Representative Dickstein is attempting to push through a resolution revoking the executive order under which aliens likely to become puhlic charges are excluded.

It is argued that President Hoover exceeded his authority in issuing such an order, but the law clearly gives him power to deny visas to immigrants who might not be able to support themselves here. Discretion is left with the President as to when this ban should be invoked.

If those who favor an influx of immigration wish to have the order set aside, why don't they go directly to President Roosevelt? It may be assumed that Mr. Roosevelt is as much in favor of reserving jobs for American citizens as his predecessor was. Apparently that is the reason why an emotional appeal is being made to Congress.

The basis on which revocation of the Hoover order is asked is that it has subjected some prospective immigrants to hardships. Nothing is said about the hardships that would be incurred by American citizens if laborers accustomed to lower standards were allowed to migrate to this country during these hard times and compete for jobs with the army of 12,000,000 unemployed men and women.

Revocation of the order which keeps out alien jobseekers would be an insult to American labor, asserts the Washington Post. The first obligation of the Government is to the American people who support and defend it. If the voice of the whole people could suddenly become articulate on this issue, Represntative Dickstein would hide his resolution in a pigeon hole and beg the publie to ferget it.

SAVING AND SPENDING

Now that we have emergency bank legislation and a law which gives the President authority to reduce expenses by the reduction of the salaries of federal employes and those benefitting from the various appropriations for the veterans of past wars, and it would seem that we were on the way toward a balancing of the budget, a great many people are beginning to wonder just how big a saving is to be made at Washington after all. No sooner had the public ceased its first vociferous applause over the hundreds of millions saved in the operation of the government, than it began to learn that Congress was considering various programs which call for the expenditure of billions more. No doubt a great many of the proposed expenditures are worthy, and come from the worthiest of motives, but it would seem the part of sound government to slow up a little and think and study, before there is so great an expenditure of the government's money.

In addition to the hundreds of millions to be expended in the reforestation project, there is an administration proposal for the floating of two billions in bonds for refinancing of farm mortgages. This, it is intimated, may he followed by another program with a huge bond issue for the refinancing of mortgages on homes. There is a government works bill in preparation which, it is said, may call for an ultimate expenditure of two or three billions more. This is to say nothing of the expenditures embraced in the farm bill which provides for the leasing by the government of unproductive farms and a eost of eight hundred millions. The latter cost, it is only fair to say, the administration expects to raise through a tax on the purchases of food and clothing, but if the consumers rebel, and as much revenue as is needed fails to come in, who is going to pay the bill, except Uncle Sam?

Then there is to be an expenditure of a half billion of federal money In the furnishing of funds to the various states, for relief work. The motive is laudable, of course, but where is the federal government to get the money after all, except by taxing the people of the various states?

With such pretentious program for the expenditure of billions, most of which is to come from bond issues, thus increasing the public debt, the few hundreds of millions cut from the running expenses of the government in an effort to balance the budget begin to look more or less like pin money. There is no disposition here to question the motives of the administration. Its intentions are good. But what about the consequences? Suppose it doesn't work out. Somebody will have to foot the bill.

USING BOOTSTRAPS AGAIN

A great many students of economics are beginning to wonder whether or not the present proposed agricultural relief bill, being considered by Congress, is not another of the political attempts to permit the farmer to try to lift himself over the fence by his own bootstraps.

Certainly Congress can well afford to go slowly and carefully in putting the proposed legislation into effect, especially in view of the fact that even the President of the United States characterizes it as a pure experiment.

"Business Conditions Weekly," an analysis and forecast by general business conditions, issued by the Alexander Hamilton Institute of New York City, a conservative and non-partisan service, describes the Farm Bill as an "undertaking beset with so many obstacles that it is evident that the plan cannot be ahministered successfully," and as legislation that would wreck the economic structure of the nation. The bureau holds that the supposed farm relief measure provides for a sharp increase in the prices which the consumer must pay for farm products, by raising these prices to a level that will bear relationship to a level of manufactured goods prices prevailing from 1909 to 1914. This is a doubling of present farm product prices to the consumer, and while it is presumed by its sponsors that the measure will help farmers and at the same time stimulate general business by increasing the farmers' purchasing power, the publication holds this is doubtful, because while increasing the farmers' purchasing power is a prerequisite of business revival, it cannot be restored by the means proposed. The consumers will not be able to buy the required amount of higher priced foods necessary because of their own reduced income. This will necessitate the raising of wages and in turn the raising of prices on manufactured goods, the final result being the same discrepancy as first existed. "The plan will consequently not only fail to increase the farmers' purchasing power, but it will start a vicious circle of price inflation which eventually will collapse and leave the farmers as well as the nation in a worse predicament than the present one," says the Bulletin. "Consequently, under such a measure the farmers would have less to sell, their purchases will steadily decline, factory output will decrease and unemployment will rise higher and higher. In other words, the farm relief measure is a plan to put the nation on the road to complete starvation, a road to riots and revolution," continued the service.

One sound way to help the farmer would be stabilizing conditions in the United States, restoring confidence by balancing the budgets, national, state and local and by a local reduction of taxes which would take the great burden from the back of agriculture. The demand for the farmers' produce can best be stimulated by putting the men in the factories back to work. Restored business confidence will help do this. Another aid would be the shutting out from the American market of cheaply made foreign goods which are able to surmount our tariff wall because of starvation wages and cheapened money abroad. Nothing would help more to restore normal business in America than the damming of the flood of cheap goods from countries which have gone off the gold standard.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Already faint outlines are becoming visible of the location of the first stand which is to be made by the Republican minority in Congress against the militant and up to this time successful Democratic majority. Since the new administration came into being, most of its efforts from the legislative standpoint have been to meet emergeneies. In order to meet these emergencies banking and economy legislation had to be enacted at once. It was necessary to restore confidence and to make a desperate effort to balance the budget. Since the Republican minority had already announced a policy of assisting the administration in all constructive measures looking to the betterment of the nation, there was no resistance, but efficient cooperation, to the emergency measures.

A great many people back in the country, therefore, who have been expecting congressional fireworks, are beginning to wonder whether the Republicans have given up for good. There is no authority for taking any such view. The Republicans have only been waiting until they could find sound and strategic territory on which to make a stand. The outlines of that territory will become plainly visible when Congress gets to the point of tinkering with the tariff, and the day is probably not far away.

During the campaign we heard a great deal about the iniquitous Smoot-Hawley tariff. We were led to believe that one of the first things Congress would do would be to level to the ground this "robber tariff." As yet nothing along this line has been done and it is now becoming evident that probably the first thing accomplished will be in the way of raising, rather than lowering, tariffs. The reason for this is not hard to find, if one will study the farm bill which the administration desires to enact into law. In order to make the provisions of this law effective, if it is to be enacted, it is becoming evident that there will have to be drastic changes in our agricultural tariff rates—but the changes must necessarily be in the direction of higher tariff rates, rather than lower ones. Additional protection will have to be granted all of the farm commodities which, it is hoped, will be helped under the new farm bill. If such higher schedules are not enacted, the farmers who will benefit from the new law—if any of them benefit—will be the agriculturists in foreign countries who will immediately take advantage of the higher prices which it is hoped to offer to the farmers of the United States. This will doubtless be a blow to the ardent free traders who told us in the last campaign that the protective tariff does not and cannot benefit the American farmer, but it is a blow he will have to take on the chin and like it.

But there is another angle. Mr. Roosevelt and his assistant orators told us in the campaign that prosperity would be restored through foreign trade and that this would be brought about by tariff agreements between the United States and foreign countries. One of the alluring examples cited was Canada and it was predicted that foreign trade between the United States and the Dominion would be increased by a tariff agreement. But Canada, it is to be remembered, has nothing to ship us except grain, butter, cheese, and other agricultural or dairy products. If we lower the barriers, it will be the Canadian farmers and not the American farmers who will benefit by the new farm bill. So it is going to be a little difficult to arrange a tariff agreement between Uncle Sam and Canada. The same will go for all other agricultural nations which are the ones most anxious to arrange reciprocal tariffs with us.

It is when these questions come to the forefront, that the Republican minority, it may be predicted, will come to life. The Republican tariff policy is clear and consistent, and the minority in Congress will have a clear-cut substitute program to offer. For what the majority offers is bound to he rather nebulous because of the multitude of conflicting opinions which the majority statesmen will have on the issue. The Republicans will then have the advantage of fighting with a united front on ground made familiar to them by hundreds of conflicts in the past.

DOLLARS COME HOME

Trace the course of a dollar spent for property improvement, repairs, or replacement.

Part of it goes to local merchants, who provide the needed materials. Another part goes to the workman on the job.

The workman spends his part for the necessities of life. The corner grocery, the drug store, the department store get it—and through them it goes to their employes, to the farmer and to the manufacturer. Then the circle begins again—the money enters new pockets, passes through other industries, travels to other sections of the country.

The part of the dollar going to the store providing the supplies follows much the same course. It pays the store's workers. It pays bills. It goes to factories to purchase new stock. From the factory it goes to other workmen, to related industries supplying raw materials, to investors.

And, at last, the dollar comes back, through one channel or another, to the original spender.

In a short length of time that dollar has had a thousand uses. It has done the work of a thousand dollars.

That's the beauty of money which is actually circulating—it is used an infinite number of times, and it does as much good each time.

T. B. Association to Make Public Appeal for Funds

Forced by the alternative of making a public appeal for funds or closing up its activities entirely is the situation facing the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, according to information given out today by Henry F. Baker, treasurer of the association in Baltimore.

Mr. Baker stated that for this reason the executive committee of the Association has decided to make an appeal to the public for funds. Commenting upon the existent situation, Mr. Baker said, "The Association has $16,600 tied up in banks which it cannot touch. In addition to this we have lost approximately $4,000 in subscriptions, due to the banking situation, making a total deficit of $20,600, and we must either raise this amount or discontinue the major part of our activities. This would be a calamity at this time because it would mean the discontinuance of our health education work, our child health work, the state-wide clinic service—where hundreds of cases of incipient tuberculosis are discovered each year—and it would also mean that the work at the Miracle House for undernourished and underweight children would be seriously curtailed and possibly discontinued altogether."

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

An extract from a report of the Bureau of Industrial Statistics gave the following information concerning Garrett county: Area, 680 square miles; population, 14,213, of whom 183 were Negroes, an increase of 2038 since 1880; 21 persons to each square mile; assessed value of property, $4,330,745; county rate of taxation, $1.07; size of farms 50 to 250 acres; price of farming lands, $10 to $30.

Summer visitors were coming to Oakland unusually early, and the demand for furnished cottages was greater than ever.

Dr. G. M. P. King, owner of Monte Vista, was making preparations for an early opening of his home.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

A new picture show was opened with crowded houses at both showings. It was being operated by members of the Knights of Pythias Lodge. D. E. Bolden was manager with E. G. Naylor and Ernest Shirer assisting.

The county tax rate was fixed at $1.02 with the State rate 31 cents.

G. C. Martin and Co., jewelers, moved from the Empire Theatre building to the room formerly occupied by the postoffice in the First National Bank building.

There was a demand for cottages at Deer Park.

Henry Wiley, Bittinger, while engaged heading up barrels of maple sugar, suffered a serious injury to his eye when it was struck by a nail he had attempted to drive into the barrel head. He went to Baltimore for treatment.

Eighteen new school buildings, at a cost of $14,000, were asked by the School Board.

A delegation of residents from the town of Bloomington was before the County Commissioners seeking an appropriation with which to improve the sanitary conditions existing there.

Beyond The County

At Los Angeles a nineteen-year-old girl, a junior in the University of California, running short of money and being determined to finish her college course, slept for several weeks before being discovered, under a bridge in the open.

At Fairmont, W. Va., moving picture houses were open for the first Sunday shows last Sabbath.

In Boston and other New England sections, a storm following a three-foot snow which fell on the 15th, caused death and untold property damage.

In Washington a petition was filed in the Senate asking for the removal from that body of Senator Huey "Kingfish" Long, of Louisiana, charging personal dishonesty and corruptness.

At Ormond Beach, Florida, General Adelbert Ames, last surviving Union general of the Civil War, died at the age of 97 years.

In Cincinnati the publisher of the Ohio Examiner was recently indicted by a grand jury for printing in his paper certain statements regarding a bank recently closed by executive order.

At Washington, the Senate confirmed the appointment of Ruth Bryan Owen as minister to Denmark. A daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, Mrs. Owens is the first woman in the United States to hold such a position.

In New Jersey plans have already been discovered whereby racketeers hope to get control of the beer trade, thus continuing their huge profits in the bootleg game.

At Ardore, Ohio, a nineteen-year old boy was discovered in a freight car in a wheel chair. He has been a paralyetic from birth and was one of a number of hoboes.

At Ottawa, Ohio, a state detective, flying in a plane, discovered an abandoned car in a field and on landing found it was one which had been stolen and for which the Toledo police department had been searching.

At Reading, Pa., what promises to be a somewhat twisted strike, looms up in the pretzel industry of that city.

In Nebraska, a man confessing to wife beating, was sentenced by a judge to 60 days hard labor to consist of digging a hole 8 feet square one day and a like hole each succeeding day, filling the preceding holes dug with the dirt taken from the succeeding hole.

In Washington, a mass meeting sponsored by the American Legion, at which Commander Louis A. Johnson and other notables were present, was held to protest the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States Government.

THE WAY BACK TO PROSPERITY

The governments, and notoriously the federal government, have gone on the theory that their expenditures are untouchable. The costs of the Federal government, indeed, have continued to mount. It has been impossible to collect as much money each year as the government has spent, with the result that the unbalanced portion has been borrowed. This has had the effect of raising doubts about the stability of the nation's money and its treasury and has led to violent gold movements, injurious both in America and abroad. The demand of the business community for a balanced budget has been met not by the reduction of expenditures but by the increase in tax rates and the imposition of new taxes. In the end, therefore, our governments have created not more hope of profit, and therefore a basis of recovery, but the certainty of further reductions in profit and therefore increased stagnation.

This policy of idiocy must be ended before the depression will begin to yield. Business men hold that the cause of the depression is excessive taxation and the cure is a slashing of taxation with a balanced budget on the reduced revenue. This is a mature judgment, based upon years of battling against declining profits and the steady attrition of reserves and inventory vaules. The stubborn refusal of politicians to heed the advice of precisely the men who are in a position to know most about what is impeding progress is the most striking phenomenon of our times.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The authorship of the First Book of Kings is unknown. In the Hebrew manuscripts the two books of Kings were written as one. The division may have been made for the convenience of Greek readers, but there is no certainty as to just when or under what circumstances this occurred.

The First Book of Kings falls naturally into two divisions, part I rehearsing the history of the reign of Solomon, and Part II dealing with the Kingdoms of Judah and Israel after the disruption brought about by Solomon's son Rehoboam, whose folly estranged from him the ten tribes who dwelt in the North. These ten tribes revolted and formed under the rule of Jeroboam the Kingdom of Israel.

The opening events of this book tell us of the death of David and the accession of Solomon, his son, to the throne. This was the golden age of Israel.

It is hard to realize that the young king, so winsome and wise could ever fall into the weaknesses and excesses that so clouded the latter years of his reign.

Among the glories of the early reign of Solomon we should remember his choice of the gift considered by him at that time the most precious. When in a dream God appeared to Solomon and said: "Ask what I shall give thee," his prayer was for "an understanding judgment, that I may discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great people?"

This prayer for wisdom was granted and to it were added both riches and honor. There was a further promise that his days would be lengthened, conditioned upon Solomon's walking in Jehovah's ways, and keeping his statutes and commandments.

The practical application of the discrimination and fine sense of justice which characterized this monarch, is evidenced in his discovery of the real mother of a child, claimed by two women. Mother love, willing to surrender the child to save its life, revealed to Solomon the real mother. The test sounds simple enough, but how many judges would have thought of it?

Further evidenees of the glory and grandeur of Solomon are to be found in the growth of his dominions, the splendor of his court and palaces, and especially in the building of the temple. Tradition informs us that there were 3300 masters, or overseers of the work, and approximately 150,000 others employed in the great building enterprise alone. King Hiram of Tyre assisted Solomon in the building of the temple by furnishing manytall cedars of Lebanon which were conveyed by floats to Joppa, thence by land to Jerusalem. The famous architect of the temple, who has won immortality by his designs of this celebrated building, contributed inestimable service. Doubtless the temple as well as the other building enterprises of Solomon, together with his great wealth, drew from the Queen of Sheba, when she had seen all these things, the memorable exclamation, "The half was never told."

The later years of Solomon's reign were marred by his extravagant luxury, his notorious sensuality and his apostasy from God, resulting in the decline of his Kingdom and its ultimate division.

The subsequent idolatry and wickedness of the Israelitish Kings brought into the foreground of the stage Elijah, the Tishbite, whose conflict with the prophets of Baal as related in the 18th chapter of the First Book of Kings, is one of the great dramas of sacred literaturc.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The author of the Second Book of Kings is unknown. This book tells the story of the divided Kingdom. The northern Kingdom lasted about 230 years, the southern Kingdom lasted about 350 years. It is food for thought that America is only 157 years old. The question may well be asked: "How long will America last?" Of course no categorical answer can be given to such a question. However, let us note some of the reasons for the dissolution of these two Kingdoms, whose origin began under such favorable auspices.

The Northern Kingdom had 19 kings of 9 separate dynasties, every one of whom followed the calf worship, some added Baal worship. Not one of them ever made any effort at reformation, or seriously tried to bring this people back to Jehovah. The Southern Kingdom had all told 20 kings, all but one of them kin of David. Most of them worshipped Idols, but a few followed Jehovah. At times there were reformations. Is it too much to infer that these faithful kings though few in number, and the honost reform measures adopted by them lengthened the kingdom of Judah one hundred and twenty years beyond the duration of its northern neighbor, utterly idolatrous and forgetful of God?

There is food for thought in these facts, whatever their real significance may be.

The spiritual message of this book to the modern world is found in the powerful influence exxercised by rulers upon a nation. Rulers largely set the fashion which their subjects follow. To a lesser degree the same is true of the citizens of a republic who consciously or unconsciously adopt the slogans and the politics of their leaders and particularly does this practice follow when government caters to popular weakness or sins.

The story of the great old prophet Elijah comes to its close in this book, while the exploits of his successor, Elisha, fill a large part of the exciting drama of prophetic power and achievement recorded in Second Kings.

Whether dividing with the mantle of Elijah the waters of Jordan, or procuring water for a thirsty and almost defeated army, or in the dramatic healing of Naaman, there is an electric magnetism about this dynamic prophet which thrills the reader of his exploits.

What was the secret of Elisha's power? Surely it can be found in the burning desire expressed at the time of Elijah's separation from him, that a double portion of the elder prophet's spirit might rest upon him, and inspire all his future work, and service for Jehovah.

This prophetic power was retained even upon his death, when he announced to King Joash, through the medium of an arrow shot from his window, the deliverance from Syria. But alas! the small faith of the King led him to smite but thrice upon the ground with the allow, which became the symbol of only a partial victory.

Notes on Maryland's Early Governors—I

LEONARD CALVERT'S SUCCESSOR ENCOUNTERED TROUBLE AT TH OUTSET

by

KATHERINE SCARBOROUGH

(In the Baltimore Sunday Sun, April 2, 1933.)

With the three hundredth anniversary of the establishment on the banks of the Potomac of Lord Baltimore's palatinate now but a year in the distance, Marylanders are becoming increasingly aware that, interwoven with the sober dates and facts of history, a great romance took place on their soil during the century and a quarter which intervened between the foundation of the colony and the Revolution.

To hold a mirror up to those distant days is to see reflected on its shining surface a strange, fantastic cavalcade. Nobles and villains, pirates and Puritans, artisans and adventurers, swashbucklers and sophisticates emerge from the mists, glimmer for a moment and vanish again into the past. All of them were players in the drama.

During the course of the play strong men appear and are torn to shreds by those whom they endeavor to serve. Weaklings rise up and are destroyed by fate of its instruments, self-appointed. Serving girls in linsey woolsey captivate gentlemen in lace ruffles and are united with them in holy wedlock. Cavalier joins issue with Roundhead and goes down to defeat in a world of change.

Before the first decade of Lord Baltimore's experiment had been rounded out there was dissatisfaction and discontent in Maryland. Savage hostility menaced the white settlements and there were murmurings and incipient sedition among the colonists. Claiborne, ousted from his holdings on Kent Island, developed into a perpetual firebrand and religious agitations clutched the little city of St. Mary's by its collective throat. Governor Leonard Calvert, a wise and able administrator, went first to England to confer with his brother, the proprietary, and then to Virginia, finding it inadvisable to set foot on Maryland soil when he returned to America. Ultimately he regained the upper hand, but he did not live long to enjoy the fruits of his success. His death took place at St. Mary's on the ninth of June, 1647.

During his last illness Governor Calvert was attended devotedly by two of his kinswomen, Mary and Margaret Brent, the latter of whom he made executrix of his estate. (It was their brother Giles Brent whom Governor Calvert had once named acting Governor for a short period.) On Governor Calvert's deathbed he used his prerogative to name his successor, Thomas Green, also referred to as "Captain." Shortly afterward Mary and Margaret Brent made affidavit of Governor Calvert's selection, and Green, accordingly, was acknowledged the titular head of the colony.

It would have been better, dispassionate historians seem to think, if the Governor had named Green as his executor and Margaret Brent as executive of Maryland, but that is as it may have been. Governor Green's first official act was an effort to prevent the return to the palantinate of Capt. Edward Hill or any of his adherents who had taken refuge across the Potomac after the quelling of Claiborne and Ingle's rebellion of 1646. As the session of the Provincial Court was approaching he issued a proclamation prohibiting any of the refugees from claiming the assistance or judgment of the court in any case in their favor until they had taken the oath of fealty which he prescribed, to the government.

This disposed of the raiders, but new difficulties cropped up. The troops whom Governor Calvert had enlisted in Virginia to assist him in regaining his government from Claiborne and his cohorts never had been paid or discharged and their maintenance was a serious drain on the resources of the colony. They had been denied the privilege of plundering the rebels and so low were the public funds after the recent disorder that it was next to impossible to raise their arrears of pay.

Another proclamation was in order. Governor Green by this means directed the seizure of all corn which the people might have, over and above a sufficiency for their own use, to be paid for out of his Lordship's estate at the rate of 120 pounds of tobacco for each barrel, or to be replaced with corn provided enough should be imported into the colony. Margaret Brent already had exhausted all the resources of Governor Calvert's estate to meet the emergency.

Governor Green had the good fortune to have the support of the General Assembly in his views. The Legislature, which met almost immediately after his proclamation had been posted on the old mulberry tree at St. Mary's, immediately passed the laws necessary to implement the document. Each family was permitted to retain two barrels of corn for each of its members, infants excepted, and the compensation for that impounded by the government was raised from 120 pounds of tobacco a barrel suggested by the Governor to 150 pounds.

The Governor also had recommended that the exportation of corn or horses be prohibited during the emergency and this measure was also approved of and continued by the Assembly. At the close of the session, in order to heal completely all existing differences between the adherents of the proprietary and those who had sided with Claiborne and Ingle during the recent unpleasantness, a general pardon was proclaimed for those who would embrace its tolerant provisions. Captain Ingle was alone excepted.

Many wounds were stanched by this measure, but religious agitations and the Indians did not cease to trouble. Governor Green, in order to protect outlying settlements, adjourned the county court at St. Mary's for fear that the absence from their homes of jurymen, parties to the cases and witnesses might weaken the exposed portions of the colony beyond the margin of safety and subject the outlying settlements to savage massacres.

Apparently Governor Green belonged to the school which holds that the best defense is a show of aggression, for he did not stop with the adjournment of court and the return of its members to their several roof trees. The savages needed a good lesson and the time had come, he seems to have felt, to give it to them. On July 4, 1647, he issued a commission to one Capt. John Price "to take 30 or 40 such able men as he shall think fit and make a choice of for that purpose, with sufficient arms, provisions and ammunition, and then to embark in such vessel or vessels as he . . . shall think fit and convenient, and with the said men to go over unto the towns and plantations of Nanticoke and Wicomiek aforesaid, lying to the eastward of this province, and then and there" instill into the red man or Indian such wholesome fear of his paleface neighbors as should deter him forever from going on the warpath in Maryland.

Of the results of this punitive expedition, historians depose nothing. In fact, there seems to be no record that it ever took place and it is more than probable that the menace of the savage was eclipsed in the public mind by the religious struggle between Catholics and Puritans for temporal supremacy. Conditions in Maryland vividly reflected the civil turmoil in England and Governor Green had held office but a few months when he summarily was removed by Lord Baltimore, who sought to make the best of a bad situation by the appointment of a Protestant Governor and thus salvage the sanctuary he had created at such tremendous cost of money and effort.

It was a case of noblesse oblige. Governor Green seems to have yielded the scepter to Lord Baltimore's own appointee, William Stone, without argument, but fate held in store for him a voice in the affairs of the colony. He was named by Lord Baltimore (who had great confidence in his brother Leonard's ability to judge human nature and who felt that Governor Calvert's selection of Green must be an earnest of his fitness to participate in the government) one of the six commissioners who constituted his new Governor's Privy Council. This body formed the upper house of the Legislature and as one of its members Green figured as a personal representative of Lord Baltimore in Maryland.

More than that, he had another fling at the helm of state, for with the growing power of the Puritans adding immeasurably to the complications of administration, Governor Stone found it expedient to take a trip to Virginia and named Green his deputy during his absence. Apparently taking advantage of the situation thus created, Governor Green indulged once more in his passion for proclamations and issued a manifesto declaring Charles II the rightful King of England, with rejoicings and a general pardon. Governor Stone promptly returned and relieved Green of his office as deputy. Toward the end of the year, as one of its Roman Catholic members, Green took part in the Assembly that passed the famous religious toleration act.

With the disbandment of this Assembly Governor Green disappears into the gloom. Whether his death occurred soon after this or whether he lived on for years to enjoy what seems to have been a comfortable estate, historians neglect to say. Recognized biographies declare that the date of his death is unknown.

In his relationships with his fellow-colonists and with his servants Governor Green seems to have been a man of great liberality, both in spirit and in practice. His friendship with Governor Calvert, whom he had accompanied to Maryland in 1634, and with Mary and Margaret Brent indicates that he enjoyed the confidence of the leading members of the colony, and, though a staunch Catholic and royalist, his official acts acquit him of the slightest animus or bias against his political foes.

The uncertainties of the spelling of proper names make somewhat obscure the identities of certain historic characters in the early records of Maryland, but from what is known of the second proprietary Governor it seems altogether likely that he is the same Thomas Greene who is mentioned in an ancient indeature as the master of Hannah Matthews, a servant.

According to customary procedures in such cases any girl who was sold into service was bound for seven years if she were twelve when the indenture was made. If her age were greater than this, but four years of service were required. Upon her release a "mayd" received "1 new petycoat and wastcoat, one new smock, 1 new pair of shoes, 1 new pair of stockings and the cloathes" formerly belonging to her.

In the case of Hannah Matthews, however, the letters of indenture provided that upon receiving her freedom she was to be requited with "fifty akers of land and one year's provisions according to the custom of the country. She may, however, be acquitted of all obligacion if she pay or cause to be paid to Thomas Greene 1 thousand-weight of good, merchantable leaf tobacco and caske and three barrels of goode corne, but she must not dispose of herself in marryage without the consent of Thomas Greene."

* * * *

Governor Greene's home at St. Mary's was next to that of Margaret Brent, the land on which it stood having been patented in 1639 and called first Greene's Rest, and later Saint Ann. The house was a two-story frame building with brick gables, a type of architecture which was much in vogue during the seventeenth century in St. Mary's. It was occupied as late as 1820 by members of the Brome family which is still prominent in Southern Maryland, but the stout brick chimneys remained standing much longer than that, gaunt specters which formed the only monument ever erected to the second Governor of Maryland.

Early Seeded Lawns Have Best Chance

Lawn seed planted at this time in the spring will have three times as good chance to establish itself as that planted later on and it will be hardier and more luxuriant, it is stated by F. S. Holmes, in charge of the seed inspection work at the University of Maryland Experiment Station. Practically all grass seed, Mr. Holmes points out, will grow better in the cool days of early spring, when moisture conditions are likely to be more favorable, and it will have a better chance to get ahead of the weeds that are always present in all soils. The young grass will stand a few later frosts better than it will endure the hot, dry days of May and June.

Of equal importance to early sowing is care that seed is purchased from a reliable seed dealer, one who has a reputation to maintain.

The Spray Method For Treatment of Seed Oats

Dump the seed on a clean barn floor or canvas, or in a tight wagon box. Mix one pint of formaldehyde (37 per cent by weight) with one pint of water and pour into a quart sprayer. This quart of solution will treat 50 bushels. If fewer bushels are to be treated use a correspondingly smaller quantity of the solution.

Shovel the oats from one pile to another, spraying each shovelful. One stroke of the piston produces about the right amount of mist for a dirt-shovelful of seed. A scoop-shovelful requires about four strokes.

After the oats are sprayed, shovel them into a pile and cover with blankets, canvas or sacks that have been thoroughly sprayed with the solution to kill smut spores on them.

The pile should be covered at least five hours and may be left covered overnight. The oats may then be bagged and drilled. If sowing is delayed, or if it is planned to store the oats after treatment, the pile should be spread out and aired for a day. Treatment may be given at any time previous to sowing.

MT. LAKE PARK

It is really a pleasure to write a local column when anything happens of interest, but when the week ends as devoid of news as Bill Nye's head was of hair, then the attempt gives one the heebie geebies.

The most encouraging thing, however, is the dumping of road material for the completion of the Mt. Lake-Deer Park road, which indicates the finish of the first unit in the early spring. This sounds good, but the roaring of the motors and open cutouts all night long is not conducive of sound sleep. But that is not a matter of which to complain if it is necessary and will furnish some work for the unemployed.

There is a smile on the faces of the knowing ones when they tell of the wise boys who thought they were having slipped to them by their favorite bootlegger what was supposed to be a bottle of the new 3.2 beer, but which turned out to be near-beer. The power of suggestion is a wonderful thing. They thought it a wonderful improvement over the old stuff.

Here is a mark for some of you old fishermen to shoot at. One day last week Frank Junkins, 11 years old, caught a trout that measured sixteen and a half inches and weighed right at a pound and a half. To date Frank is the champion and should be made an honorary member of the Izaak Walton club.

Under a town ordinance it is unlawful to permit chickens or other domestic fowl to run at large after the first day of May until the first day of October. Notice to that effect has been posted.

It may seem somewhat early to discuss the annual town election, but we believe some thought should be given to the men who are to serve for the ensuing term. As we remember it, there are two vacancies to occur this year in council, and a mayor to be elected. We are not advised whether the present incumbents will be aspirants to succeed themselves or not. If they are to be candidates all well and good. But even if so, it would seem to be the part of wisdom for other good citizens to announce in order that interest may be revived and sustained in the town's affairs. As competition is the life of trade in business, so a snappy contested town election makes for a better community. Lethargy, in individual or community, never stimulated success, or progress. When called upon, it is a patriotic duty for a citizen to serve his town, even at some personal sacrifice. And under our charter it is simply a labor of love as no emoluments are attached to the office of councilman or of mayor.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company, in cooperation with the extension service and vocational department, are continuing the potato project they began several years ago. To make this club possible the railroad company has given Accident boys 20 bushels of certified seed potatoes and has contributed $100 toward the purchase of a power sprayer. Through the Maryland Extension service, the club has been able to secure a substantial discount on a power sprayer.

At a meeting of the club it was decided to buy a four row, Iron age power sprayer. This sprayer is equipped with four horse power Nero engine, has a tank capacity of 125 gallons and a pump capacity of 11½ gallons per minute, at a pressure of 350 pounds. It is also equipped with a Nixon type boom which is especially adapted to spraying potatoes.

H. W. Beggs, agriculture teacher, and J. H. Carter, county agent, are sponsoring the club.

The club is planning to buy its lime and blue stone co-operatively and to grade and sell the potatoes co-operatively in car-load lots either as certified seed or commercial stock. This is the first club in the community to attempt cooperative marketing of their potatoes in car load lots.

It is believed that by so doing, more distant and better markets can be reached which will result in better profits for the members. Members of this class are Raymond Schlossnagle, Clark Schlossnagle, Albert Richter, Frederick Kamp, Richard Culb, Paul Miller, Carl Everly, John Perry Speicher, Randall Sebold and Carol Gochringer.

All Boys Under 18 Years of Age May Enter—Ten Classes Are Open For Competition

Many boys are planning to enter the achievement contest and exhibition, being held next week under the auspices of the Boys' Work Committee of the Oakland Rotary club in celebration of Boys' Week.

Boys' Week will officially open on April 29, and on Sunday, April 30, all boys and girls of the county are urged to be in church with their parents, when special sermons will be preached in a number of churches.

The achievement contest and exhibit is open to all boys of the county under 18 years of age, and the exhibit must be the work of the boy who enters it.

All exhibits are to be brought in Tuesday afternoon, May 2, and up until 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning, May 3, to the vacant room in the Miller building on Second street, where they will be displayed and judged.

One winner will be chosen in each class and the winners will be guests of the Oakland Rotary club at it regular meeting on Friday, May 5, at which time a Father and Son evening will be observed.

The classes open for competition are stamps, boat models, airplane models, automobile models, maps, leather work, art and sheet metal work, bird houses, and carved woodwork. The final class will include any miscellaneous article made by a boy not included in the above list.

All exhibits will be judged on Wednesday. Cecil Smith, Ralph Weber, and Rev. C. A. Shilke are members of the Boys' Work Committee, and are arranging the details of the contest.

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES DISTRIBUTED BY F. F. A.

Carload Received Here From Elmira, Michigan, and all Sold

A 760 bushel carload of U. S. No. 1 certified Rural Russett seed potatoes arrived in Oakland Monday from Elmira, Michignn, consigned to Oakland Chapter F. F. A.

Distribution has been made to farms in Oakland community and Preston county, W. Va., those in this community securing the seed including William Wildesen, Herbert Wildesen, Wayne Fitzwater, Edward Fitzwater, Wilmer Fitzwater, Lawrence Wensel, Charles Bowman, Boyd Hardesty, Hobart McRobie, Willard Hauser, Robert Beekman, Wayne Hamilton James Sebold, Ivan Miller, Clayton Winters, Allan Pangh, William DeBerry, Ernest Friend, J. H. Carter, Charles Kelley. Oakland Rotary club is using 25 bushels of this seed in continuing the potato club among Oakland F. F. A.

The B. and O. and individuals have brought in Michigan Northern grown seed for six years, according to O. T. Graser, agriculture instructor, but this is the first carload amount. The clubs sponsored by the B. and O., Extension service and vocational education in agriculture in Accident, Oakland and Friendsville has provided a score of what is now a large part among the best seed in the county, Mr. Graser stated.

Boyd Hardesty's record yield of 440 bushels to the acre and others were from this seed. The number of growers of certified seed in Oakland has reduced in 1932 from 1931 indicating more attention should be given to clean seed and rogueing, he said.

Oakland F. F. A. delivered 460 bushels potatoes to Sabrnton recently, grown by eight Oakland boys, members of the spraying ring. The potatoes were not certified. An nmonnt in excess of this, of locally grown certified seed was marketed in Aurora, Reedsville, and Masontown by Oakland growers.

Burch drank the contents of a bottle containing chloroform liniment, stating he had come back to "end it all." He told officers the next day he would "finish the job some other way," but later decided that he was through attempting his own life. When he left last Friday he was still of the same opinion.

Several Hundred Signed While Thirty-Nine Are Rejected

Thirty-nine of the bills passed by the recent General Assembly were vetoed last Friday by Governor Ritchie, two relating to Garrett county. Several hundred were signed.

The two Garrett county bills vetoed were: the bill exempting Garrett county from the general law requiring the annual publication of a statement of county expenses; and the bill extending from one to three years the period for redemption of property sold for taxes in Garrett county.

Among the measures signed was the tax on chain stores, reduction of salary of teachers on a graduate scale starting at ten percent and increasing to fifteen percent, the budget bill authorizing State expenditures of approximately $65,000,000 during the next biennium.

Among the bills vetoed was the hill to classify the theft of less than $25 as a misdemeanor instead of a felony and permit such cases to be heard by police magistrates; the bill to remove the four-year limit on collection of taxes.

YARD-GARDEN CONTEST TO BE EXTENDED THIS YEAR

To Be Divided Into Two Groups For Greater Specialization

The annual yard and garden contest, being sponsored by the Oakland Civic club, is to be divided into two sections this year, according to Miss Margaret K. Burtis, home demonstration agent, who is working on a score sheet to be used throughout the summer.

One section will be vegetable gardens, while another will be home beautification, and contestants may enter one or both. There will also be a general improvement division for those who have recently moved to town or who are entering the contest for the first time.

Vegetable gardens will be judged on three phases, content, upkeep ,storage and food preservation. Under the home beautification will come four sections, porch and window boxes, wild flower gardens, annual beds and borders, and perennial borders.

The contest is being divided this year in order to make it more extensive to allow greater specialization, and in order to get a greater interest among all the people of the community, Miss Lottie Loar, president of the Civic club, stated.

Entries in the contest will be received by Miss Loar or other members of the Civic club.

Articles Uncovered by Housecleaning Sought by Community Exchange

Because a spring housecleaning is expected to uncover a number of articles that no longer are of any use to the owner, members of the Oakland Civic club in charge of the Community Exchange are asking that articles such as shoes, scraps of goods, old clothes, quilts, blankets, bed ticking, old carpet, be placed in bundles and given to the exchange.

Miss Lottie Loar, Civic club president, states that the exchange has a place for everything that is not wanted at home any longer, even discarded furniture. The exchange is in the old Anderson building on Alder street.

21 Degrees Is Lowest Temperature Reached in Past Week

The past week brought variety to the weather of Oakland and vicinity, with cool temperatures prevailing most of the time, at times going below the freezing mark.

The coldest morning registered at Weber's government station was on Sunday morning when the thermometer read 21. Last night although appearing to be the colder, was 29. There was n slight flurry of snow in the air at various times yesterday, and a cold wind has been predominant throughout most of the week. At Mt. Storm last week-end there was a severe snowstorm and snowplows were needed on the roads.

Plowing and planting have been retarded.

A young people's conference and institute for teachers of children will be held on Saturday, May 6, at Allen's Inn, midway between Sand Flat and Deer Park, Mrs. Ney Smith, Kitzmiller, secretary of the Garrett County Council of Religious Education, has announced.

There will be two sessions, one at 1:45 o'clock, and the concluding one at 7:30 p. m. Two state workers will be present, Miss Lillian E. McCormick and Miss Jennnette Lampson.

Firemen Extinguish Blaze

Sparks from an overheated flue caused slight damage Sunday afternoon about 6 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Swan, Water street, when they started burning the roof of the building.

The Oakland Fire department was called and extinguished the flames in a few minutes.

The Firemen were called to extinguish a grass fire on Liberty street, near the old electric light plant property, Monday evening. The blaze had gone beyond control and was nearing a gasoline tank.

Asked to Clean Streets and Yards and Make Oakland Beautiful

Members of the Oakland Civic club are urging everyone to help keep the streets, pavements, nnd gutters in Oakland clean. Providing each individual would keep the portion of ground in front of his home or place of business free from dirt, paper, etc., the matter of beautifying the streets would be an easy task, it was stated.

Stacking all lumber, moving all rubbish, ash piles, cleaning the alleyways, repairing and repainting fences and outbuildings should be done at once, it was said.

The annual proclamation of the Mayor and Town council will be made at the May meeting on May 3, and trucks will probably be provided again to haul rubbish, providing it is conveniently placed for the drivers. The annual clean-up week is usually held the second week in May..

RELIEF WORK GETS UNDER WAY; NEEDY CLASSIFIED

Registration of Those Asking Relief Is About Complete; County Welfare Board Organized

C. W. REAM IS CHAIRMAN

Classification and registration of those in the county needing relief is now about completed as the first step in the distribution of the loan of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Miss Charlotte Wilcox, of the Maryland Children's Aid, arrived in Oakland the latter part of last week and held several meetings with the Garrett county relief committee concerning the total number of families needing relief in the county, how they have been cared for in the past, and the opportunities which can be developed for stimulating work opportunities.

Registration headquarters have been set up in Oakland, Loch Lynn, Kempton, Grantsville, Swanton, Deer Park, Mt. Lake Park, Friendsville, Crelling, Kitzmiller, Sang Run, Avilton, and Bittinger.

Oakland headquarters are on Liberty street, in the building adjoining W. R. Browning's garage.

Work will begin probably within ten days, Miss Wilcox stated this morning, just as soon as the relief committee felt certain that all who needed relief had been registered.

George D. Browning estimated that approximately 600 miles of roads in the county would be worked over when the project gets under way that otherwise would not receive much attention. Following the registration notices of when there will be work, where, and the names of those called, will be posted at the various stations and postoffices of the communities.

An organization, to be known as the Garrett County Welfare Board, was named including Charles W. Ream, Crellin, chairman; George D. Browning, county commissioner, Oakland; Franklin E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools, Oakland; Walter W. Dawson, State's Attorney, and Delbert Davis, Oakland; Harry Edwards, Grantsville; and John A. Shore, Kitzmiller.

The members of the organization are serving without compensation and the Board is the official group with whom all dealings between the State and county will be carried on. The Board of State Aid and Charities has been designated as the official State body to supervise the expenditure of this money, $153,530, for the relief of distress in seven counties. It is estimated that Garrett county will receive $45,000 over a period of three months.

Miss Wilcox emphasized that the registration of those who were in need of relief, was in no sense an unemployment registration. The county is setting up work relief projects as preferable to direct relief where there is an able-bodied wage earner in the home. It must be kept in mind, however, Miss Wilcox stated, that relief is only one method of granting relief, that it should in no sense be looked upon as a means of providing employment for all unemployed persons in the county. Work relief should be granted only to those families who lack the bare necessities of life, and should be granted according to actual need. It will vary with the size of the family and according to any supplementary resources of the family.

Care is to be exercised that relief is adequate, regular and administered in such a way as to prevent pauperization.

How Money Will Be Spent

R. F. C. money will be spent for work relief, direct relief, and administration. The work relief is relief granted to able bodied wage earners who are to be put to work on "made work" projects, determined by the locality which could not otherwise be undertaken at this time or in the immediate future.

The money to be used in this county is borrowed by the State from the R. F. C. It bears interest at the rate of 3 percent per year. No payment on the principal or interest is to be made until 1935. Whatever funds are advanced to the State for relief of distress will be deducted from the regular Federal grants for road building. These deductions begin in 1935 and in any one year will not exceed one-fifth of the share which the State would be entitled to.

Prof. and Mrs. U. G. Palmer, of Verona, Pa., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. White from Monday until Wednesday.

JESUS SETS NEW STANDARDS OF LIVING

(Stewardship Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. Luke 6:31.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and the Children.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Choosing Time.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making the Right Choice.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—All for Christ.

I. Concerning Marriage (vv. 1-12). The question touching divorce which the Pharisees temptingly put to Christ brought forth teaching which exhibits marriage in its true light.

1. Marriage should not be degraded by divorce (vv. 1-5). Marriage was instituted by God and was intended to be indissoluble. Moses suffered divorce, limited and regulated it. Its existence indicates the coarseness and perverseness of man. Its real cause is sin. Perhaps the most outstanding evidence of the blighting effects of sin is seen in the increasing number of divorces.

2. Marriage God's primal law (vv. 6-8). The ideal law of life for the subjects of Christ's kingdom is marriage. This is proved by the fundamental fact of sex. "God made them male and female." (v. 6). The union of the male and female natures is physical, mental, and spiritual. In marriage the male and female natures are mutually complemented—"They twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh" (v. 8).

3. Marriage has God's sanction (v. 9). When God created Eve and brought her unto Adam, he declared that man should leave his father and mother and cleave unto his wife and that they shall be one flesh. God performed the first marriage ceremony.

4. Remarriage of the divorcer is adultery (vv. 10-12). The marriage relation can only be dissolved by death and sin. Marriage is for life. Divorce for other than marital infidelity does not give the right to remarriage.

II. Concerning Children (vv. 13-16). The union of the male and female natures according to God's primal law of marriage, lays the foundation for family life. The normal issue of such union is children. It was fitting that Jesus in connection with the divine law of marriage should set forth his estimate of children. Christian men and women will regard children as the property of the Lord and will esteem it a high and holy privilege to train them for him. Observe:

1. Children brought for the touch of Jesus (v. 13).

2. Parents rebuked by the disciples for bringing their children (v. 13).

3. Jesus' reply (vv. 14, 15).

a. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God" (v. 14).

b. "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein" (v. 15).

4. Jesus' action (v. 16). He took the children up in his arms and blessed them. Where Christ rules, childhood is sacred.

III. Concerning Riches (vv. 17-31).

1. The young ruler's question (v. 17). This young man was in earnest. He came running and kneeled to Jesus. He was a young man with a lovable personality. Jesus loved him. While moral, earnest, and courageous, he had a defective theology. He thought that eternal life could be obtained by good works.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 18-20). He put his finger on the weak spot in the young man's life. He knew that possessions gripped his heart, revealing the fact that he was a covetous man, a violator of the tenth commandment.

3. Lacking one thing, and yet lost (vv. 21, 22). When the Lord pointed out to him that the love of money was the defect of his life, he chose wealth rather than Christ, and perhaps parted company with the Lord forever.

4. The peril of riches (vv. 23-27). Jesus said, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!" Discerning the astonishment of the disciples he said further, "How hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!" The difficulty does not lie in the fact that a man possesses riches, but that riches possess him. Wealth is a mighty power and in itself is good. It will provide bread for the hungry, and send the Gospel to the ends of the earth. It is a short step from the possession of riches to trusting in them.

The Best Proof

The best evidence of the inspiration of the Word of God is found in the word itself. When studied, loved, obeyed, and trusted, it never disappoints, never misleads, never fails. It satisfies.—J. Hudson Taylor.

The Noblest Life

The noblest life is to live as his children that we may reveal to others the blessings of his presence, his guidance and his peace.—Thomas J. Garland.

Meat and Meat Substitutes

The cost of meat is governed by the tenderness. appearance. convenience in cooking, and the demand—not upon nutritive value. The tough pieces require longer cooking and more thought to making palatable than the tender cuts, but are much less expensive. In buying meat, the amount of fat and bone or edible portion should be considered.

The best meat always has a marbled appearance, that is, it is made up of fat and lean. The older the animal the darker red the lean will be and the younger the animal the lighter the lean. In young animals the fat is white and as the animal grows older the fat becomes more yellow.

Dried peas and beans may be used more extensively in a low cost diet in escalloped dishes, stews, and soups, especially if used with milk. Sometimes the tough outer skin causes indigestion, especially for children. The outer skin can be gotten rid of by putting the cooked beans through a strainer. A soup made of the mashed beans or peas and milk is very good for both children and adults.

Comparisons Helpful in Choosing and Preparing Inexpensive Meats

For Pot Roasts—two pounds of pot roast meat serves 7 or 8 persons (little waste since solid meat).

Beef—Round, rump, chuck, short ribs of plate. Roast from the chuck will be the most tender of these cuts, and in some markets a little more expensive than the others.

Veal and Lamb—Shoulder, breast (to be stuffed and rolled).

For Broiling—Two pounds serves 5 or 6 persons. Beef, round, rump, chuck, flank short ribs of plate. Veal or lamb, shoulder or breast. Pork spareribs, three pounds serves 6 persons

For stews—Two pounds of stewing meat serves 7 persons if plenty of vegetables are used. Beef, neck, chuck, plate, bottom, round, shank, brisket. Veal or lamb, neck, breast, shank.

For a boiled dinner—If lean, two pounds serves 5, if fat, 3 pounds. Corned beef—chuck, rump, brisket, flank, plate. That from chuck and rump is less fat as a rule than that from plate or brisket.

Child Health and the Child's Food

Each year of the depression has emphasized the importance of our new kind of May Day, now set apart by Presidential proclamation as Child Health Day. Many people believe that by constantly calling attention to child health, through this and other means, the Government has prevented some of the worst of the permanent harm the depression might otherwise have caused. Never before was the community so conscious of the needs of children. It knows that the undernonrished child is more likely to become the victim of tuberculosis and is more susceptible to other infections both in childhood and later years. It realizes that malnutrition which causes rickets may handicap a child for life. Lack of food or the wrong kind of food brings lasting ills to the community as to the child and the family.

The child's diet under any circumstances, according to the child health specialist, must include milk and should include codliver oil. At the very least, a pint of milk a day, preferably a pint and a half to a quart. If the child is less than 2 years old, he needs 2 teaspoonsful of codliver oil each day (he ought to have 4) to make sure he is protected against rickets. He needs other foods, too—orange juice or tomato juice and a vegetable or fruit every day (3 or 4 if possible are advisable) with plenty of bread and cereals. Next best to milk, eggs are one of the foods all children should have. Meat at least twice a week adds to the food value of a child's diet. Almost as important to the child as milk and codliver oil is sunshine—out-of-door sunshine. In summer, many children can get sunshine who cannot get the best food. Sunshine does not take the place of milk, or other ordinary food, but it does help the child to grow and develop good bones.

Except that the form is usually different for the very young child, the same kinds of food may well be provided for the whole family. This is one way to relieve the busy mother—the serving of the same meal for parents and children The little tot will not eat as much as the six-year old, and the six-year-old will not have the big appetite that usually characterizes the boy of 10 or 12. But each and all of them should have milk and vegetables and fruits, eggs as often as income allows, and cereals, meats, fish. Cottage cheese and the cream cheeses are good, and liver is one of the best of meats for children. Fortunately, too, the cheap kinds of liver are practically as nutritious as the expensive kinds, and when suitably cooked are quite as attractive.

The following recipes may be used for the whole family and are also good for the children.

Shoestring Carrots in Milk

Wash and scrape young carrots, cut in slices lengthwise, and then into narrow strips. If the carrots are large ones, cut the strips in half. Heat milk to boiling and add the carrots and salt. Simmer for about 10 minutes or until tender. Add butter or other fat and serve with the milk as sauce. Thickening may be added, if desired.

Creamy Rice With Apricots

One-half cup rice, 1 cup boiling water, 1½ cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup sugar, 2 cups chopped fresh fruit or dried fruit soaked and cooked.

Cook the rice over direct heat in the cup of boiling water. When the water has been almost absorbed put the rice in a double boiler, add the milk, salt, and sugar. Cover and cook until the rice is tender. Mix the rice and fruit and when chilled serve with top milk. Canned grated pineapple gives an excellent flavor.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The First and Second Books of Chronicles are largely a record of the reigns of David, Solomon and the Kings of Judea up to the time of the Captivity.

The geneological tables of the first Book are of no particular interest to Gentile readers. But they were of great importance to the Jews, showing their title to land and office, which were hereditary in families. Of course their central interest is the tracing of the descent of the family of David through which the nation would accomplish its Messianic mission.

From the time of Joshua to David, about 1280 to 1030 B. C., Shiloh was the seat of the nation's worship. David made Jerusalem the capital of the nation, and began at once elaborate preparations for the building of a house of worship which might in some measure symbolize the infinite perfection of Jehovah.

After the tragic death of Saul, who fell upon his sword on Mt. Gilboa, "all Israel gathered themselves to David unto Hebron, saying, 'Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh, and moreover in times past, even when Saul was King, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel.' Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the King of Hebron, and David made a covenant with them in Hebron before the Lord: and they anointed David, King over Israel, according to the word of the Lord by Samuel."

Then followed the conquest of Jerusalem by Moab, and the men of Israel, and David dwelt in the castle or stronghold on Mt. Moriah. He began at once a building program, repairing the part of the city which had been damaged in battle, and enlarging its scope.

"So," says the story of First Chronicles, "David waxed greater and greater; for the Lord of Hosts was with him."

David's first step toward the inauguration of the national worship of Jehovah at Jerusalem was the bringing up to this city of the sacred ark. His next undertaking was the gathering of materials for the temple which Solomon was to build. Hiram, King of Tyre, gave David timbers of cedar and also sent him carpenters and masons to aid in the construction of his palace, which was constructed prior to the temple at Mt. Moriah.

David's wars of conquest so interferred with his plans of expansion that he only succeeded in laying the foundations for the future greatness of his dynasty in the reign of his son and successor. However, the suppression of the Philistines finally brought the peace and prosperity which made possible the noble architectural achievements of the succeeding reign.

David's fine statesmanship consolidated the kingdom, filled the treasury and finally ushered in an era of peace. He also provided a liturgy for the worship of Israel, and indeed for all succeeding generations, in the Psalms—the greatest devotional literature of the world, without which the ritual of the Christian Church would be impoverished indeed.

The interest of the son of David in assembling materials for the Temple which was to be, is shown by his attention to almost every conceivable detail. Cutting of stones, preparing an abundance of iron for nails, trees in abundance, cedars of Lebanon, silver and gold without stint.

HOW ABOUT INFLATION?

Inflation is a subject which is now being discussed in the country more and more each day. There are many proposals. Some of them call for the printing of paper money, others for reducing the gold content of the dollar Still others aiming at controlled inflation advocate great bond issues the proceeds of which are to be used for the construction of public works.

In speaking of currency inflation, Nation's Business recently made the following very pertinent remarks:

"As a nation we live less on currency than any other country. Nine-tenths of our business is done by check. And that's one of the things that make talk of currency inflatien seem ridiculous.

"We have more currency than we need in our liviest business days. Why make more? What we need is faith or credit—and credit is another name for faith. We need bank deposits in action. How the activity of bank deposits has failen is shown by some Federal Reserve Bulletin figures:

"From 1923 to 1925 deposits in member banks in leading cities turned over 26 to 32 times per year. From the fall of 1925 to 1929 turnover increased until it became 45 times a year.

"In the last quarter of 1932 it had dropped to 16 times per year. Money was doing its work slowly and all business lagged."

But in spite of all efforts on the part of sound money advocates to show up its fallacies there is a certain allurement about inflation. It looks like such an easy way to get rid of our difficulties. Yet the facts are that after its first exhilarating effects have worn off, the nation which adopted inflation is always worse off than it was before. The case of Germany is an example. Everyone remembers what happened there a few years ago when inflation was tried. The German people remember it so well that, although the depression has hit them as hard as any nation in the world, they are clinging doggedly to the system of sound money.

The fact is that what we need in America is not an inflation of currency but an inflation of credit or confidence. This confidence is even now slowly returning, and if a few adjustments to our economic system which are still necessary can he made without undue shock the process of recovery will set in. What we need most is not more money but more confidence in ourselves and our country. When we get that the money will come out of hiding and we will be riding up the hill once more.

CITIZENS ASKED TO MAKE HEALTH DAY WORTHWHILE

Observance Is Always Delayed In County Until End Of May

Governor Ritchie has issued a proclamation setting aside the first day of May as Child Health Day, throughout Maryland, and asking Marylanders to join in the nationwide observance of the day.

The message calls upon all Marylanders to give particular thought to the health needs of the children of this state and to assist in every way possible in furthering the health and well-being of Maryland's most valuable assets—its children and young people.

The State Committee for Child Health Day is composed of representatives of State, County and City departments of health and of education; of State and county medical societies; parent-teacher associations; service clubs; organizations concerned with the care of handicapped children. Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health is chairman of the State committee.

Reports received by Dr. Knox show that arrangements are being made in every section of Maryland, to make this year's celebration of Child Health Day, especially worth while. In nearly all instances, the observance will not end with the day. Instead, it will mark the beginning of activities that will be carried on through the coming months. Here are some of the plans:

The Baltimore City Department of Health, with the assistance of parent-teacher associations, and other organizations interested in the health of children, will concentrate on a carefully mapped out campaign for the protection of all young children in the city, against diphtheria. Their ultimate goal is "no sickness and no deaths from diphtheria' in Baltimore City.

The first of this year's spring and summer, special child health conferences are under way in the counties, for the examination of young children in preparation for their admission to school in the fall. These "summer round-ups" as they are popularly called will be joint affairs also. They will be conducted under the auspices of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene, the County Departments of Health, the County Superintendents of Schools, assisted by the parent-teacher associations and other organizations. Their aim is to have the parents of all young children realize the importance of such examinations by their own physicians, preferably, or, if that cannot be arranged, at the child health conferences, so that conditions in need of correction can be discovered, and attended to, before the children enter school.

The Scout organizations—boys and girls—are planning for appropriate celebrations; other groups have begun the study of community child health needs; and in many of the schools there will be May festivals in which the children themselves, will take part.

On account of the weather here, Garrett county will not celebrate Child Health Day until the later part of May.

Sportsmen Can Save Our Supply of Trout

All species of trout must have an adequate water supply and adequate spawning grounds to continue their existence to hold their own to increase in numbers, according to E. Lee LeCompte, State Game Warden. The sportsmen and general public residents of counties through which trout streams flow, can greatly assist their favorite fishes by providing better propagation areas, he stated.

"One of the most successful methods which has been tried and found suitable, is to place logs one-half distance across streams; for instance, a row of logs to the right side of the stream about 100 yards apart, then logs to the left side of the stream 100 yards apart or at a distance about the center between the logs placed at the right of the stream. In this manner, fish will always have free access up and down said stream and the currents will naturally cut holes at the upper side of the log, thereby furnishing spawning grounds for the fish. Also the current will cut under the bank forming shady nooks and adequate water holes during the dry season for your favorite fishes. Of course, the log must be barricaded strongly to hold it in position, otherwise, freshets would soon take your logs out. The end of the log can be cut into the bank far enough to hold, and poles or stakes should he driven at each side of log to hold it in position in the water.

"The State Game Department is cooperating with the State Forestry Department to carry out this method on all streams entering into or crossing the State Forest areas and the State Game Refuge areas. If the public of the counties in which our trout streams are located will use this method, I am sure they will find very beneficial results in 1934."

FOREST FIRES INCREASE BUT DAMAGE IS LESSENED

Forester F. W. Besley Calls Paradox Due to Efficient Fighting Methods in Recent Years

RECORD IS SET IN 1932

A tendency toward a greater number of forest fires in the State, but a marked decrease in the average amount of acreage destroyed, is noted in the annual report of the State Department of Forestry for the fiscal years 1931 and 1932, issued by F. W. Besley, State Forester.

This apparent paradox is explained hy the increased efficiency in methods of extinguishing fires, while the greater number of fires is due, the report points out, to a corresponding increase in fire hazards.

All-Time Record Set

"The average acreage burned per fire in 1931 reached a new low figures, only to be eclipsed by an all-time record of thirteen acres per fire in 1932."

In 1932, for example, an average of 193 acres were burned per fire, and in 1926 110 acres were burned. In 1931 the figure dropped to 26 acres.

A State-wide increase in incendiary fires hns been apparent in recent years, the report states. For the last three years fires traceable to this cause have amounted successively to seventeen percent, fifteen percent and twenty percent. Increases in incendiary fires were particularly noted in Garrett and Allegany counties. In many cases the motives are unknown, due, it is said, to the difficulty experienced in catchiag those responsible.

Smoking Toll Heavy

"Smoking continues to be the leading cause of forest fires, comprising forty percent and fifty percent of the total number of forest fires in 1931 and 1932. Brush burning is second in importance with twenty-six percent and twenty-five percent, respectively, for the two years."

Wild huckleberry pickers in their mountain fastnesses near Frederick, who persist in setting the woods on fire in order to improve the wild huckleberry crop, still are proving a thorn in the side of those trying to preserve the forests of that area.

The city of Frederick is trying to protect the municipal water supply and develop a commercial forest on its watershed, but it appears that almost as fast as the city, with the cooperation of the State Department of Forestry, builds up the woods, the wild huckleberry pickers burn them down.

City Owns Property

The problem, the report sets forth, has existed for a number of years and is aggravated by the fact that much of the land burned over by the "mountain people" belongs to the city of Frederick.

Efforts have been made by the city and State agencies to educate the mountaineers as to the importance of saving the 6,000 acres on the headwaters of Fishing and Hunting creeks, but it was pointed out that after listening to the lectures, reading the literature and seeing the motion pictures provided hy these agencies, the wild huckleberry pickers go back home and continue to improve the berry crop in their own primitive way.

Forestry work in general "shows a very good progress for the past two years," the report states, "notwithstanding the adverse conditions which prevailed during this period."

The domain of the State forests was more than doubled during the period. More than 26,000 acres were purchased, bringing the total acreage owned to 48,947 acres.

Memorial Day Plans to be Discussed at Legion Meeting

A program for Memorial Day will be discussed at the regular meeting of the American Legion on Monday evening, according to Joseph M. Gonder, post commander.

A report on reforestation and relief will also be made at this time by A. G. Hesen. All legionaires are urged to be present.

Dates for Apple Blossom Festival Set for May Three and Four

The tenth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival will be held at Winchester, Va., May 3 and 4.

Reports indicate that virtually all the orchards of the Shenandoah-Cumberland-Potomac belt of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Southeastern Pennsylvania will be in full bloom the first week of May Under favorable conditions blossoms remain on the trees about five days after unfolding. There are approximately 13,000,000 bearing apple trees in the district, 1,000,000 of which are in the vicinity of Winchester.

Miss Francoise May, daughter of the Belgian Ambassador, will be crowned Queen Shenandoah X., and George M. Dern, secretary of War, will crown the queen the afternoon of the first day.

Mr and Mrs. A. D. Naylor, who spent the winter at Sebring, Florida, returned to Oakland Monday evening. Their return home was delnyed by the illness of their grandchild, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Playford Naylor, who was stricken with pneumonia about two weeks ago and whose condition was critical for several days. The child is now recuperating and will be removed from a hospital to its home in a few days.

DIED.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Foster, aged 79, died at the home of her dnughter, Mrs. William P. DeBerry, two miles north of Oakland, on Tuesday, April 18, following an illness of more than four months.

She had been living with her son, Judson W. Foster, near Dodge School house, about five miles north of Oakland, but was taken sudden ill at her daughter's home and remained bedfast since that time.

Funeral services were conducted from the Dodge Methodist church, Rev. P. P. Snyder officiating, and interment was made at Deer Park.

Warm Climate Vegetables
By W. R. Ballard, Extension Horticulturist

Certain vegetables are particularly sensitive to injury by frost and must wait the advent of warm weather before being planted. Indeed in this group are the various sorts of beans, tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, sweet potatoes, mellons, cucumbers, squashes, and pumpkins. Sweet corn will stand some cold weather, but does not grow well until the temperature begins to climb.

Tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and sweet potatoes are usually started in a hotbed so that good-sized plants are ready to set in the garden as soon as danger of frost is past. Even melons and cucumbers may be started this way, if early results are desired.

With lima beans and sweet corn, early planting sometimes results disastrously because the seed is likely to rot in the ground if cold or wet weather prevails. Various devices are sometimes used in the field to enable planting at a somewhat earlier period than can be done without protection. Several forms of plant covers are often used to give plants an early start. They have some value, too, in protecting the young plants from attacks of insects.

Light, sandy soil warm up quicker in the early spring than do the heavier ones and, for this reason, they should be selected for the early crops. Sweet potatoes and cantaloupes, particularly, seem to require soils light in character for their best development. They respond well to use of well-rotted manure, if it is placed in the hill.

High yields of tomatoes seem to be correlated with early setting of well-developed plants.

Maryland Bean Growers Warned to Rotate Fields and Use Disease-Free Seed Stock

Maryland bean growers who would have strong, healthy plants, free from anthracnose or "pod spot," should see that the land on which they are grown is rotated at least for three years with other crops and that they plant only seed raised in the irrigated sections of the West. Seed grown west of the Mississippi River, in Wyoming, California, or Idaho, has been found preferable, since it is not only free from anthracnose but also blight, according to H. A. Hunter, pathologist for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

It has been shown by experiment and practical experience that the three most important diseases of beans in Maryland, anthracnose, blight and root rot, may live over the winter in the soil and infest a bean crop the following year. It has been found that anthracnose is sprayed from plant to plant in the field during wet weather so, as far as is possible, beans should not be cultivated or picked while the plants are wet with dew or rain.

A good fertilizer to use on beans is a 4-12-6 mixture and it should be applied at from 300 to 500 pounds to the acre. Mr. Hunter points out, however, the bean seed is easily injured by coming in direct contact with commercial fertilizers and, as a result, the fertilizer should be worked into the soil well before and not at the time of planting.

HANGING 'ROUND THE CORNER

"I got tired of hanging 'round the corner waiting for a job." This is the explanation given by many of the young men who have applied for work with the government's big reforestation project. It is no wonder they got tired of aimless loafing, which so deadens hope and purpose and ambition.

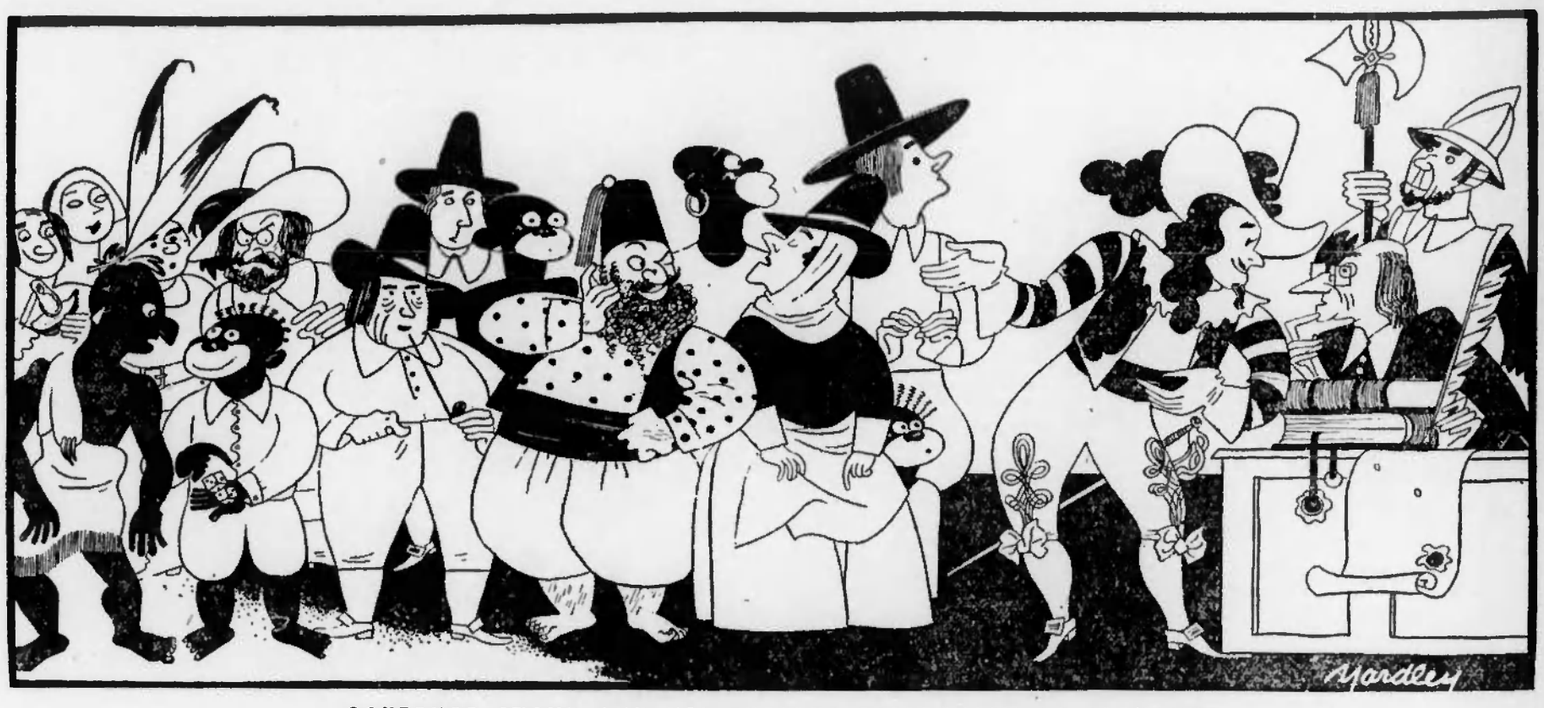
One would think any young man could find some better use of his time than hanging 'round the corner. Most young men who are found in these spots could find things to do around their homes. They would be better off if they would spend the time cleaning up their back yards, their attics, and basements, if they have such places. The home folk always have little jobs they want done.

Ambitious young men spend little time hanging 'round corners, even if they are temporarily out of work. They know that one does not hear of jobs in the idle spot. Business men looking for help do not visit the corners to look for promising candidates. They watch the newspaper ads and visit the labor agencies.

Ambitious young fellows out of work should be studying something useful. They can find books to read that will give them the intelligence which the world respects. They need to read the newspapers thoroughly for possible suggestions of employment.

One can't help sympathize with the sentiment of dull weariness felt by unemployed men. They long for any kind of human companionship, and the chance acquaintances of a city street seem better than nothing. But weak willed young fellows learn things on the streets of many cities that give a crooked twist to their careers. Jobs are not had anyway by waiting around for them. They go to those who look incessantly for them, who are constantly watching for things that people want done.

Notes on early Maryland Governors---II



GOVERNOR STONE AND HIS CURIOUS COLLECTION OF SERVANTS

WILLIAM STONE AND PARLOUS TIMES FOR THE PALATINATE

by

KATHERINE SCARBOROUGH

CECILIUS CALVERT, Lord Baltimore, who had entertained high hopes of establishing in Maryland a refuge for his countrymen from the sorry scheme of things which darkened England during the Cromwellian upheaval, was perilously close to losing his palatinate when he selected, as the first Protestant Governor of his dominion beyond the sea, William Stone, Sheriff of Northumberland county, Virginia. He was chosen to replace the Catholic, Thomas Green, who had succeeded Leonard Calvert in 1647. A Protestant was vitally needed to disarm the bitter-end Cromwellians who disliked Catholics as much as they did royalty.

Governor Stone's appointment was made on August 12, 1648, and probably was due not only to his religious convictions, which were a direct reply to Lord Baltimore's Roundhead critics, but to his undertaking "in some short time to procure 500 people of British or Irish descent to come from other places and plant or reside within our said province of Maryland." These people, all of whom were Puritans, had emigrated first to Virginia, where they were harshly treated by the Episcopalians of that colony, and upon coming to Maryland, settled on the Severn at Providence, now the Eastport section of Annapolis.

GOVERNOR STONE was a known friend of the Parliamentary party in England, but he did not hesitate to take the long and elaborate oath of office, prescribed and sent out for him by Lord Baltimore, in which he vowed to be "true and faithful to the Right Hon'ble Cecilius, lord baron of Baltimore, the true and absolute proprietary of this province of Maryland, and his heirs."

The same oath was administered to a new commission established by his lordship at the same time Governor Stone was appointed and which included Thomas Green, Esq., Capt. John Price, Thomas Hatton, "our secretary"; John Pile, Robert Clarke and Capt. Robert Vaughan. These men constituted Lord Baltimore's "privy council of state." They were his special collective representative in Maryland, appointed by him and removable at his pleasure. They knew his views on public matters and his personal wishes as well and, with the Governor, they were trusted to guard his interests and carry out his policies. They also formed the Upper House of the Legislature, the lower consisting of nine burgesses representing Kent and St. Mary's, these two counties, up to 1650, comprising the whole of Maryland's Eastern and Western shores.

On the score of religion the Privy Council was evenly divided, three of the members being Protestants and three Catholics. Like the Governor, they were pledged to interfere in no way with the religious liberty of any Christian sect, "and in particular (of) no Roman Catholic."

IN ADDITION to the oath of fealty, Lord Baltimore had prepared and sent to Maryland with the commission to Governor Stone a new great seal, familiar today to Marylanders as the proud insignia of their State. It bore a coat of arms, quartered, the first and fourth quarterings consisting of three pales, or vertical bars, alternately gold and black, crossed by a bend, or diagonal stripe on which the colors are reversed. The second and third quarterings are themselves quartered red and white and charged with a Greek cross, "counterchanged" (that is, red on the white ground and white on the red) with its arms terminating in trefoils.

The pales of gold and black are the original Calvert arms and the erosses are the bearings of the Crossland family, Alicia Crossland having been the mother of George Calvert, the first Lord Baltimore. Above the shield Lord Baltimore placed a palatine's cap, representing an earl's coronet and denoting the proprietary's palatinate jurisdiction. This is surmounted by a helmet bearing a ducal crown from which spring two small banners, gold and black. A plowman and a fisehrman served as supporters and beneath is the Calvert motto, Fatti Maschii Parole Femine. Around the whole Lord Baltimore placed the legend, Scuto bonae voluntatis tuae coronasti nobis.

BESIDES THE COLONY brought by Governor Stone from Virginia, another group of Protestants arrived from England soon after the settlement of Providence and established themselves in what is now Charles county, which was erected into a separate political unit for them. By this emigration the Puritan ranks in Maryland were strengthened enormously and with the increase in numbers came a growing consciousness of political power. Governor Stone assumed his office toward the close of 1648 or early in 1649. On April 2, 1649, the General Assembly convened at St. Mary's, with the majority of its members, like the Governor, dissenters from the Roman faith.

Praise unlimited has been lavished by posterity upon this Assembly for its passage, in the face of civil and religious convulsions at home and in England, of the famous Toleration act which, by formal legislation, provided religious freedom within the limits of orthodox Christianity for the Maryland colonists, going almost as far in the direction of complete religious freedom as Lord Baltimore himself had contemplated at the outset.

THE PROVISIONS of the Toleration act are engagingly worded and crystalline in their simplicity. After enacting severe penalties for the crime of blasphemy and decreeing dire affliction upon anyone who would call another a sectarian name of reproach, it proceeds:

> and whereas the enforcing of conscience in matters of religion hath frequently fallen out to be of dangerous consequence in those commonwealths where it has been practiced, and for the quiet and peaceful government of this province, and the better to preserve mutual love and unity amongst the inhabitants, etc., no person or persons whatsoever, within this province, or the islands, ports, harbors, creeks or havens thereunto belonging, professing to believe in Jesus Christ, shall, from henceforth, be anyways troubled or molested, or discountenanced for or in respect of his or her religion, nor in the free exercise thereof, within this province or the islands thereunto belonging, nor any way compelled to the belief or exercise of any other religion against his or her consent.

The refulgence of this act derives an added luster by contrast with the records of other colonies on the score of religion. In the north men who had crossed terror-ridden seas in quest of "freedom to worship God" drove the Episcopalian from their borders and lashed the peaceful Quaker to the whipping post, where they bored holes in his tongue, slit his ears or condemned him to die on a gibbet.

IN VIRGINIA Episcopalians disfranchised Catholics and Puritans, and even in Rhode Island, founded by the mild and urbane Roger Williams, Catholics were denied participation in the political rights which were enjoyed by everyone else in the community.

Only in Maryland did authority frown on the man or woman who dared to stigmatize another as "heretic, schismatic, idolator, Puritan, Independent, Presbyterian, popish priest, Jesuit, Jesuited Papist, Lutheran, Calvinist, Brownist, Antinomian Barrowist, Roundhead, Separatist, or any other name or term in a reproachful manner." To do so was to subject one's self to a fine of 10 shillings sterling, one-half of the sum to he paid to the person insulted. In case of default, the offender was to be publicly whipped and imprisoned until ample satisfaction had been made to the victim by asking and receiving forgiveness "publicly and in the presence of the chief officer of the place" where the offense had been committed.

The list of expletives interdicted by the Toleration act seems to have been not only all-inclusive of every religious sect represented in the colony but to throw no little light on the favorite insults and epithets of the early seventeenth century in Maryland. To the Assembly which passed the act the Puritans of Providence at first refused to send representatives and it was only after Governor Stone had made an arduous journey to visit and reason with them that they were sufficiently mollified to select delegates.

TO COMPLICATE the situation still further rumors shuttled among the Puritans to the effect that Lord Baltimore's government was about to be overthrown in England and the province "reduced" under the control of commissioners of Parliament.

These rumors undoubtedly originated among the Cromwellians in England and were transmitted to Maryland by friends of the colonists on the Severn. Governor Stone and the other civil authorities did what they could to silence them, but the stories would not down. It soon became only too evident that they were not without foundation.

In the midst of the hubbub Governor Stone in 1651 went to Virginia on a visit concerning the purpose of which historians maintain complete silence. His predecessor in office, Thomas Green, was left in charge of affairs as deputy Governor during his absence. During Governor Stone's stay the Virginia Assembly enacted a statute requiring all ministers to conform to the Church of England, and directing Governor Berkeley and the council to compel all non-conformists to leave the province "with all conveniency." This was supplemented by Berkeley's proclamation acknowledging Charles II as the lawful King of England and making it treason to utter or even to think anything whatever against the house of Stuart, or in favor of a Puritan parliament.

The Virginia Governor's proclamation of allegiance to Charles II was quickly followed in Maryland by a similar deposition, issued by Deputy Governor Green, accompanied by rejoicings and a general pardon. Governor Stone hurried back to St. Mary's and relieved his

Introduces Bill

A bill to give effect to the right to work was introduced in the House Tuesday by David J. Lewis of Maryland as a substitute for the Black 30-hour-week bill as it passed the Senate.

The bill includes the Swope plan, which proposed securities for the workers embracing unemployment insurance, old age insurance, health and life insurance, accident insurance, and stabilization of industry.

The industries covered included mnnufacturing, mining, transportation, building construction, electrical communication, the distribution of gas, petroleum, and the printing trades.

The Republican Commercial Printing Department is the best equipped printery you could care to inspect.

deputy of his office in a scene which never has been described, but which can be vividly imagined. In spite of his prompt and energetic disavowal of Governor Green's course, however, the whirlwind descended about the ears of the Protestant executive.

CONCERNING the direct cause of the upheaval which swept Governor Stone from power for a time, historians disagree. Some place the responsibility directly at the door of Deputy Governor Green and his hasty proclamation, while others impute it wholly to the action of the Virginia Assembly and the machinations of Claiborne, who had been chafing for the chance to strike another blow at Lord Baltimore's palatinate.

In any event, Parliament sent out commissioners for the reduction of Virginia to submission. Charges against Maryland were made, before they started, by Richard Ingle, that firebrand of no blessed memory in Lord Baltimore's colony, who was one of Claiborne's followers. Ingle's charges were so easily refuted by Lord Baltimore that the name of his province was not included in the commission, but Claiborne obtained by subterfuge what Ingle had failed to secure by direct attack. Having sufficient influence with Parliament to secure his own nomination as one of the commissioners, the wily Virginian was able to have the phraseology of the commission so altered that, in place of the word Virginia, it read, "All plantations within the Bay of Chesapeake."

THIS PROVIDED HIM with his opening. Having quickly subdued Virginia, the commissioners came to Maryland in March, 1652, removed Governor Stone from office and reinstated him only after they had wiped out the lord proprietor's authority by naming the members of the council, by requiring allegiance to the Commonwealth and compelling all legal processes to he run "in the name of the Keepers of the Liberties of England."

At this juncture the Puritans began really to assert themselves. More than seventy of those on the Severn. led by Edward Lloyd, signed a petition to the commissioners complaining of the Governor and asking to be relieved of the oath of fidelity to Lord Baltimore, which was contingent upon the forfeiture of "all our lands for his Lordship's use if not taken within three months." This was followed by a similar petition from Richard Preston and sixty others of "the Housekeepers and Freemen of the Patuxent river."

The commissioners. who signed themselves the "very loving Friends" of the petitioners, immediately urged the latter to continue in their "due obedience to the Commonwealth of England," regardless of their complete lack of authority, proceeded a second time to grind Lord Baltimore's colony under their heels. Governor Stone rejected their offers for a peaceful settlement, so the Puritans, under the command of Richard Bennett, who had been most hospitahly received in Maryland when he was exiled from Virginia, marched to St. Mary's, seized the records and took them to the home of Richard Preston on the Patuxent. From there, on July 15, 1654, the commissioners issued another manifesto requiring all inhabitants of the province to recognize the authority of Cromwell and, incidentally, of themselves.

GOVERNOR STONE resigned his post five days later "for prevention of the effusion of blood, and ruine of the country and inhabitants by an hostile contest," his resignation being witnessed by Thomas Gerrard, Thomas Hatton and Edmund Scarborough.

THESE SHE "DID CONCEIVE RANNE AWAY BEFORE THE FIGHT WAS ENDED"

Bennett and Claiborne then issued "an order for settling the government of Maryland and for the conservation of the peace and publick administration of justice within the province." Capt. William Fuller, Richard Preston, William Durand, Edward Lloyd, Capt. John Smith, Leonard Strong, "Mr." Lawson, John Hatch, Richard Wells, Richard Ewen, or any four of them, "whereof Captain Fuller, Mr. Preston or Mr. Durand" were "to be always one," were to be commissioners "for the well ordering, directing and governing the affairs of Maryland under his Highness, the Lord Protector of England, Scotland and Ireland and the Dominions thereof." They also called upon the Assembly to meet October 20, 1654, at the same time disfranchising "all such as have borne arms in war against the Parliament or do profess the Roman Catholick religion."

The Assembly convened in answer to the summons and, in the words of Leonard Strong's "Babylon's Fall In Maryland," "did pass and record an act that whosoever did publish any writ or summons, declaration or proclamation either in Lord Baltimore's or any other name, then the government so settled should be accounted a delinquent against the Commonwealth of England and dealt with accordingly." It also repealed the Toleration act and substituted for it a measure penalizing all adherents of "popery and prelacy" as well as Quakers, Baptists and other miscellaneous sects.

LORD BALTIMORE, in the meantime, had sent over a declaration castigating "the people at Providence, by him called Annarundel, to be rebels and strictly charged his officers efficaciously to deal with them accordingly." Cromwell, then all powerful in England, further strengthened Lord Batlimore's stand by disapproving the course the commissioners were following and sending out an order to the Virginia Commissioners to leave Maryland undisturbed. Stone was ordered by Lord Baltimore to resume his office. Fuller refused to surrender it, so the Governor called for volunteers to descend upon Patuxent, recapture the records from the home of Richard Preston, and to apprehend that gentleman himself.

William Eltonhead and Josias Fendall headed the expeditionary force which mustered in response to the Governor's appeal and which included twenty men at arms. Preston is said not to have been at home when they arrived, but they succeeded in taking prisoner John Sutton, "secretary to attend the records," and several other "sons of thunder." They also secured the records themselves and restored them to St. Mary's, in addition to capturing the magazine and arms designed for the defense of St. Leonard's. So far, so good. Vastly encouraged by the success of their raid, they fell back to the home of William Eltonhead and recruited their forces for an attack on Providence.

When he had secured 130 men Governor Stone started for the Severn. The attacking force advanced by land and water upon the stronghold of the Puritans and, on March 25, 1655, met them in the first land battle ever fought in Maryland.

FROM THE DISTANCE of almost three centuries that foray on the Severn has aspects that seem absurdly mock-heroic, but the issue was vital and the participants deadly in earnest. The engagement was "fierce and sharp." Each side had its battle cry. "In the name of God, fall on! God is our strength!" was the watchword for Providence. The Stone cohorts countered with, "Hey, for Saint Maries!"

The contest was hopelessly one-sided. The Baltimore forces were greatly outnumbered and were cut down without mercy. Stone was wounded and taken prisoner. A court-martial condemned him to death, but his life was spared. He was, however, treated with extreme severity, and permitted to hold no communication with his wife or friends. Weeks passed before his captors relented sufficiently to permit his wife to visit him and nurse him back to health. Before she started, however, she wrote a spirited letter to Lord Baltimore in which she described the battle of the Severn and "our sad condition in your province," and, In a postscript, requesting for her son a loan of "twenty or thirty pounds," promising that "it shall be payd your honor againe."

Not more than four or five of the men engaged under Governor Stone escaped, according to the letter written by his lady, and these she "did conceive ranne away before the fight was ended." William Eltonhead "was shot to death . . . in cold blood," according to the same authority, and the other officers were seized, together with "a great number of Papists" and all their vessels, arms, ammunition and provisions. About fifty were slain and wounded and four others are said to have been shot after they had surrendered with promise of quarter.

NEWS OF THE FRAY naturally reached the ears of Cromwell, who was growing somewhat weary of republicanism and who referred the whole matter to the commissioners of trade and plantations for settlement. Lord Baltimore submitted a strong case, but a year passed before they handed down their decision restoring Maryland to the proprietary. Bennett and Matthews, the commissioners, surrendered their authority to Lord Baltimore who, a few months before, had anticipated the event and sent out a commission as governor to Josias Fendall, who had served on the expedition to Patuxent to recover the records.

Governor Stone, after the battle of the Severn, took little part in public affairs. He retired to his manor of Avon on the Nanjemoy river, in Charles county, where he died a few years later. The exact date of his demise is unknown, but his will was proved December 21, 1660. This document is recorded in Liber 1, 1635-74 of the wills of Maryland, and bequeaths his estate, which was quite substantial for those days, to his family.

Most of it, of course, was in land. His first real holdings in Maryland were acquired soon after his arrival from Virginia and were granted in return for his transportation of nine servants into the colony. Not long afterward he applied for additional tracts for his family, twelve other servants, one Thomas Burdett and four Negroes, one Turk and an Indian. In all, he received in consideration of his faithful service to Lord Baltimore as much land as he could ride around in a day. His home on Hungar's creek, in Virginia, was sold to Capt. William Whittington in 1653.

GOVERNOR STONE'S SPIRITED WIFE was a sister of the Rev. William Cotton, celebrated Colonial divine. She survived him until 1675, leaving three daughters and four sons whose progeny, like their sire, became distinguished in the annals of Maryland. One of the great-grandsons of William and Virlinda Stone was that Thomas who signed the Declaration of Independence. Another, John Hoskins Stone, fought in the Revolution, first as captain and then as colonel under General Smallwood, and later served as Governor of the State from 1794 to 1797. Still another great-grandson, William Murray, became a bshop of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

In Charles county the descendants of Governor Stone still live on land granted to their progenitor for faithfulness to his trust. In the Baltimore Museum of Art a lovely paneled room, removed a few years ago from Habre de Venture, home of the Signer, gives silent testimony to the good taste and the talent for brave living which are inherent in the Stone blood.

THE PASSING SHOW

By the Man in the Street

(From the Baltimore Observer)

Now that the wise ones are beginning to prognosticate about the Federal appointments for Maryland, the real Roosevelt supporters must be getting red in the face to see mentioned as probabilities some of the men who had to be almost kicked into taking a part in the campaign. We recall for instance, that at State Democratic headquarters there was never any great enthusiasm for Roosevelt and it is a matter of common knowledge that the Roosevelt-Garner League had to take a hand to distribute Roosevelt literature that the Ritchie machine people failed to utilize.

Every well posted Democrat knows about the deep gloom that prevailed at Democratic State headquarters on election night, the story going around that George L. Radcliffe, the campaign committee chairman, being about the only one who seemed to get a real kick out of the returns, while Governor Ritchie all but wept—and not for joy, either.

But that is the way it goes in politics. The machine inbel is the big thing to have.

One of the worst performances we have seen in a long time was the effort of the morning Blanket to obtain a picture of J. Monroe Holland, on his release from the city jail the other night. That paper seemed to be greatly incensed that Holland was able to leave the jail in an automobile and that the press photographers did not even get a snap. Of course, well thinking press photographers hate this sort of stuff but bread is bread and jobs are no longer lying around loose.

Holland was not convicted of violating any banking law as many think but bumped up against the bankruptcy law of Uncle Sam. There is no reason so far as we can see that he should be pursued and persecuted by newspapers and the public, we think, is more and more inclined to resent newspaper indecency. There is no reason why a newspaper cannot be decent and it will be decent when operated by decent people. It is newspaper indecency that huilds up radio patronage.

Some of the younger members of the Baltimore bar not satisfied with the way things have heen going lately have been making inquiry as to the pay to be given by the State to Stuart S. Janney, who has been named as special counsel to the State Bank Commissioner. Gossip has it that the stipend has been set at $15,000 a year but where the money is to come from we do not know.

According to reports reaching these quarters Mr. Janney has not seen fit to reply in writing to any inquiries on this subject. Instead he has requested his interrogators to consult him over the telephone. But the dissenting lawyers want to make a record of it—and we wish them no harm in their endeavors.

It was a long time coming out but at last the taxpayers learn that hidden away in the folds of one of Brooke Lee's road bills was a provision for eighty men who are to weigh "foreign" trucks invading Maryland, and seeing that the correct tax is paid. These are to be the new Cossacks. The Governor under attack of Senate abondoned the plan to increase the State police force but here we have the same thing again under a new name. These fellows are to be named by the State Roads Commission just as that body names right-of-way procurers and such, picking of course, the right men each time.

Of course, these eighty men are to see that the State gets more revenue—it is always that when the powers-that-be pad the payroll these days but they will be Ritchie-Brooke Lee henchmen just the same as are the right-of-way agents named since the Legislative session of 1931 without any particular authority.

And under the Ritchie-Brooke Lee bill the county roads are to be taken over—the State is to mend them in the most approved fashion and the State machine under Ritchie and Brooke Lee will do the hiring.

It is a great scheme—Ritchie-Brooke Lee Cossacks weighing the trucks (with power to make arrests) and the Ritchie-Brooke Lee henchmen hiring the chaps who are to scrape the mud out of the ditches along Swampoodle way.

Then there is the innocent Walter H. Buck, factotum of the Civil Service Reform Association or whatever one may call it. Mr. Buck protests that the lads who are to weigh the trucks should be under the protection of the "merit system" law. It is also sweet to read that Mr. Buck (who is old enough to know better) still thinks that Maryland has a merit system law. Mr. Buck seems not to have been impressed at all by the fact that under what he calls the "merit system" law it was easily possible for a duly elected State official to steal the State's money, get himself put on vacation by his bondsmen and later to get himself appointed to a responsible money-handling position in an important department of the State government after being pushed through the "merit system" office.

Marylnnd has no merit system as such. What it has is a State Employment Commissioner and to the best of our knowledge and helief the snme persons whe would have been given appointments without any law at all still get them in pretty much the same old way.

MT. LAKE PARK

The oft-repeated statement that the present world-wide economic upset, with consequent unemployment and suffering, has bred selfishness, was utterly disproved last week here.

The U. B. church in Loch Lynn needed a new roof, but there was a shortage in the treasury. The problem, however, was quickly solved by volunteer workmen. Approximately twenty men, among them were skilled carpenters, shed their conts nnd donned their overalls, tied on their aprons, grabbed their tools, and went to work. In a couple of days the much needed roof was on, and every one was happy. The members of the organization were happy because of the new roof, and the workmen were happy because they had unselfishly and without pay performed a good deed. It is true there was no money payment. And it is also perhaps true that there were some, perhaps many, to whom a couple of days' pay would have loomed large in their daily budget. That fact, however, didn't enter into their calculations. The job needed to he done They did it.

But it was worth the effort just to sit down to two dinners prepared and served by the ladies of the church, who have no superiors when it comes to setting out meals for hungry men. And did they eat! Well, I'm telling you.

The temperature is still at the freezing point at night, so it may be that the prediction of Mr. Murray White, past master in prophecy, will be fulfilled. You remember that about the first of April he predicted seven more snows. Well, we have had six of them. Records show that on the 27th of this month last year one of the deepest snows of the season fell.

Apparently this is going to be a great year for flower bloom. The writer has a thousand buds (count 'em) on a row of lilac bushes. Hope they are not caught in a frost depression.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Boy, get a load of this. The Boss Editor away and the chance of a lifetime to get in a column without any suppression or censorship.

I'll never get another opportunity in a "coon's age." Just my chance to tell you * * * * * * * is selling cookies * * * * * * through college.* * * * * less than two years old.

Then there's * * * * * * * * blessed event. And oh, boy, about the * * * * couple, * * * * * *, along Oak street last * * * * 10:30. * * * * * * says he drank * * * bottles of beer and it isn't intoxicating, while * * * * * * says two hottles will change a single track railroad to at least a double.

* * * * * * * * is selling it openly, and * * * * * * * * says he isn't going to interfere.

The way * * * * * * * * has worn out the State road lately, to say nothing of his shoes * * * —— * * * is a shame. Can someone provide him with roller skates?

* * * * * * * and * * * * * * back of * * * * * hotel the other night. Black eye, and so forth.

* * * * * * * * still throws paper out the window. You just can't keep the street clean that way.

Wouldn't you know it! The boss editor returned just before press time and used his hlack pencil again.

When will this suppression be over? It's been bad since March 4.

The budget plan is a wow. At the end of each month we have been going over accounts together. I never made any fuss of the items "L. O. K. $3," and "L. O. K. 35 cents," etc., until they got to be so numerous last month my curiosity got the best of me.

"What the devil does 'L. O. K.' mean," I whispered sweetly in her left ear.

"Lord Only Knows," she replied.

It used to be balance the budget. Now it's budget the balance.

Another One For No Beer

Another one evidently wants no beer. Zack Moon, writing in this week says in part:

"It is to be hoped that the good judgment of our worthy board of commissioners will not nllow the 'wets' to stampede them into a special election on the beer question. Beer is too costly a proposition in normal times, but when every possihle cent obtainable is needed for bread, it seems foolish to bring in beer which always makes paupers and drunkards out of consumers.

"Worse than the economic depression will be the moral depression brought about hecause of placing king alcohol on the throne in our midst."

Don't worry brother Moon. Did you ever see George D. Browning get stampeded?

Clearing Ones Conscience

Up in Terra Alta they are selling beer in a restaurant. The wife of the proprietor is a member of the W. C. T. U., nnd doesn't approve. The proprietor has newly been revived or converted. But they must watch their consciences. So they hire a clerk to do the selling over their own counter.

What, ho! call out promoter Tower. In this corner we have Kayo Semple, and in this corner we hnve none other than Battlin' Kanipper. Ringside seats in rear of the hotel, unless moved by erder of the Board.

Every time Ed. Browning sees a piece of paper blowing around the streets of Oakland he picks it up and takes it to his office and burns it. Not many citizens will do that, and the looks of the streets prove it.

A note given to me for publication by an Oakland lady states she is pleased that Doc McComas voted against the beer bill, but that she regrets that the "wets" are ridiculing him for it.

Don't fear, Doc's skin is tougher than that, and he has a duck's back when it comes to the wets pouring on him. They're just a speck on the horizon, in spite of the few who tried to push the question through the Taxpayers' league.

To beer or not to beer, that is the question.

THE REPUBLICAN

VOLUME 57. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, MAY 4, 1933. NUMBER 12.

APPLICATIONS FOR RELIEF NEAR THE THOUSAND MARK

Estimated That Total Registration will Include 1,250 Families Seeking Help

DISTRESSING SITUATIONS

Applications for relief in the families of the county are now nearing the thousand mark, according to Miss Charlotte Wilcox of the Governor's Emergency Relief Commission.

"We believe, however, we have received the greater part of the applications for both work and relief from at least twelve of the centers set up throughout the county. We are now waiting for returns from the six remaining centers," Miss Wilcox stated.

Approximately 150 had been registered at the Oakland center.

The County Welfare Board estimates that the total registration will amount to approximately 1250 families appealing for aid. A survey made last November gave the county 4198 families. "Of course it will be found that some of the applicants will not qualify for relief upon examination of the history blank which is taken from each applicant. Others will naturally be eliminated as home investigations get under way but emergency families of the county are being given first consideration by the Board and work projects are being set up as rapidly as possible," Miss Wilcox continued.

It was learned that in nine cases out of ten heads of families were found to have lapsed insurance policies. In the great majority of histories men with families ranging from seven to ten children had no life insurance at all, to say nothing of fire insurance. This fact presents a very deplorable family situation, as every thinking person can readily see.

Mr. Robert Kelso, of the Federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation, visited Oakland on Tuesday last with Mr. Alvin Guyler, of New York, who has been loaned to Maryland for the period of time necessary to setting R. F. C. funds to work. Both men sat in a special meeting of the local board on Tuesday night Important matters and projects were discussed by the group.

The Welfare Board again wishes to stress the fact that R. F. C. funds made available by the State are to be used for the relief of destitute families alone. This relief will be administered through work projects wherever there is an able-bodied wage earner in the home. In other cases direct relief will be granted upon investigation of the home situation. Work projects in towns and county areas will be furnished all labor by the R. F. C. without cost and supervision and necessary material to carry out the work will be provided by the county or municipal authorities.

Miss Wilcox stated that many of the family histories present distressing home conditions. In one case a man with a large family stated he had come to Oakland to attempt to negotiate a loan of $50 to pay back rent. When asked what collateral he had to put up he stated he had only his household effects, a cow, a heifer and an old Model T Ford. In another case a young man with severay days' growth of beard on his face apologized for his appearance and stated he did not have a razor with which to shave.

The most liberal cooperation has been extended by local people in the registration of applicants and the Board wishes to express its appreciation of this volunteer service. Everyone seems to recognize the fact that the disbursing of the R. F. C. funds in the county is not only a humane venture but that the distribution of approximately $15,000 monthly in the county will have a very favorable reaction for the county at large.

About one hundred young men had also registered for reforestation work it was stated. No quota for the county in this work has been set, the only instruction Miss Wilcox has received thus far is to register men between 18 and 25 who have dependents.

Barn Is Burned

The barn on the property of Walter Fike, about one mile northeast of Friendsville was consumed by fire of undetermined origin nbout 8 o'clock Monday night.

OAKLAND MAN BEING HELD IN JAIL AT CHARLESTON

Is Fugitive From Penal Farm—Sentenced Here in June, 1930

I. J. Kelley, of Oakland, is being held by Charleston, W. Va., police, on charges of passing bad checks, and has been identified as a fugitive from the State Penal Farm, near Hagerstown.

Kelly was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary on June 4, 1930, on charges of false pretense in the Garrett county circuit court. He passed a bad check on I. R. Rudy, signing the name J. Strother.

He escaped from the Penal Farm on September 29, 1931, during a fire in one of the farm buildings. Kelly was one of the first group of prisoners taken from the State penitentiary to the newly established farm. All the men there are on their honor to remain as there are no walls and only a few guards on the 840-acre tract.

Harold T. Donnell, State superintendent of prisoners, said he had been in touch with Charleston authorities last week and believed Hal. T. Kerns, in charge of the penal farm, was arranging for Kelly's return.

OBSERVANCE OF MEMORIAL DAY PLANNED BY LEGION

Usual Parade to be Held Followed by Service at Cemetery

Plans for the observance of Memorial Day in Oakland on Tuesday, May 30, were discussed at the regular meeting of the American Legion on Monday evening.

The usual parade will be held at 10:30 a. m., consisting of the Oakland drum and bugle corps, the Boys' Band, the Boy Scouts, lodge organizations, and veterans and other wars, and possibly other groups, and at the cemetery, before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, an address will be delivered.

No speaker has been selected as yet, according to Joseph M. Gonder, post commander.

Townshend Naylor, A. G. Hesen and Milton Sincell were named as a committee to have charge of beautification of the cemetery. The committee urges all citizens to assist in making the cemetery presentable by Memorial Day. The Legionaires expect to follow the same plan as last year, expending several days there making needed improvements.

Graves of all war veterans will be decorated by Legionaires on Memorial Day, following the parade.

Plan July 4 Celebration

The annual Fourth of July celebration will be carried on this year by the Legion, it was announced. It was at first thought that the Oakland Fire Department and Legion would sponsor it jointly, and include the Volunteer Firemen's convention, but since the date of the Firemen's convention will fall earlier, it was decided that the Legion would continue with the Independence day observance.

POTATO EXPERIMENTS TO BE ENLARGED THIS YEAR

Will Add Disease Study Work to Breeding of Varieties on Farm Near Oakland

WILL TEST PLOT YIELDS

More experiments in potato breeding and disease study will be conducted near Oakland again this year, it has been announced by John H. Carter, county agent. This work is being carried on by the U. S. Department of agriculture, the horticulture department of the University of Maryland, and the Extension service.

Last year experiments were carried on relative to the breeding of potatoes in order to develop if possible varieties more adaptable, with references to economic value, to the different sections of Maryland. About 175 different varieties were grown and all were tested for yield.

This year the departments will also conduct disease work here in order to develop disease resisting varieties. Drs. J. H. Beaumont, University of Maryland, and Stephenson and Shultz, of the U. S. Department, will be in charge of the work. Approximately 5 acres have been rented on the farm of Harry L. Porter, near town, where the exxperiments will be conducted.

There will also be a test made on yield plots of old and established varities of different seed sources, to determine the value of the seed, source and economic value of the variety with reference to this section, Mr. Carter stated. This is being carried on by the University of Maryland extension service. The plot will be located in this county, but the exaet location is not yet known.

The ultimate aim of this entire work is to find a variety that will net the producer a greater income for his labor, Mr. Carter stated. The projects will be carried on as soon as the weather permits.

CITY COUNCIL REDUCES TAX RATE TO 60 CENTS

Is Fourth Reduction In As Many Years; Will Save Taxpayers Approximately $1,844.

ORDERS CLEAN-UP WEEK

A reduction of eight cents in the city tax rate, or from 68 cents to 60 cents on each $100 valuation of property, was declared at the regular monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, held Monday night.

This is the fourth reduction in the tax rate for the Oakland residents in as many years, it was stated, and will save the taxpayers of the town approximately $1,844 during the year.

Thirty-five cents was levied for municipal needs such as officers' salaries, street lighting, street and water works maintenance and 25 cents for paying off bonds and for interest coupons. The tax rate in 1925 was $1.25. This was lowered in 1930 to $1.00, in 1931 to 90 cents, in 1932 to 68 cents.

The reduction was made in spite of a decrease in real and personal property valuation, and the elimination of $1,240 from the County Commissioners.

The Mayor has proclaimed clean-up week from May 17 to May 20, and is asking all citizens of Oakland to thoroughly clean up their properties so that the city may present a good appearance on Memorial Day, Tuesday, May 30.

All trash will be carried away in trucks hired by the City Council and must be placed in a convenient place for the drivers on Wednesday or Thursday, May 17 or 18. No ashes will be hauled, Mayor Stemple stated, and no containers will be returned unless specifically requested.

No More Scouts Will Be Enrolled Until End of Summer Camp

No more boys will be received into the Oakland Scout troop until after the summer encampment, George H. Hanst, scoutmaster, has announced.

This is an annual ruling, passed so that boys will have no opportunity to join the organization for the one purpose of attending the camp.

The troop now numbers 58, including six associate scouts now away at school, and should the entire troop attend camp it will be much overcrowded, it was stated.

For this reason a close check is being kept on attendance, dues, and scout activities and the records of the individual members will be examined by the troop committee before they will be permitted to attend the annual outing July 30 to August 14. The barracks at camp will accommodate only forty.

Lesson for May 7

JESUS FACES THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:32-52.

GOLDEN TEXT—And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem. Luke 9:51.

PRIMARY TOPIC — Doing Hard Things.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Doing Hard Things.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Cost of True Greatness.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Greatness Through Sacrificial Service.

I. Jesus Foretells His Death and Resurrection (vv. 32-34).

This is the third time he makes this prediction. This time it was while on his way to Jerusalem.

1. Jesus going before the disciples (v. 32). Jesus was going with the full consciousness of the awful tragedy of the cross before him, the treachery of Judas, the fiery persecutions of the priests and scribes, the unjust judgment, the delivery to Pontius Pilate, the mocking, the scourging, the crown of thorns, the cross between malefactors, the nails, the spear—all were spread before him. The notion that the death of Christ was incidental to his career is most fallacious. The very purpose of the incarnation was the vicarious death (Heb. 2:14).

2. The amazed disciples (v. 32). His utterances and demeanor filled their minds with perplexity and their hearts with awe.

3. The crowd followed in fear (v. 32, R. V.). The strange atmosphere and happenings struck them with awe and fear.

4. Jesus instructed the twelve (vv. 33, 34). In this state of confusion Jesus called them to himself and patiently instructed them as to "what things should happen unto him."

a. "Delivered unto the chief priests and scribes."

b. "They shall condemn him to death and deliver him to the Gentiles."

c. "They shall mock, scourge, spit upon, and kill him."

d. "The third day he shall rise again."

II. The Ambitious Request of James and John (vv. 35-45).

1. What it was (vv. 35-37). It was for a place of pre-eminence in the Kingdom. According to Matthew, their mother was the intercessor (Matt. 20:20). Christ had told them of the awful agony of the cross and also of the glory which should follow. It was not entirely for their glory that they made this request, but because of their personal desire to be with their Lord.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 38-45).

a. To James and John (vv. 38-40).

(1) Their misconception rebuked. "Ye know not what ye ask."

(2) Positions of glory in Christ's Kingdom are earned, not obtained through favor or arbitrary assignment. The way to honor is through suffering. The cup which they were to drink was all that they were to suffer because of his crucifixion.

b. To the ten disciples (vv. 41-45).

(1) Their displeasure (v. 41). They were displeased with the request of James and John, because they were not free from selfish ambition.

(2) True greatness declared (vv. 42-45). To minister to others is greater than to be ministered unto (v. 43). Among the Gentile nations greatness was conceded to those who exercised authority over others. The highest standard of Christ's Kingdom is to forget self in devoted service to others, even to the giving of one's life.

III. Jesus Cures Blind Bartimaeus (vv. 46-52).

Though already bearing the weight of his cross, he had time for gracious deeds. Blind Bartimaeus received his sight.

1. Bartimaeus' request (vv. 46, 47). As soon as he heard that Jesus was passing by he cried to him for help. The fact that he addressed him as the Son of David showed that he recognized his Messiahship.

2. Rebuked by the multitude (v. 48). This rebuke provoked even a more earnest cry from Bartimaeus.

3. The blessing granted (vv. 49-52). Though Jesus knew his desire, he wished him definitely to commit himself. Note the progress in the experience of Bartimaeus.

a. A blind beggar (v. 46). b. His cry for mercy (v. 47). c. The persistence in his cry (v. 48). d. His response to the call of Jesus (vv. 49, 50). e. His specific request (v. 51). f. He immediately received his sight (v. 52).

How quickly an earnest soul may pass from sore need to jubilant discipleship.

Hypocrisy

I saw about a peck of counterfeit dollars once. Did I go to the window and throw away all my good dollars? No. Yet you reject Christianity because there are hypocrites, or counterfeit Christians.—W. E. Biederwolf.

Show Them Christ

Let every preacher show the people a Crucified Savior and may it never be said by any who sit under your ministry, "Where are the prints of the nails?"

$2,181,335.20 State Gas Tax Available For County Road Maintenance From First County Levy After April 21, 1933

State Roads Commission Will Either Maintain County Roads Or Pay Interest and Maturing County Road Bonds Or Build New Roads To Extent Of Each County's Share Of Lateral Road 1½c. Gas Tax Plus Federal Aid When Federal Aid Is Appropriated Again This Year.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO RECOMMEND DETAILS OF EXPENDITURES—PRESENT COUNTY ROAD PERSONNEL TO BE EMPLOYED FIRST.

Governor Ritchie on the 21st of April signed the State Administration Gasoline Tax Bill and so put its provisions into effect throughout the State. The new law makes available $2,181,335.20, or seventy per cent. of the 1½c. lateral road gasoline tax, for (1) the payment of interest or retirement of county road bonds, (2) the maintenance of county roads, (3) the construction of additional new roads in any county when maintenance costs and road debt service does not exhaust the county's usual share of the 1½c. lateral road gas tax.

A part of any county's share of this tax may also be spent to maintain municipal streets and to pay debt service on municipal street bonds under an allocation to be recommended by the County Commissioners.

The State Roads Commission will begin maintaining the county road systems and paying the county road debt service in each Maryland county at the start of each county's usual fiscal or administrative year, which begins with the next county levy after the final enactment of this law on April 21, 1933.

The tax relief possible through State payment of county road maintenance and county road debt service could not have been given in any Maryland county before October 1, 1933, when the appropriations made in the State budget passed by the 1933 Legislature begin and which is the commencement of the next State fiscal year, except through amendment of the present State Roads Commission's budget for the current State fiscal year. Such amendment will be immediately initiated by the State Roads Commission and Governor Ritchie has expressed his approval, which will allow the money now accumulating under the 1½c. lateral road gas tax to be expended from the date of the next levy in any Maryland county in the same manner that this fund will be expended for the twenty-four months of the next two State fiscal years which follow October 1, 1933, under the terms of the new State budget and new road law.

County Commissioners to Recommend Expenditures

The new State law for the first time gives the Boards of County Commissioners of the twenty-three counties of the State a definitely determined status in connection with the expenditure of State Roads appropriations and specifically authorizes County Commissioners to make the original recommendations covering the expenditure of the county's share of the 1½c. lateral road gas tax in the following language quoted from Section 7(a) of the new law:

"Prior to the time each year when the annual tax levy is made in each county, and upon the second Monday of each year, and thereafter from time to time, the State Roads Commission shall seek the recommendations of the County Commissioners or other duly constituted public authorities of the several counties having jurisdiction over roads and streets thereof with respect to the following matters, to wit:

(1) What part of the funds allocated to the county under the provisions of this section shall be expended for the construction of Lateral Roads as part of the State Road system;

(2) What part shall be expended for the construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of county roads or bridges or municipal streets;

(3) What part shall be expended for debt service;

(4) What specific roads shall be constructed, reconstructed, or maintained under the provisions of this section, and what methods and material shall be used therein and the estimated cost thereof;

(5) The manner and amount in which funds allocated for the construction, reconstruction or maintenance of county roads shall be divided and expended in, upon and with respect to the several municipalities, sections and roads of said county; and

(6) The base rate of pay to be paid for unskilled labor employed by the State Roads Commission in the said county in connection with the construction, reconstruction or maintenance of county roads and municipal streets.

"The County Commissioners or other duly constituted public road or street authorities of the several counties and municipalities shall have the right to submit at any time, and from time to time, recommendations with respect to the foregoing."

State Roads Commission Has Final Determination

The State Roads Commission has final determination of the engineering, cost, allocation, construction, material, location and other recommendations of the Boards of County Commissioners, but is required for the first time by the new law to take formal action and to notify any Board of County Commissioners in detail whenever the State Roads Commission is unable to concur in the recommendation of a Board of County Commissioners in the following language also quoted from Section 7(a) of the new law:

"In the event that the State Roads Commission is not able to concur in the recommendations of the County Commissioners or other duly constituted local road or street authorities, it shall notify the recommending authority in detail as to the reasons why such approval is withheld, and the recommending authority shall thereupon, if requested, be entitled to a formal hearing before the State Roads Commission before final action is taken with respect to such recommendations."

Each county will receive approximately the following amount for county road maintenance, debt service on county road bonds, or new road construction under the provisions of the new law, as stated in column 1, hereunder, and the amount to be so received is an amount which represents the number of cents in the county tax rate appearing in column 2. This fund is distributed between the counties as the total public road mileage of each county compares with that of the entire State. In addition to the proceeds of the 1½c. lateral road gas tax, stated in the following columns, regular Federal aid for road construction in an expected amount of $895,409.60 when received this year from the Federal government will be spent in the counties for the same purposes that each county's share of the lateral road gas tax is expended, and this fund will add approximately forty per cent. to the amount available for direct tax reduction in each of the Maryland counties:

The State Roads Commission is writing the Boards of County Commissioners for each of the twenty-three counties of the State this week, asking their recommendations as required by the new law. Upon receipt of these recommendations the State Roads Commission will arrange conferences with the Boards of Commissioners at the latter's convenience. It is expected that many of the meetings will be held at the county seats, particularly as the details of the employment of present county road personnel, the use of present county road equipment, and the cost, location and type of maintenance can all more advantageously be discussed in the county affected.

A second statement dealing with this important subject matter, including more details of administration, will be available at an early date.

MENCKEN-DEWEY DEBATE COSTS OF EDUCATION

Should taxes be lowered at the expense of many of the so-called "frills" of education? Both sides of this popular question are brought to light in a debate which appears in the current Rotary Magazine, between H. L. Mencken, editor of The American Mercury, and John Dewey, professor of philosophy at Columbia University.

The Mencken Arguments

"There can be no doubt that educational reforms of recent years were urged in perfect good faith, and that they were all worthwhile. Unfortunately, some evils came in with these goods as is apparently inevitable in human affairs.

"The New Pedagogy, in fact, was mainly buncombe. There was, of course, some sense in it, but not very much. The psychological data upon which in was based were absurd, and the miracles that it was supposed to achieve were imaginary. Children came out of the new pedagogical Taj Mahals no bettter prepared for life than their parents had come out of the little red schoolhouse, and the new Model A pedagogue, with his polychrome graphs and bold hypotheses, turned out to be scarcely as competent as the Model T ma'am of the last generation, with her dog's-eared speller and her ready rattan.

"Some of the more advanced pedagogues began to think of themselves not only as scientists of a novel and subtle sort, but also as prophets. The chief prophets of the movement went to great lengths. They built larger and larger schoolhouses, with fewer and fewer classrooms and more and more gymnasia, laboratories, ateliers and shops. They invented multitudinous new species of 'experts' and put them gloriously to work. They sweated the poor schoolma'ams during the hot summers with interminable courses in quack 'sciences.'

"They called for larger and larger contributions from the taxpayer, and damned him boldly whenever he cried for quarter. And in their topmost ranks they dreamed voluptuously of adding a secretary of education to the cabinet.

"All this went on until the depression struck the country, and budgets began to go unbalanced. There ensued a somewhat bilious inquiry into the whole pedagogical hocus-pocus. It was found that the brethren were getting away with nearly three billions annually (or maybe even four billions), and that they were planning to demand much more.

"It was found that the cost of 'educating' a pupil a year, which had been $15.00 in 1880, had soared to nearly $100, and that it was still going up. It was found that this vast outpouring of money had already reduced hundreds of American counties and towns to bankruptcy, and was seriously imperilling the solvency of whole states."

The Dewey Arguments

"It is proposed to eliminnte from the schools such things as health service, work with wood, metal, tools, domestic arts, music, drawing and dramatics on the ground that they are 'frills' nnd costly frills at that. I do not question the desirability of every legitimate economy in the conduct of the schools. I deny absolutely that saving money at the expense of the lives of young people, now and in the future, is economy.

"Economy is something more than reducing expenditure of funds. If it were not, it would be economy to save the money now spent in buying food, shelter and clothing for the millions of unemployed. It is as heartless and as foolish to starve the minds and charcters of the young as it is to starve the bodies of their parents. The real question is not economy versus waste, but whether things scornfully named frills are or are not important things in the education of mind and brain; whether they are luxuries or whether they are necessities in the present state of society.

"Early in its history the United States committed itself to a system of education for all, conducted at public expense. This was not accidental but was a manifestation of our fundamental national faith. Our educational system has always had enemies but they have been those who had no faith in any part of our democratic social experiment.

"The economic crisis has encournged these people to come back to the attack. They make a great fuss about 'frills.' Their real opposition is to the belief in human capacity, the belief in the right of every human being to have a chance to develop, the desire of parents that their children shall have better opportunities than they enjoyed—the beliefs that created the tax-supported American public school system. Show me a man who is active in attacking our school because of their 'frills' and I will show you either a large tax-payer who sends his own children to a private school or else one who disbelieves in the whole democratic endeavor.

"Imagine every study, every activity, every piece of equipment and facility, that is today condemned as a frill, eliminated from the school. Imagine that the schools have gone back to what their critics still believe to be the essentials. How attractive would these schools be?

"It is absurd to suppose that schools could remain unchanged during the tremendous social expansions and reorganizations of the last forty years, as it is to suppose that the old local grist-mills, saw-mills and blacksmith shops could continue to serve new conditions, or that the old dirt roads could meet the needs of an automobile age. There is no measure, fixed and unchanging from age to age, by which to decide what is a frill and what an essential in education. The only true gauge is social conditions and needs.

"Teachers and schools must indeed do what they can to rescue communities from the danger of bankruptcy through excessive taxation. But the expense of even the exrecences that could be lopped enough is nothing compared with political frills in job-holding and in complication of taxing agencies. Let the gentlemen who are making a drive on the schools turn toward extrnvagances and corruption in politics, and not take it out on helpless children."

THE YOUNG FORESTERS

The success of the Conservation Corps, recruited from the idle young men of the cities for work in the National and State forest reserves, seems destined to depend largely upon the question of maintaining discipline. From various stations where the men are being assembled and given a preliminary training and hardening in preparation for the rough work they will have to perform, come reports that large numbers have been released because of complaints of homesickness and appeals from parents, while others have unceremoniously deserted.

If this condition exists during the first days of enlistment, while the novelty of camp life in the woods is still fresh, there is foreseen the probability that the drudgery and lonesomeness of the daily routine in the forest will pall on many more. The greatest difficulty encountered by the military officers in charge of training is that, while the men are enlisted with a six-months' contract to work for the Government and are being organized on semi-military lines, there are no regulations under which discipline and respect for the enlistment contract can be enforced.

The men are not subject to service punishment for breaches of conduct, or even for desertion. The men who are being aided in this way have not been doing work of any kind, let alone hard, manual labor, and they have been entirely free from restraint or discipline of any kind. It is not surprising that many of them will find it difficult to accept the rigors of the new life of hard work for subsistence. They were getting along before with some kind of living without work.

It has been suggested that, since punishment is taboo, interest in the forestry work and good conduct be stimulated by a reward, such as increased pay for deserving effort. It is clear that if these young men are to be kept contentedly on lonely jobs in remote places, various forms of sports and amusements must be provided for the hours of rest that will have to be filled in. In the final analysis much will depend upon the ability of camp managers, not only to interest the men in their work, but to obtain obedience and maintain discipline.—Washington Post.

Milk Soups for Economy

Does a quart of milk a day seem more than your child will drink? Is a pint more than you yourself will drink? Nutritionists say your child needs the quart and you the pint, especially if you are on an economy diet, hut of course you don't have to drink all that milk. Use some of it in soups, some in cooking vegetables, some in gravies and sauces and in desserts. Use it especially in soups, however, suggests the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

There are several reasons why milk soups are a good idea for the family that must cut food costs to the bone. With milk, soup can be made to contain all the food values necessary for nn adequate meal. This is especially true of chowders, which are filling, like other soups, and are also much more "lasting."

An excellent way to make milk-vegetable soups is to cook the raw grated or chopped vegetables in the milk. A soup of mixed vegetables, or a chowder, should stand for a short time before serving so the flavors may blend.

The following recipes give pleasant combinations of milk and vegetables which will be good for the whole family:

Fish Chowder

One and one-half pounds fresh cod, haddock or any other large fish, 2 cups diced potatoes, 1 cup diced carrots, 1 quart water, ¼ pound snlt pork, diced; 1 onion, diced; 2 tablespoons flour, 1 pint milk, salt, pepper. Cut the lish into small pieces and remove the skin and hones. Cook fish, potatoes and carrots in the water for 15 minutes. Fry the salt pork until crisp, remove from the fat, cook the onion in the fat for a few minutes, add the flour, stir until well blended, nnd add the milk. Add this mixture to the fish and vegetables, add the salt and pepper, stir frequently and simmer for 10 minutes longer. Add more seasonlng, if necessary, and serve over crackers.

Corn Soup

Two cups canned crushed corn, 1 cup water, 1 quart milk, 1 onion, cut in half, 1 tablespoon flour, 4 tablespoons hutter, salt to taste, pepper.

Combine the corn and water, cook for ten minutes and stir constantly to keep from sticking to the pan. Press the corn through a strainer. Heat the milk and the onion in a double boiler and thicken with the flour and fat, which have been well blended. Add the corn pulp, snlt and pepper. Heat, remove the onion and serve. Buttered pop corn makes an interesting substitute for croutons to serve with corn soup.

Quick Turnip or Carrot Soup

One quart milk, 1 onion cut in half, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 2 cups grated raw turnip or carrot, 1 teaspoon salf, chopped parsley. Heat the milk in a double boiler with the onion, add the flour and fat, which have been well blended, then the turnip, or carrot, and salt. Cook until the vegetable is tender, or for about 10 minutes, and remove the onion. Sprinkle chopped parsley over the soup just before serving.

A Governor Who Never Governed

EARLY MARYLAND'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM BEING BOSSED BY A POET

By B. HOWELL GRISWOLD, JR.

(In the Baltimore Sunday Sun, April 16, 1933.)

There was once appointed by a King of England to be Governor of Maryland a man distinguished in his time but like most of his contemporaries little known today. He was reputed to be the illegitimate son of Shakespeare, and he himself encouraged the report of his own bar sinister. He was a poet who succeeded Ben Jonson as Poet Laureate of England. He was a soldier knighted for bravery on the field of battle. A courtier "possessed of a pleasing address, a handsome person, of buoyant spirits and ready wit," and he was a friend of kings and princes and an intimate of an unhappy Queen of England. He was a playwright (the most popular of his day) who first introduced the word "opera" to the English language, and scenery and women to the English stage. And last, but not least, he was a prisoner whose life was saved by the poet Milton, and who in turn saved the life of the prisoner Milton.

All that remains of this colorful personality now lies buried in the Poets' Corner, Westminster Abbey. Over his tomb is the inscription (borrowed from that of his nighbor in death and predecessor in life):

O rare Sir William Davenant!

Among the old Calvert papers is a pamphlet of 1653 entitled: "The Lord Baltemore's Case Concerning the Province of Maryland" giving "certaine Reasons of State" why Parliament should not impeach his rights. In this document, "Lord Baltemore" presents evidence of his adherence, not to the crown but to the Commonwealth.

Incidentally his brief further refers to the area of our now sovereign State as "so remote and wild a place as Mariland" (sic) and impolitely to its then inhabitants as "such necessitous, factious people as usually new Plantations consist of for the most parte."

How different this is from the courteous and inviting language of Lord Baltimore's first prospectus and bid for adventurers issued some nineteen years before, in which he sets forth "how Englishmen may become Angels, the King's dominions be extended, and the adventurers attain Land and Gear; together with other advantages of that Sweet Land." But today, even bankers have learned the difference between a prospectus and a retrospectus.

All of this is in passing. The portion of the document that is of present concern is annexed as a fitting climax to Lord Baltimore's brief; it is entitled: "A true Copy of a Commission from the Late King's eldest Sonne to Mr. William Davenant" to dispossess Lord Baltimore of "the said Province because of his adherence to the Commonwealth." One notes from the document the scrupulous care with which Lord Baltimore's lawyers follow the custom of the times, and refer to the heir to the throne (later King Charles II) as "the late King's eldest Sonne" and to our "Governor" as "Mr." not "Sir" William Davenant.

The commission sets forth that:

> Whereas Lord Baltimoredoth visibly adhere to the Rebells of England, and admits all kinde of schismatics and sectaries and other ill-affected persons to the said Plantations (of Maryland)know ye therefore that we, reposing speciall trust and confidence in the courage loyalty and affection to Us of you Sir Wm. Davenant, do appoint you our Lieutenant Governor of the said Province or Plantations of Maryland, with all the Forts, Castles Plantations, Ports and all other Strengths thereunto belonging.

Then follows an interesting paragraph. This paragraph, as originally drafted, specifically denies any intent "to prejudice the rights of the Proprietary in the Soyle." But there is an insertion (on the side of the document) referred to by asterisk, which states emphatically: "This clause includes Soyle and all." The directness of the statement and the absence of the customary legal phraseology justifies the assumption that the insertion was actually made by or at the insistence of the indignant "late King's eldest Sonne."

Davenant, of course, is not a current discovery, for several Maryland historians have dealt with him, and from English sources much more is available. His mother was the wife of John Davenant, a wealthy vintner of Oxford—who owned Crown Inn—a man not merely wealthy, but apparently of some ability, for he became Mayor of Oxford. It is known that William Shakespeare, on his way from Stratford-on-Avon to London, frequently visited with the Davenants. He was evidently a close friend, for when young William Davenant was baptized at the Crown Inn on March 3, 1606, Shakespeare became his godfather.

However, the statement that he was the great poet's illegitimate son is generally decried today. The mid-Victorians did not like the idea, and in "The Lives of the Poets Laureate" the author brings forward as justifiable argument the fine character of the mother of Davenant, but adds (in a manner delightfully mid-Victorian) that the idea "jars with our well-grounded belief in the irreproachable character of our great national dramatist."

Young Davenant's first attempt at composition was an "Ode in Remembrance of Master William Shakespeare." He was only fairly well educated. He attended the grammar school of his native parish, and in 1621 matriculated at Lincoln College, but did not obtain a degree. On leaving the university, he became page to the famous Frances, Duchess of Richmond a romantic creature—who aspired to an alliance with the King and thereafter refused to eat at the table of a subject.

Later Davenant resided in the household of Sir Fulke-Greville, Lord Brooke, the poet and philosopher, and friend of Sir Philip Sidney. Lord Brooke, while Davenant was a member of his household, was stabbed to death by one of his servants and Davenant was left without money or position. He set himself seriously to literary work, became the literary and fashionable man of his day, and was constantly about the court. He wrote many poems of a miscellaneous character, but his real predilection was for the theatre. After the death of Ben Jonson in 1637, by the Queen's aid, he was made Poet Laureate of England.

But the age was not destined to continue as one of poetry and plays. The struggle between the King and Commons was approaching a crisis and Davenent, the courtier, naturally allied himself with the King's interest. Even at this time he was evidently something more than a versifier and a man about the courts, for he was accused in 1641 of sharing in a plot to induce the army to desert Parliament. He sought safety in flight, was brought back to London and released on bail, a second time attempted to escape and again was captured. Eventually he managed to evade his jailers and joined his friends, Queen Henrietta Marie, the young Prince and their adherents in France.

As the King's affairs became more and more menacing Davenant dropped his pen and picked up the sword. In September, 1643, after a series of adventures including imprisonments, releases and escapes, he received the honor of knighthood for services at the siege of Gloucester. Charles' fortunes collapsed and Davenant fled to France. Yet neither war, nor rumors of war, nor imprisonments, nor escapes, nor adventures with royalty could stop the flow of his facile pen. In the army, in prison, in exile, he poured out his wit, if not his soul, in plays or in verse.

Still this outlet to emotions could not wholly satisfy. Life in France became too inactive, and his earlier biographers say that in 1650 (Charles' head had fallen and his widow and his son were in exile) Davenant "projected a plan for leading a body of workmen to Virginia, a scheme greatly encouraged by the Queen.

This is interesting, for it is at this point, apparently, that we in Maryland became interested in him. It is evident that his earlier biographers missed the significance of his voyage. Present information indicates that if the copy of the commission of Davenant now in possession of the Maryland Historical Society is correct, the trip was something more than that of an adventurer leading a body of workmen to Virginia. It becomes evident that he was on his way to Maryland (probably by way of Virginia) to carry out the warrant of his Prince and patron, and to assert his position as "Lieutenant-Governor" of Maryland.

What were the causes that led to his appointment by that exile who already called himself Charles II, although his realm refused to admit him until the Cromwellians were ousted some years later? The best approach, of course, is to sum up the conditions in England and Maryland at this time.

Davenant's commission read: Given at our Court in Jersey the 6/16 day of February, 1649/50, in the second Yeare of Our Reigne"; that is February 16, 1650, by our dating method. Charles I had been beheaded in January, 1649. Cromwell had later marched from victory in Ireland, and the future Charles II had retired to the Island of Jersey. He was in negotiation with Scotland, urging the Scotch to a renewed effort to put a Scotch Stuart back on the throne of England. The negotiations brought him to Scotland and to the ill-omened battlefield of Dunbar and the disaster at Worcester.

But the nttention of the twenty-year-old "eldest Sonne of the late King, Charles I," as the Puritans referred to him, or "King Charles II," as he was known to the royalists, had not centered alone upon the crown of England. His attention had been called to Virginia and Maryland and, moved by what he had heard, he apparently determined to attempt to assist Governor Berkeley, of Virginia, who had recognized him as King, and to avenge himself for what he considered the disloyalty of Lord Baltimore.

It was worth his while to protect his loyal followers in Virginia and to control these two colonies, and for lack of a better tool, perhaps, he determined to appoint and did appoint as "Lieutenant-Governor" of Maryland, Sir William Davenant, his friend—an adventurous spirit and a soldier of fortune. Furthermore, he intended to make it worth while, for it was not to be merely ports and forts that his "Governor" was to command, but Davenant was to be entitled to "Soyle and all."

There had been radically varying views in the American colonies. The Puritans of New England had continuously sided with the Puritans of the mother country. Governor Berkeley of Virginia, on the other hand, was a royalist-Governor who attempted to support the crown through all of its troubles.

Lord Baltimore, of course, was beset with difficulties. He had been a close friend of Charles I, had obtained his charter and his rights from him, had attempted to establish a religious sanctuary in Maryland, primarily for Roman Catholics, and held what was in those days a very advanced view—namely, the wisdom of the separation of State and church.

But during the rapidly changing scenes in England, the Calverts must have appeared as somewhat shifty fellows. All England knew that George Calvert had been befriended by Charles I. His son Cecilius, too, had proclaimed his loyalty, but later in the presentation of his "Case Concerning the Province of Maryland," Cecilius asserted his loyalty, not to the King, but to the Commonwealth, and added: "It is notoriously known that, by his (Lord Baltimore's) express direction, his officers and the people there did adhere to the interest of the Commonwealth, when all other English Plantations (except New England) declared against the Parliament." He adds, as an argument persuasive to a Puritan Parliament, that he "had received their friends in time of their distresse." So much for adherence to the Commonwealth.

But this view of the Lords Baltimore as "shifty" politicians does not do them justice. It overlooks, as has been indicated, what was perhaps their main purpose, namely, that Maryland was to be a "land of sanctuary for men of all creeds."

What were the "acts of disloyalty" on the part of Lord Baltimore of which Charles II complained? They are cited in the commission which he issued to Davenant. They referred to Lord Baltimore's "visible adherence to the Rebells of England," his "admission of all kinds of schismatics and sectariesinto the Plantations of Maryland," and finally "the very great prejudice to our service thereby, and very great danger to Our Plantations in Virginia, who have carried themselves with so much loyalty and fidelity to the King, our father of blessed memory, and to us."

What was the basis of the charge that he had "admitted all kinde of schismatics and sectaries in" Maryland? In 1642 the royalist had withdrawn from Parliament and Charles I had raised his standard at Nottingham. In 1643 Parliament had passed an ordinace for the sequestration of properties of the King's adherents, doubtless causing no little uneasiness in the minds of men like Lord Baltimore. At all events, we find that Leonard Calvert himself in this year had returned to England and had appointed Giles Brent to act for him during his absence.

In this same significant year (1643) the Virginia Assembly had passed an act requiring all ministers to conform to the orders and constitution of the Church of England. As a result Lord Baltimore had extended an invitation to the Puritans of Virginia to change their residence and move to Maryland. The response was not great, but eventually about 300 of them established a settlement which they named Providence, at the mouth of the Severn at what is now Eastport.

We now see what Charles II meant when he charged Lord Baltimore with having "admitted into the Plantations of Maryland all kinds of schismatics and sectaries." The "adherence to the Rebells of England" traces to the fact that in 1649, when news of the death of Charles I had reached Maryland, Governor Stone was absent and Thomas Greene, his appointee and Vice-Governor, following the example of Governor Berkeley of Virginia, proclaimed Charles II the lawful sovereign; Governor Stone, on his return, set aside this action and Lord Baltimore had supported Governor Stone.

And so it was that from the Isle of Jersey Charles II issued his warrant to Sir William Davenant. But that poet-warrior was not destined to see Maryland. His ship was seized in the Channel by a Parliamentary man-of-war, which took the new "Governor" back to the Isle of Wight and thence to the Tower to await trial for high treason. One historian pleasantly indicates that Henrietta Maria, Queen of Charles I, was on this vessel with Davenant on her way to visit the Neales of Maryland. This is not only important but delightful—if true—but there seems to be no justification for the statement.

In London, Davenant was brought before the Council for trial on the charge that he and other leading loyalists had been concerned in a scheme to bring a French army to England in 1641. Evidently the Council at the time did not know of the King's commission to Davenant and that they had before them the King's "Governor of Maryland."

His case coming up before a somewhat tolerant committee of Parliament, as a wit of the day remarked, they gave him "the noes of the House because he had no nose of his own"—a reference to the deplorable fact that Davennnt's nose, whether due to a wound or to disease, was a matter for jest. Still he was kept in prison.

In November, 1652, however, the commission to him as Maryland "Governor" came to light, but the Council, after consideration, did no worse than return him to prison. In 1654 he made an appeal to the protector to consider his case as a whole, and he was released June 22, 1655. Gosse says it is believed that the personal intercession of Milton led to this result. Another account is that he was released by the desire of two Aldermen of York, once Davenant's prisoners, whom he had allowed to escape.

However, he was released and shortly thereafter published "Gondibert," the work on which his fame mainly rests. He gayly renewed his interest in the theatre despite the continued reign of the Puritans. Somehow, indeed he persuaded the Government to permit him to open Rutland House in Charter House Yard—not to the hated "plays" but to "representations" which the ingenious Sir William called "operas" as a term which even a Puritan could not regard as frivolous. Thus was the word first introduced into the English language as applicable to a stage performance.

Instead of dodging trouble thereafter, in 1659 Davenant again found himself in prison for complicity in Sir George Booth's revolt. But his fortune quickly shifted in the following year when Charles II was restored. We now find Davenant in high favor and influential in saving the life of Milton, who nine years before was reputed to have saved Davenant's life.

IT WAS DAVENANT WHO INTRODUCED WOMEN TO THE ENGLISH STYLE—NOT WHOLLY TO THE AUDIENCE'S APPROVAL

HE SUCCEEDED BEN JONSON AS POLT LAUREATE

He flourished under royal favor for eight years at his new theatre at Lincoln's Inn Field, which he called the "Duke." In the year this theatre was opened a royal patent was obtained which permitted women's parts to be taken by women "in order to purge the stage and provide harmless amusemen." Davenant is thus credited with the first important appearance of a woman—Mrs. Coleman—on the stage. Critics did not like this departure, but, so far as his own personal fortunes were concerned, the wisdom of his introduction of women to the stage was subsequently proved by the fact that Davenant profited handsomely from his plays. He became the most popular dramtist of his day. In Pepys' diary are several favorable comments, such as:

July 2nd, 1661. Went to Sir William Davenant's opera, this being the 4th day that it hath begnn, and the first that I have seenthe King being come, the scene opened; which indeed is very fine and magnificent and well acted, all but the Eunuche, who was so much out that he was hissed off the stage.

During these years of his prosperity he began to "improve upc.n' the plays of Shakespeare, in order, he said, to make them acceptable to the public. Curiously, we find that Davenant's last work in company with Dryden, was to travesty his godfather's play, "The Tempest." Davenant died April 2, 1668, and Pepys, the snob, commented on his funeral:

Here were many coaches and six horses, and many hackneys, that made it look, methought, as if it were the funeral of a poor poet. Perhaps the adjective was justified various meanings.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The Jewish captivity in Babylon was the direct result of the transgression of Divine law. Despite repeated warnings by prophets raised up to meet national emergencies, whose burning messages called kings and people back from their wanderings to Jehovah's way, idolatry, greed, lust and profanity grew worse and worse until there was no remedy.

However, Jehovah, who never utterly forsook his people, heard their cries and lamentations by the waters of Babylon and after seventy years of exile permitted them to return to Jerusalem and rebuild their city and temple. The Books of Ezra, Nehemiah and Esther deal with the period of the restoration of the Jews.

Two distinct divisions appear in this part of the history of Israel, the first covering a span of twenty years, 536-516 B. C., in which, under Zerrubabel the Governor and Joshua, the Priest, they rebuilt the Temple, the center of their national life. Two of the minor prophets, Haggai and Zechariah, belong especially to this period. Haggai hurls a fierce arraignment against the careless and indifferent, who dwell in ceiled houses, while the House of the Lord lies waste. He declares that they have put their wages in "bags with holes" because they have neglected the Temple and its worship. "Therefore the heavens over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit." Can it be that our bank failures and the low ebb of our economic resources are at all connected with our crass materialism and our forgetfulness of God? Here is food for thought!

The second span of this restoration period covers 457-432 B. C., twenty-five years in which, under Nehemiah the Governor, and Ezra the Priest, they rebuilt the wall and restored Jerusalem as a fortified city. Malachi prophesied during this period.

Great things were happening in the Gentile world. Athens was at the acropolis of her glory. Socrates taught the Athenian youth the doctrine of the one God, and Pericles gave to the Greek people their noblest laws. In India Buddha brooded over the miseries of humanity, and sought deliverance through annihilation of personality by his doctrine of re-absorption into the world soul. In China, Confusius inoculated his doctrine of reverence for past and veneration of ancestors.

Ezra had a good ancestry. He was the great-grandson of Hillcish the priest who 160 years before had helped in the reformation inaugurated by King Joash. He played a very important part in the restoration of the Jews to their homeland. With the help of Nehemiah, and probably the prophet Malachi, he re-organized the Temple worship. According to Jewish tradition, he collected and edited the books of the Old Testament Canon, and indeed was the author of some of the books, making use of various historical journals, chronicles and registers.

Due credit must be given Cyrus, King of Persia, for making possible by his decrees the carrying on of this work by the Jews. His proclamation not only aroused to action the willing workers among the children of the Captivity, but also brought into the treasury of Ezra silver and gold for the expenses of the enterprise. And so the work went on in spite of enemies and hindrances, "for the Lord had made them joyful and turned the heart of the King of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel."

MT. LAKE PARK

The Present Day

This will go down in history as the Period of Loose Talk and Suspicion. Revolution is frequently talked, if not advised; certainly it is predicted. We bandy our neighbors' affairs as though engaged in a game of battledore and shuttlecock. We discuss a friend's personal affairs as though we were entirely familiar with them. We voice criticisms of our business associates, our physician, our banker and our preacher. The Lord knows that the disclosures of methods of high finance of the last few months have some-what shaken our preconceived notions of ethics and honesty, but notwithstanding, we should grant that the other fellow has at least as much honesty as we have; that all lawyers are not crooks; that the merchant that sells you your sugar now is just as honest as in former days; that your banker, in whom you have had confidence for many years, is just as honest now as he was then and that your doctor and your druggist are just as careful now as they were in years past in writing and filling prescriptions. What we mean is, that many may have made mistakes—mistakes of the head and not of the heart—but old fashioned honesty still remains. Suspicion and loose talk will not help any community recover its normal prosperity.

Why Not a Wild Flower Show?

Garrett county could put on as good a show, if not so extensive, as Winchester. At least it would be more novel. For while nearly every one has seen apple and peach trees in bloom, there are many in sections of the country other than this, who have never seen the beautiful wax-like bloom of the rhododendron in its native setting. There are dozens of sections in this country where this king of all mountain shrubs grows in such profusion as to form almost impenetrable thickets, bearing thousands of magnificant blooms. Then there is the mountain laurel, or spoon wood, with its showy saucer or bowl-shaped flowers, delighting the eye of both native son and visitor. These shrubs are at their best at the season of the year when it is most pleasant to visit our mountain top. A little advertising might do wonders in inaugurating "The Garrett County Rhododendron and Mountain Laurel Festival."

Street Lighting Curtailed

The Town Council, after much consideration, at its last meeting passed an order curtailing the number of street lights temporarily. No doubt this action will cause some little inconvenience and give rise to some criticism. We believe, however, that on careful consideration the wisdom of the action will be apparent. Just now the cash of the town is not available for use. It is believed this is only a temporary condition. Consequently, the resolution cutting the lighting system fifty percent calls for only a thirty-day period. At the end of that time it is hoped all matters will be adjusted satisfactorily and that further curtailment will not be necessary. It was thought the part of wisdom to take the above action rather than enforce payment of unpaid taxes at a time when such enforcement would work a great hardship. As a great man said: "We must all hang together or we may hang separately." After all a fifty percent light cut in the summer months is but a minor worry.

Loch Lynn has also found it necessary to greatly reduce the number of her street lights, and for the same reason as that given above.

Local Ball Team Wins

The base ball season is not to be allowed to pass unnoticed here. Mountain Lake Park has a ball nine and started the season by a win. On last Saturday it played Deer Park and took that team over by a score of 14 to 11. With the support the team merits we believe it will give a good account of itself, as it has the material for a winning club. It it open for games with the surrounding towns.

Welfare Headquarters Opened

Registration headquarters have been established here in the Council chambers, adjoining Martin's store, for welfare work. Those registering and assigned will be employed in and about the Park. Only one member of a family will be employed, unless the family is very large. To date about 35 have complied with the necessary formalities. Darwin B. Martin is in charge.

Young men between the ages of 18 and 25 can also register for the reforestation work.

VOLUME 57. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, MAY 11, 1933. NUMBER 13.

PLANTING OF CROPS HERE IS HANDICAPPED BY RAIN

Oats and Peas Only About One-third Planted—Others Can be Delayed for While Longer

DEEP CREEK NEARS TOP

With the continued rains hindering the planting of a majority of the spring crops, farmers are beginning to wonder what are their chances for a successful growing season in Garrett county this year.

Unless oats and peas are planted by the second week in May, it is unlikely that a profitable crop can be raised, it has been stated by many, and since only about one-third were able to get in these two crops before the continued rainfall, the outlook is not bright.

For other crops such as corn, and the like, and the ordinary truck gardens, there is still plenty of time if not planted until June, but the oats and peas are causing the biggest worry at the present time. With the dairy industry at practically a non-profit level, the marketing of peas is about the only cash crop the farmer has at this time of the year, it is said, and serious losses will result if planting is postponed much later.

Since May 1 there has been a rainfall of 2.41 inches, according to the Government station at Weber's, with the lowest temperature 39 degrees, on May 4. Although January and February were low in rainfall, March with 7.69 and April with 4.93, more than made up the difference, and at present the total is more than the average of four inches per month. Rain has fallen every day since the first of the month, and there has been very little sunshine.

Fruit growers are expecting a frost to settle following the rainy weather.

Deep Creek Lake is still one and one-half feet below crest and the power house at Sines is working from 16 to 18 hours daily, 5 days per week. During the past three weeks the power house has generated two million kilowat hours of electricity, according to C. E. MacMurray, and the lake is still rising.

During a maximum day the turbines would use 400 million gallons of water. Evaporation over the lake's area daily takes areund 160 million gallons, it was stated.

DIED.

MRS. MINNIE EFFIE DEITLE

Funeral services for Mrs. Minnie Effie Deitle, wife of William H. Deitle, of near Grantsville, who died at the Hazel-McGilvery hospital, Meyersdale, Friday night, were held from the Maple Grove church of the Brethren on Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Deitle was the daughter of the late James and Sophia Bowser, and was born August 2, 1897, near the home farm where she spent her entire life.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Pauline, 14; three sisters, Mrs. Della E. Welby, New York City; Mrs. Oura Beachy and Mrs. Ruth M. Deitle, of Grantsville. The deceased had not been in good health for several months and had been in the hospital for treatment for the past eight weeks. She was married to William H. Deitle on October 28, 1917.

Crows Destructive Birds

Crows destroy more eggs of birds and fowl than any other agency and are especially destructive to the wildfowl supply, according to E. Lee LeCompte, state game warden.

The crow is destructive not only to ground-nesting birds, but to tree-nesting birds as well, and to the grain crops of the farmer.

The game warden suggests organizing crow shoots for the benefit of the farmers and wildfowl of the community, or at least to help get rid of the crow.

Frostburg Gives Use of City Land to Garrett County Farmer

At the regular meeting of the Mayor and City Commissioners of Frostburg, City Attorney W. A. Gunter was authorized to draw up an agreement between the city and Joseph McKenzie, allowing Mr. McKenzie the privilege of planting crops on a portion of the Blue Jay tract of land near Piney Run, this county.

Mr. McKenzie, a Garrett county farmer, agrees to plant the land in wheat and clover, following the harvest season, so as to give the land a good sod for the following year.

The city of Frostburg owns 1550 acres in Garrett county on the Piney River water project and it seems to be policy of cooperation on both sides.

FIRST R. F. C. PAYROLL TO BE DISTRIBUTED SATURDAY

Seven Work Projects Already Under Way in County—Rainy Weather Retards Progress

GARDEN SEED IS PROVIDED

This week the first distribution of R. F. C. funds will be made in Garrett county. Heads of dependent families have recently been put to work by the Garrett County Welfare Board, under the direction of Mr. Geo. D. Browning, and wages will be paid them on Saturday for the comparatively few days of clear weather since the first of May. The payroll will be approximately $400.

Seven projects are now started and the total wages paid will be much larger week by week as plans get well under way and other projects are opened.

Work centers are now set up in Crellin, Hutton, Kempton, Vindex, Shallmar, Kitzmiller and Grantsville. Projects for several incorporated towns have already been presented to the Welfare Board for consideration and approval, and many others are now in process of preparation.

Work on county roads as well as in towns will be opened in practically every district of the county, according to Mr. Browning, as rapidly as possible. Application blanks for work relief are now being studied and rated according to need shown, and those men whose families present the greatest distress will be given preference in assigning the jobs. It is hoped that all applicants who cannot provide at least a minimum of adequacy along the lines of food, clothing and shelter, will be put to work within the next thirty days. The Welfare Board anticipates that between 500 and 750 men of the county will be given a certain amount of work each week and that approximately $15,000 will thus be released and put into circulation in the county.

Garden seed has been provided the county by the R. F. C. in wholesale lots and Miss Charlotte Wilcox, the Relief Administrator, has set up a work relief project for packaging the seed into small lots for a group of community women. The basement of the Lutheran church has been provided as a working base. "In the case of the majority of these women there is no wage-earner in the home," Miss Wilcox stated. "One little woman recently saw her husband off to a tuberculosis sanitarium and she is now alone with a young child to care for and with absolutely no means of support exceept the few odd jobs she can pick up here and there. Such work, as we all know, is very scarce in these times.

"Another woman," Miss Wilcox continued, "whose husband is ill, walked all the way to Oakland from a distant point the other day for food relief for her large family. We have given a neighborhood grocer a weekly order for that home until road work opens up in her community when her young son will assume the place of the incapacitated wage earner."

The Welfare Board is meeting weekly on Thursday evenings to consider work projects presented and other matters of business. The Board is composed of Charles A. Ream, chairman; Delbert Davis, treasurer; Franklin E. Rathbun, secretary; John A. Shore, Walter W. Dawson, Harry Edwards and George D. Browning.

Market Peas to be Allotted

C. E. Temple, plant pathologist, and W. R. Ballard, extension horticulturist, University of Maryland, are in Garrett county this week in the interest of growing peas for market, a plan which was presented to a number of farmers some few days ago.

Peas will be allotted to 35 or 40 cooperators within the next few days. Planting should have been done this week but on account of the weather, this is impossible, John H. Carter, county agent, stated.

R. A. Jehle and J. W. Huberger, potato specialist, will be in the county next week to begin work on the experiment plots near town.

The session will begin at 8 p. m., and all members are urged to be present.

VOLUME 57. OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MARYLAND, MAY 11, 1933. NUMBER 13.

PLANTING OF CROPS HERE IS HANDICAPPED BY RAIN

Oats and Peas Only About One-third Planted—Others Can be Delayed for While Longer

DEEP CREEK NEARS TOP

With the continued rains hindering the planting of a majority of the spring crops, farmers are beginning to wonder what are their chances for a successful growing season in Garrett county this year.

Unless oats and peas are planted by the second week in May, it is unlikely that a profitable crop can be raised, it has been stated by many, and since only about one-third were able to get in these two crops before the continued rainfall, the outlook is not bright.

For other crops such as corn, and the like, and the ordinary truck gardens, there is still plenty of time if not planted until June, but the oats and peas are causing the biggest worry at the present time. With the dairy industry at practically a non-profit level, the marketing of peas is about the only cash crop the farmer has at this time of the year, it is said, and serious losses will result if planting is postponed much later.

Since May 1 there has been a rainfall of 2.41 inches, according to the Government station at Weber's, with the lowest temperature 39 degrees, on May 4. Although January and February were low in rainfall, March with 7.69 and April with 4.93, more than made up the difference, and at present the total is more than the average of four inches per month. Rain has fallen every day since the first of the month, and there has been very little sunshine.

Fruit growers are expecting a frost to settle following the rainy weather.

Deep Creek Lake is still one and one-half feet below crest and the power house at Sines is working from 16 to 18 hours daily, 5 days per week. During the past three weeks the power house has generated two million kilowat hours of electricity, according to C. E. MacMurray, and the lake is still rising.

During a maximum day the turbines would use 400 million gallons of water. Evaporation over the lake's area daily takes areund 160 million gallons, it was stated.

Funeral services for Mrs. Minnie Effie Deitle, wife of William H. Deitle, of near Grantsville, who died at the Hazel-McGilvery hospital, Meyersdale, Friday night, were held from the Maple Grove church of the Brethren on Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

E. F. Garletts was elected president of the Yough Community Boosters at the monthly meeting at Selbysport last Wednesday evening. C. B. Miller was named vice-president, and secretary-treasurer.

It was decided that an order of spray material for members of the organization should be combined with the order from the Friendsville F. F. A. club. There was an open discussion on the value of liming ground for peas.

The club was first organized two years ago with Orval Frazee as president. Last year Charles Nedrow served as president.

All interested persons are invited to attend any or all of the regular meetings which are held on the first Wednesday evening of each month.

New Athletic Field Available for Annual Meet at Grantsville

Crows Destructive Birds

Crows destroy more eggs of birds and fowl than any other agency and are especially destructive to the wildfowl supply, according to E. Lee LeCompte, state game warden.

The crow is destructive not only to ground-nesting birds, but to tree-nesting birds as well, and to the grain crops of the farmer.

The game warden suggests organizing crow shoots for the benefit of the farmers and wildfowl of the community, or at least to help get rid of the crow.

Frostburg Gives Use of City Land to Garrett County Farmer

At the regular meeting of the Mayor and City Commissioners of Frostburg, City Attorney W. A. Gunter was authorized to draw up an agreement between the city and Joseph McKenzie, allowing Mr. McKenzie the privilege of planting erops on a portion of the Blue Jay tract of land near Piney Run, this county.

Mr. McKenzie, a Garrett county farmer, agrees to plant the land in wheat and clover, following the harvest season, so as to give the land a good sod for the following year.

The city of Frostburg owns 1550 acres in Garrett county on the Piney River water project and it seems to be policy of cooperation on both sides.

During the past year Mr. McKenzie prevented several forest fires from spreading to valueble timber and has rendered other service in caring for Frostburg's forest land.

FIRST R. F. C. PAYROLL TO BE DISTRIBUTED SATURDAY

Seven Work Projects Already Under Way in County—Rainy Weather Retards Progress

GARDEN SEED IS PROVIDED

This week the first distribution of R. F. C. funds will be made in Garrett county. Heads of dependent families have recently been put to work by the Garrett County Welfare Board, under the direction of Mr. Geo. D. Browning, and wages will be paid them on Saturday for the comparatively few days of clear weather since the first of May. The payroll will be approximately $400.

Seven projects are now started and the total wages paid will be much larger week by week as plans get well under way and other projects are opened.

Work centers are now set up in Crellin, Hutton, Kempton, Vindex, Shallmar, Kitzmiller and Grantsville. Projects for several incorporated towns have already been presented to the Welfare Board for consideration and approval, and many others are now in process of preparation.

Work on county roads as well as in towns will be opened in practically every district of the county, according to Mr. Browning, as rapidly as possible. Application blanks for work relief are now being studied and rated according to need shown, and those men whose families present the greatest distress will be given preference in assigning the jobs. It is hoped that all applicants who cannot provide at least a minimum of adequacy along the lines of food, clothing and shelter, will be put to work within the next thirty days. The Welfare Board anticipates that between 500 and 750 men of the county will be given a certain amount of work each week and that approximately $15,000 will thus be released and put into circulation in the county.

Garden seed has been provided the county by the R. F. C. in wholesale lots and Miss Charlotte Wilcox, the Relief Administrator, has set up a work relief project for packaging the seed into small lots for a group of community women. The basement of the Lutheran church has been provided as a working base. "In the case of the majority of these women there is no wage-earner in the home," Miss Wilcox stated. "One little woman recently saw her husband off to a tuberculosis sanitarium and she is now alone with a young child to care for and with absolutely no means of support except the few odd jobs she can pick up here and there. Such work, as we all know, is very scarce in these times.

"Another woman," Miss Wilcox continued, "whose husband is ill, walked all the way to Oakland from a distant point the other day for food relief for her large family. We have given a neighborhood grocer a weekly order for that home until road work opens up in her community when her young son will assume the place of the incapacitated wage earner."

The Welfare Board is meeting weekly on Thursday evenings to consider work projects presented and other matters of business. The Board is composed of Charles A. Ream, chairman; Delbert Davis, treasurer; Franklin E. Rathbun, secretary; John A. Shore, Walter W. Dawson, Harry Edwards and George D. Browning.

Market Peas to be Allotted

C. E. Temple, plant pathologist, and W. R. Ballard, extension horticulturist, University of Maryland, are in Garrett county this week in the interest of growing peas for market, a plan which was presented to a number of farmers some few days ago.

Peas will be allotted to 35 or 40 cooperators within the next few days. Planting should have been done this week but on account of the weather, this is impossible, John H. Carter, county agent, stated.

R. A. Jehle and J. W. Huberger, potato specialist, will be in the county next week to begin work on the experiment plots near town.

Grand Lodge Officers To Visit K. of P's May 19

Grand lodge officers will make an official visit to Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, on Friday evening, May 19, it has been announced.

The session will begin at 8 p. m., and all members are urged to be present.

Lesson for May 14

JESUS ASSERTS HIS KINGSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Mark 11:1-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass. Zech. 9:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Praising Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—King of All Kings.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Acknowledging Christ as King.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Lordship of Jesus.

I. Jesus Officially Presented to the Jewish Nation as Their King (vv. 1-11).

It is hardly proper to designate this the "triumphal entry" for it was only so to outward appearance. It was rather the promised Messiah publicly offering himself to the Jewish nation as the king.

1. The preparation (vv. 1-6).

a. Two disciples sent to bring the colt (vv. 1-3). Jesus told them just where to find it and how to answer the owner's inquiry.

b. The obedience of the disciples (vv. 4-6). Without asking the reason why, they went at Christ's bidding. The command may have seemed strange and unreasonable, but they rendered explicit obedience.

2. The entry into Jerusalem (vv. 7-10).

a. The disciples put their garments upon the colt, and Jesus sat upon it (v. 7). This action showed their recognition of Jesus as their Messiah, the King (II Kings 9:13).

b. The action of the multitude (vv. 8, 9). Some spread their garments in the way. Others who had no garments to spare threw down branches. This entry was in fulfillment of a prophecy uttered some five hundred years before (Zech. 9:9). They uttered the very cry which the prophet predicted. Since the prediction of the first coming was thus literally fulfilled, we can be assured that those concerning his second coming will likewise have literal fulfillment. The prophecy of Zech. 14:3-11 will be just as literally fulfilled as was that of Zech. 9:9.

c. The action of Jesus (v. 11). Upon entering the temple he looked round upon all things, but as it was eventide, he with the twelve withdrew to Bethany.

II. Jesus Exercising Kingly Authority (vv. 12-19).

1. The barren fig tree cursed (vv. 12-14). The fig tree is typical of the Jewish nation. The fruit normally appears on the fig tree ahead of the leaves. The presence of the leaves is assurance of fruit. This was an acted parable of Christ's judgment on Israel for pretension to being the chosen people without the fruits thereof.

2. The temple cleansed (vv. 15-19). For the various sacrifices many oxen, sheep, and doves were needed. It was impracticable for people from distant parts to bring their sacrifices with them. They brought money, therefore, and bought the animals needed. This privilege was provided in the Jewish law (Deut. 14:24-26). In such cases exchange was necessary. However, when evil men used it as an opportunity for gain, it became an offense to God. It defiled his house. Jesus made a scourge of cords and drove out the money changers (John 2:15), overthrowing their tables and pouring out their money. By this act he declared himself to be the Lord of the temple, and one with God. The scribes and chief priests grasped the meaning thereof, for they were aroused to murderous hate and sought to destroy him.

III. Jesus' Authority Challenged (vv. 27-33).

1. By whom (vv. 27, 28). The chief priests, the scribes, and the elders demanded that he show by what authority he accepted the honors of the Messiah and by whom he was given the right to cast out the money changers.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 29, 30). He responded to their challenge by a question which placed them in a dilemma. Since John was his forerunner, the commission of John and Jesus had the same source. If John's commission was from heaven, Christ's commission was from heaven likewise. If they had accepted John's message, they would have been ready to accept his. They were powerless to destroy John because the people accepted John as having been sent from heaven.

3. The answer of the chief priests and scribes (vv. 31-33). Perceiving the force of the dilemma in which they were placed, they confessed that they did not know the source of John's commission. These rulers had no affection for Jesus so they rejected his message and sought to destroy him.

Beth's Duty

By CLARISSA MACKIE

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

WHEN Beth Raynor set out that June morning to collect the dues of the private library of which she was treasurer, she had no idea that she was about to meet the most trying period of her life.

The doctor's wife, Mrs. Penny, had promptly brought out a fat pocketbook and paid her dues, with a cheery laugh about some book that she had read recently, and which she recommended to the pretty young treasurer.

Beth had gone away from the doctor's with a large bunch of Mrs. Penny's special pink roses.

Beth never forgot that hour at Mrs. Bleak's house. That is, she did not forget it for a long, long time, and whenever she did remember that hour stolen from a June morning, she shivered as with sudden cold.

Mrs. Bleak had given Beth a dainty blue check to cover the amount of her dues as a library member.

"My dear," she began in a low tone, "I understand that you are engaged to marry Donald Blake?"

Beth blushed and admitted that it was true, at the same time remembering that Donald worked in Mr. Bleak's office.

"Of course, that is quite lovely, my dear," said Mrs. Bleak cordially, "but of course you will not be getting married just yet?"

"We did speak of next winter some time," murmured Beth, with a sudden, horrid feeling that Mrs. Bleak did not quite approve of the engagement.

"So soon?" the lady lifted her hands in horror.

"Why not?" asked Beth bluntly.

"My dear," purred Mrs. Bleak, "I was just thinking about what my husband said about Donald's career!"

"What about it?"

"I am really quoting my husband, and he would be very angry with me if he had ever known that I had told what he confided to me—but I feel that you should know, Beth—it is a woman's duty to make sacrifices, you know!"

"I know," said Beth dully.

"Well, I will be perfectly frank with you, trusting that you will not mention a word to Donald—Azariah told me last night that he was pleased with Donald's work during the past two years—and said that he wanted to advance him to a junior partnership provided Donald can raise the necessary money for investment in the firm—merely a matter of form, you know, my dear!"

"Yes, of course," said Beth calmly.

"You may have heard that Mr. Bleak does not approve of young men marrying when they are too young, or before they are really settled in business, and he went on to say that if Donald really intended to marry very soon, that he would not offer him the partnership but give it to Ferdinand Piper, who, as you know, is a confirmed bachelor!"

Another moment, and Beth was out of the house and going down the prim walk, her mind a chaos of doubt and rebellion.

Why, she had planned to be the greatest help to Donald! Beth was an accomplished housekeeper, and she had always worked at home with her mother in the old-fashioned way.

That night after she arrived home Beth talked with her parents. She never told a word of what Mrs. Bleak had said to her, but she suggested that she would like to go to the mountains where her aunt had a summer school, and teach there! And they consented, and when she told Donald the next day, and casually explained that she wanted a change, he, too, cordially agreed with her—and so Beth Raynor went, and left Donald free for promotion.

Toward the end of September, when the summer school ended, Donald Blake got into his motor car and with a word to Mr. and Mrs. Raynor, started for Beth's mountain retreat.

Beth was walking in the woods when the trees were flaming with the first frost touch. She had in a way enjoyed the summer, though she had missed her parents, and she had cruelly missed Donald.

Donald had already saved the money for their house, and the first year's living expenses had been planned with the thriftiness which had been a birthright. Had Mrs. Bleak really spoken the truth or was it only a woman's silly gossip?

It was then that Donald appeared and took Beth in his arms. "We want you at home," he told her gravely, and when at last she had taken farewell of her aunt, and they motored down the mountain roads towards home, he told how much he had missed her.

When they reached the town, Donald insisted on driving her through the business center, and suddenly he pointed to a new tall brick block that had grown during her absence. "My offices are up there," he told her. "During the summer, I decided that I could do better alone, and my office is now being rushed. Old Bleak was furious—told me I was making the mistake of my life to get married just now, and so—I just went ahead and had our house built according to our plans—" and just then they turned another corner and there was Beth's old home, and next door was the prettiest new bungalow, waiting for the finishing touches and Beth's opinion.

As for Beth's duty—it seems to be entirely in her own home and that of her parents, while young Donald's business is nearly equal to that of Azariah Bleak's!

SAFEGUARDING MOTHER IS AIM OF HEALTH OFFICERS

Mother's Day Gives Opportunity to Stress Rights of Parent

Mothers of the past, the present and the future, their sacrifices, their imperishable love, and never ending influence will be honored and revered on Sunday, May 14, in the world-wide observance of Mothers' Day. The dedication of a special day each year to the memory of the world's mothers is an outgrowth of a tribute paid to commemorate the work and quiet service of a busy mother during the dark days of the Civil War. The idea spread to other countries—to England, France, Spain, Italy, Belgium, Austria, Japan, China and Africa—and now the observance is practically world-wide. Since 1913, when President Wilson issued a proclamation designating the second Sunday in May as Mothers' Day, the nation-wide observance of the day in the United States has taken on that day.

"Mothers' Day recalls very precious memories to all of us," Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said recently, "But to those of us who are interested in public health, and particularly to those of us who are concerned with the health of mothers and young children, Mothers' Day gives a special opportunity, not only to give honor and pay tribute to all mothers, but to stress the right of every mother-to-be to adequate care. And by adequate care, we mean skillful, intelligent care, before, during, and after the baby's birth.

"Partly because of financial conditions, and partly because some mothers and fathers do not realize how important it is for the health and well-being of both mother and baby for the mother to have the very best sort of care during the whole of the waiting period, many mothers neglect to arrange for care until shortly before the baby is expected. Physicians are glad to give such care to expectant mothers in their own practice. The mothers who have this care, have an excellent chance to come through the ordeal safely and without complications. Their babies have a better start than do those of the mothers who have drifted along without care.

"In Baltimore City, and in nearly all of the larger cities of this country, provision is made for health supervision of expectant mothers of limited means, who do not have doctors of their own, at what are known as prenatal clinics. Similar clinics have been established in six of our Maryland counties—Harford, Cecil, Allegany, Calvert, Anne Arundel, and Frederick—and we are looking forward to the time when some service of this sort will be available to all women who need it, in every part of the State."

Steps Should Be Taken At This Time To Preserve Moisture In Orchard Soil

As soil moisture is one of the most important factors in tree growth and size and color of fruit, it is important to take steps to conserve it during the spring months when we have our heaviest rains, it is pointed out by A. F. Vierheller, specialist in horticulture for the University of Maryland Extension Service. Two of the best methods for conserving this moisture are through cultivation and mulching.

Where the orchard already has a sod, a light disking, sufficient to permit the water to permeate the soil, is sufficient. If the sod is tight and the trees are not doing so well, it may be necessary to plow and harrow lightly. In either case, the sod will re-establish itself in due course of time.

If the orchard is cultivated, the cover crop should be turned under at once, either by plow or disk, as this material will require several weeks to rot before the summer cover crop, is seeded about June 1. In either sod or seeded orchards mowing may begin as soon as the cover crop begins to draw heavily upon the soil moisture. This cut material may then be left where cut or placed around the base of the trees as a mulch. In this connection, it is stated by Mr. Vierheller, straw has been found an excellent mulch for weak trees and will aid greatly in conserving moisture. If straw is too costly, wild hay may be brought in from other parts of the farm and forked around the trees instead.

If the orchard has a good stand of weeds and grass in it already, it may be possible to omit seeding any summer or fall cover crop. However, if cultivation is necessary it should be handled carefully so as to prevent erosion of the orchard soil. Leaving a narrow sod strip in the row of trees or between them; cultivating across the slope of land; cultivating gullies by use of brush, rock or sod; manuring washed places and sowing to grass, oats, or millet, will help to prevent washing. Other good cover crops are soybeans, cowpeas; and buckwheat.

Eggs For Any Meal

The unusual food value of eggs makes them an exceptional bargain when prices are down as at present. Eggs are a good main dish at any meal. Or an egg dessert, such as custard, makes it possible to do with a less substantial main dish than would otherwise be needed. Egg salad, egg sandwiches, sauces or salad dressing made with eggs—all these add materially to the food value of a meal, and to the variety also.

As a variation from fried eggs, poached eggs, scrambled eggs, and omelets, the Bureau of Home Economics suggests baked eggs and cheese, cheese souffle, eggs creole, shirred eggs or greens, curried eggs, baked eggs and rice in tomato sauce. Then for desserts, there is a rich bread pudding. Fruit whips—always attractive and nutritious desserts—are inexpensive when eggs are cheap. They can be made of any fruit pulp of pronounced flavor and color, but prune and apricot whips are favorites. Heat the fruit pulp to dissolve the added sugar, and combine while hot with the stiffly beaten egg whites so as to cook the eggs partially and give body to the mixture. After the fruit pulp has been combined with the egg whites and sugar, the mixture may be baked if desired. When baked in a dish surrounded by water in a very slow oven (225 to 250 degrees F.) for about on hour, the whip should not fall, and may be served either hot or cold. Or fruit whips may be served as soon as mixed without cooking.

Shirred Eggs on Spinach

One pound spinach, chopped fine, 1½ cups dry bread crumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, pepper, 5 eggs, ¼ cup grated sharp cheese.

Heat the spinach, stir, and cook for about 2 minutes. Add the salt, 1 cup of the bread crumbs, and pepper if desired. Spread the spinach in 2-inch layer in a greased shallow baking dish or pan. Break eggs on top of the spinach, and cover with the remaining crumbs which have been mixed with the cheese. Bake for about 15 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) or until the eggs are well set and the crumbs brown. Serve at once.

Poached Eggs on Toast With Savory Sauce

Toast slices of bread. Place on each piece of toast a thin slice of crisp cooked bacon, and on top of this a poached egg. Cover with hot sauce and serve at once. Make the sauce with the bacon fat, milk and flour, and add a little chopped green pepper if desired.

Custard Bread Pudding

One quart milk, 2 cups soft bread crumbs, ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup seedless raisins, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 4 eggs.

Scald the milk, bread crumbs, sugar, salt and butter in a double boiler. Pour some of the hot mixture into the beaten eggs, reserving 2 whites for the meringue. Combine all the other ingredients, pour into a greased baking dish, and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven for about 1 hour, or until the pudding is nearly firm in the center. When the pudding has partially set, stir well so the raisins will be through the pudding rather than at the bottom of the dish. To make the meringue add 2 tablespoons sugar to each well beaten egg white, and add a dash of salt and vanilla. Cover the pudding with the meringue and put in a very moderate oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Serve hot or cold garnished with bits of tart jelly.

Eggs Creole

Two tablespoons chopped onion, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 1 green pepper, chopped; or chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste.

Cut hard-cooked eggs in quarters, place them upon a bed of hot flaky cooked rice, and cover with a sauce made of the ingredients listed.

To made the sauce cook the onion in the fat for a few minutes. Sprinkle the flour over the onion and quickly stir in the tomatoes and simmer for about 20 minutes. Add the green pepper or parsley, salt and pepper, and serve.

THURSDAY, MAY 11, 1933

MOTHER'S DAY, MAY 14TH—

The great events of this world are not revolutions, and economic conferences and banking reforms. The great events of this world are babies.

The most important people in this world are not soldiers, and statesmen and bankers. The most important people in this world are mothers, who are called upon to bring into existence a new generation.

So it is fitting that on Mother's Day we honor mothers. It is even more fitting that on this day we should take steps to make motherhood safe for them, as it is agreed by leading authorities that at least half the 16,000 women who annually die in childbirth could be saved by adequate maternity care.

A meeting aimed to help remedy the situation is scheduled to be held in New York City tomorrow, with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as principal speaker. A number of outstanding medical authorities and educational leaders are to be on the program. Emphasis is to be placed on two important steps to be taken. First, people should understand that much depends on the choice of the doctors, and select one known to have had experience in maternity cases. After selecting him, parents must trust his judgment and not try to prevail upon him to make painless a process which cannot always be made free from pain without increasing the risk of infection and other undesirable complications. Second, if a hospital is chosen, it should be one of high standard, such as those approved by the American College of Surgeons, for despite the fact that each year finds more women going to hospitals, there is a corresponding decrease in the mortality rate. In fact, many authorities belive it is safer for a woman to have her baby at home, if conditions there are suitable, unless the mother's condition requires special care.

The Maternity Center Association of New York, which is sponsoring the Mother's Day meeting, has made a notable contribution to knowledge of what adequate maternity care can do to save mothers' lives. Among 4726 women under their care over a period of eight years in a certain section of New York City, the death rate was reduced two-thirds.

"THEY HIRED THE MONEY"

A news dispatch from Wilmington, Delaware, not long ago, stated that visitors to that city were attracted by the large blue and white signboards at every entrace to the city, proclaiming the memorable reply of the late President Coolidge to a question about the European war debts. It will be remembered that Mr. Coolidge said: "They hired the money, didn't they?" and nobody has been able to think up any satisfactory and convincing answer save the simple word "yes."

The signs at Wilmington contain in large letters these simple words of the late President and nothing more. It is said that Paul C. Hessler, a prominent business man of Wilmington, had the signs erected. In commenting on his enterprise, Mr. Hessler is quoted as saying:

"I erected the signs not only as a memorial to the late Calvin Coolidge, of whom I was a great admirer and with whom I agreed but because I deplore the nonchalance with which the American citizen looks upon national issues. I hoped in some small way to do my part to make the American people think.

"I think his statement was one of the greatest of a great American and I think it should settle the debt question. I feel that when America is in worse financial condition than its debtor countries, as I have personally observed, those countries should be made to pay their debts to a penny. Why when these countries can build war vessels for millions of dollars, can they not pay their honest debts to America?"

Mr. Hessler's statement certainly bears repeating and his aim is a worthy one. Certainly it is that the American people do not pay any too much attention to the study of foreign affairs. Ninety-eight per cent of them are soundly nationalistic to the core, but unfortunately, a great deal of the stuff they read about foreign affairs is propaganda cooked up for them by internationalists in our own country who are interested primarily in Europe.

The debt question is a good example. How many times we have been told that cancellation would be a good thing for the United States, and that failure to cancel will end in our economic ruin! Yet anyone who will take the trouble to study such propaganda will be immediately struck by its nonsense.

Fortnuntely there seems to be no disposition at present on the part of the new administration at Washington to change the policy of the Hoover administration which was strictly against cancellation. Internationalists in our own country and abroad who thought that a change of administration might bring cancellation seems doomed to disappointment. Any proposal for such cancellation would be marked by a real protest from every part of the country.

NOTHING CAN HOLD BACK THE DAWN

(An Editorial)
By COLONEL FRANK KNOX

After all, the heart of a man is the most resilient thing in the world. For rebound and for comeback there is nothing on earth to compare with it. Regardless of geography, race or creed, they're all alike—men will bend but they WILL NOT BREAK.

We've just had a demonstration of it here in the United States.

A short time ago you could have cut the gloom with a cheese knife.

Today the whole nation is smiling.

Tomorrow they will have pretty well forgotten.

Why?

Simply because it is human nature to live in the future tense.

College professors write histories. We read them, most of us, because we're supposed to, but we don't really care where we've been. All we want to know is where we're going.

The trouble with the depression was the fact that, in spite of all we could do, it remained in the present tense. We wanted to push it behind us—that's the way the human animal gets rid of his troubles. Now we think we are more or less rid of it—the effect, no—but the thing itself—decidedly, yes.

"I remember back in 1932 when business was in terrible shape.'

"Oh, shut up! Call up Bill and let's make it a foursome tomorrow."

And that's the way it goes. Out of sight—out of mind.

We feel that whatever ailed us is by way of slipping back into the blur of things we choose to forget.

The man-in-the-street is walking with a springy step. Smiles have crowded out the worry wrinkles. Again we see life ahead of us. Again we believe. Again we hope, laugh and PLAN. Three weeks ago, it was like a nightmare. No matter how hard you tried, you couldn't move. Nothing mattered. One brain, one set of muscles, and one man was just about as good as another. Today every man feels that once more he has a fighting chance to win out.

Down deep from somewhere there comes a low rumble—a vibration—a something or other that sounds like the presses starting in a newspaper building — every newspaper man knows what I mean.

A song writer would say—"happy days are here again." The conservative and, for the most part, wrong-guessing economist would perhaps call it the beginning of a new cycle. We business men interpret it as merely meaning that, after all these months of idleness and rusting, the wheels are once more beginning to turn. At any rate, let us hope that wherever we are going, we're on our way. It will take careful driving—but the big thing is that at last we are MOVING. And, from a quick glance at the new business set-up, it appears that we have plenty of gasoline.

Meanwhile, however, let us not come back so quickly that we forget the real heroes. May I recommend that the following be cited for bravery in action:

—the man who, in spite of his lost job and his lost hopes, managed somehow to keep his family fed;
—the wife who went through it all, uncomplaining and smiling;
—the merchant who, in spite of the rush to the store across the street refused to cut quality, preferring to die by his standard rather than to desecrate it;
—the manufacturer who kept the shoddy out of his product;
—the dairyman who didn't water the milk;
—the man who, in spite of advice, kept his assets in his own name;
—the cop who shot it out with armed bandits and took his share of the lend at the few dollars a month that he didn't get;
—the landlord who wasn't overly squeamish about the rent;
—and last, but most noteworthy of all, the good citizen, of any land whatsoever, who kept faith in God and country.

The night has been long; but the never-ending cycle of night into day still persists and now—NOTHING CAN HOLD BACK THE DAWN!

Mother's Day

MOTHER, SWEET PAL OF MINE

Silver haired mother,
Oh sweet pal of mine,
In my thoughts I have a picture
Lovelier than an artist can paint.

Oh what I'd give to be just a little child again,
Just for a day;
To hear those lullaby songs
And lay my head upon your breast.

Oh time has drifted us apart
But in my heart that Mother love
Grows dearer every day.

Oh God, we thank thee for our Darling mothers—
Silver-haired mothers
Of ours.

IN DAYS OF OLD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Ground was broken at Hutton for a tannery, capital stock, $50,000, capacity 60 hides per day, backed by Pennsylvania people.

Hail, the size of hickory nuts, fell in large quantities at Grantsville, damaging cherry trees and breaking window panes.

The Mountain Electric and Telephone company was formed with Dr. H. W. McComas, president; C. S. Davis, vice-president; J. C. Peddicord, secretary. The object was to connect all important towns of the county by telephone.

A free fight occurred in one of Oakland's saloons in which the fixtures were used as weapons.

Mountain Lake Park and Oakland each purchased road machines from J. M. Davis & Sons, and were said to be very successful.

Charles M. Miller, Swanton, was seriously injured by falling from a shade tree which he was trimming.

The brick work on the Lutheran Church was begun. The addition to County Treasurer Lawton's house was under roof.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Dr. W. D. Reed was appointed business manager of Mt. Lake Park association.

The home of W. G. Hinebaugh, upper second street, was discovered to be on fire. The fire department responded with reel and chemical engine.

Employes of the Self Winding Clock company of New York were installing clocks in various business houses in Oakland, which were controlled by a master clock in the telegraph office.

A Hudson advertisement read, "You can drive on high at the pace of a man's walk, as slowly as two miles an hour, and do it with the smoothness of a steam engine."

Seed potatoes were offered for sale at 75 cents per bushel.

H. W. Kahl was struck in the eye with a pick by a man engaged on the bridge spanning Wilson creek on Second street.

Erection of the Gregg and Mendow Mountain schools were authorized by the School Board. A. W. DeWitt was named principal of the Accident normal school, which was to open May 26.

From Morgtntown, W. Va., it is announced that during Music Week—May 7 to 11—the native songs of West Virginia will be broadcast from the five broadcasting stations each day during the week and KDKA will also have a specinl West Virginia musical program daily.

WORKERS CALLED BACK AS FACTORIES SPEED OUTPUT

In one month following a newspaper advertising campaign announcing its new low-price policy, Kelvinator Corporation has established new all-time sales records and has boosted employment and production in its Detroit and Grand Rapids factories to new heights, it was announced by George W. Mason, chairman of the board and president of the company.

Kelvinator factory workers, thronging the gates at opening time as production booms, are shown above. Below is a night view of one of the plants, now working night and day.

More workers than ever before are thronging the Kelvinator factory gates at opening time and factories are humming at full capacity night and day. Day workers take the places of the night shift at the machines in a continuous struggle to keep abreast of a flood of orders never before equalled in Kelvinator history. It was announced that in the first three weeks of April orders received were greater by 32.2 percent than for any other similar period in the 19 years the company has been in business. Unfilled orders on hand already have reached a point greater than for any time within the past three and a half years.

Commenting on the record breaking sales being made by his company at the present time, Mr. Mason pointed out that it was concrete evidence of the general upturn in public buying which was foreseen a month ago when Kelvinator announced a new low price schedule, effective only so long as costs remained low in the raw materials markets. "We also feel that the unusual success we have experienced is a further tribute to the value of the newspapers of the country in getting an important message quickly and forcefully to the attention of buyers," he said.

THE "SOUND MONEY" PLEDGE

The political situation inside Congress and out has developed far enough to indicate that one of the principal issues in the congressional campaign next year will be the Democratic platform of 1932. The Republicans will seek to point out, in fact are already beginning it, that the party of the administration has forgotten some of the promises made in the campaign last year.

One of the principal planks in the Democratic platform, it will be remembered, was one again confirming the party in the faith of sound money. Already the proponents of the so-called administration inflation bill in Congress are being reminded that the majority party is in danger of forgetting its pledge to the people to maintain sound money. The reminders are coming not only from Republican statesmen but from some of those high in the councils of the Democratic party.

Surely it cannot be seriously maintained that if the provisions of the Thomas bill are carried out we will continue to have sound money. The bill, which is an amendment to the "farm relief" measure, authorizes the President to put into effect several kinds of inflation, and if all the provisions were invoked there can be no doubt that we will have something in circulation which would not conform to current ideas of sound money and 100-cent dollars.

Some friends of the administration declare that President Roosevelt will not put the provisions into effect unless it becomes absolutely necessary. They maintain that the administration had the bill introduced to head off schemes for mandatory inflation. Nobody has yet been able, however, satisfactorily to answer the question of why, if they are not to be put into use, the inflationary measures are necessary. The President could have headed off the inflationists anyhow by vetoing any bills of the kind which might have been enacted.

Some political students have advanced the view that the President wants the power so that he can deal more effectively with European diplomats in working out a scheme of stable international finance. It is earnestly to be hoped that this is the best guess on the situation.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

One of the most convincing arguments against the arms embargo resolution, now in Congress, which would give the President the right to prevent by embargo the shipment of munitions of war to a nation which he regarded as an aggressor, is contained in a letter from John Bassett Moore, one of America's most distinguished diplomats, to the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, addressed to Congressman Hamilton Fish and read into the Congressional Record of April 20. The letter is a complete answer to the arguments of the internationalists who declare that such embargo power would be an instrument of peace. Mr. Moore shows that it could much easier become an instrument of war.

Mr. Moore discusses the principles of recognized international law and then says: "From the elementary principles of international law above set forth it necessarily follows that if a government bans the shipment of arms and munitions of war to one of the parties to an armed conflict and permits it to the other, it intervenes in the conflict in a military sense and makes itself a party to the war whether declared or undeclared."

Continuing, Mr. Moore declares the proposed policy is "opposed to the settled policy and the highest interests of the United States and also the provisions of our Federal Constitution." He adds that "if adopted it would enable the President first to make international engagements of the most far-reaching kind at his will without the advice and consent of the Senate and second, to carry us into war without the prerequisite constitutional declaration of war by the Congress."

Mr. Moore points out to those who think such a resolution a "peace" declaration that war cannot be abolished by calling it peace or by refraining from calling it war although he adds that through propaganda, unfortunately "there are many who appear to have been infected by these confused notions."

In predicting what would happen if the resolution were adopted and a crisis arose, Mr. Moore adds: "Groups moved by interests or swayed consciously or unconsciously by propaganda will clamor at the White House and the Department of State for the unneutral application of the ban in favor of those whom they dislike or disapprove. * * * Within the terms of the pending resolution our government would be asked to set itself up in rash and arrogant judgment upon the acts of other nations and on the merits of their conflicts, with a view to give or permit military aid to one as against another." There can be no questioning the judgment of this prophesy. Think what a field day it would be for the propagandists and international sob-sisters when a situation of this kind confronted the government!

In conclusion, Mr. Moore points out that "if the real purpose back of the pending resolution is simply to prevent the United States from furnishing implements of war to those who are engaged in armed strife, this may readily be done by providing for a comprehensive, non-partisan embargo on the shipment of arms to all countries engaged in armed strife whether international or civil. Such an embargo would naturally be announced and imposed by public proclamation. Of this no foreign power could complain."

But this latter suggestion would not set well with our internationalist busy-bodies. The policy suggested by Mr. Moore would tend to keep us out of trouble. What the international propagandists want is a foreign policy which will plunge us into the center of every European squabble which breaks forth.

IN ONE of the tarred paper shacks which housed the gangs and engineers of the Nesbit Construction company a man bent over a pile of blueprints. A spectator would have thought him too absorbed to be aware of the beating rain on the unsubstantial roof.

As a matter of fact, Paul Bassett was so dominated by the rain that everything else was driven from his mind. It even made him forget the party on the hill whose foregoing he believed had cost him the heart and hand of its hostess, Claire Hendricks.

This downpour, unprecedented at this season of the year, was threatening his uncompleted dam and with it the labor of four hard years. The weather bureau had prophesied another twelve hours of it.

"Of course," he had told Claire over the phone, "my common sense tells me the dam will stand. Even unfinished, the factor of safety is ridiculously high."

"Then I should think," said Claire petulantly, "that you could surely come to the party."

"I am afraid not," he said ruefully. "If anything should happen—well, it's like the captain and his ship. 'Duty before pleasure.'"

"Imagined duty!" came back Claire's taunt. "Thank heaven, Abbott Wayne's bonding business is not so demanding!"

With that unkind last word the conversation ended. Wayne was the man Paul had for some time been fearing was a rival.

At midnight there came a sudden lull in both gale and rain and it occurred to Paul that it would be a favorable moment to take a reading of certain gauges down at the dam itself which, imbedded in the structure, registered their recordings over wires to special instruments at the surface.

Picking his way by flashlight along the narrow path that skirted the great piles of debris, now being washed and gullied into fascinating patterns, he reached the dam and made his readings.

For a moment he stood watching the turbulent race of clouds over his head. Then, as he turned to go, a glimpse of something moving in the shadow of a derrick caught his eye.

A girl, wrapped in a cape, her hair wind blown, was standing there. For a minute his heart leaped. Had Claire run down for a moment?

Then he saw it was not Claire, but Abbott Wayne's little sister, who had made the dam project her own ever since the first shovel of dirt had been turned.

"What on earth, Dot," he demanded, "are you doing here?"

The girl shrugged her shoulders. "I love the racket of the storm. Besides, haven't I seen this dam grow from the very start? I couldn't help worrying about it. Wanted to see if it was all right."

For the first time in the four years that she had the run of the place, Paul really saw Dorothy. And she wasn't the mere child that he thought. "Why aren't you at the party?" he said.

"Two reasons," she retorted promptly. "Unimportant one being that I'd rather be here. The other—well, I wasn't asked. I may be eighteen, almost, but Claire thinks me a kid."

Eighteen! Paul would hardly have thought so, but now he saw that it was rather because of her slim little figure and girlish ways than from any childishness. It flashed across him that she would make an excellent wife for an engineer. She would understand, as Claire never could, that intimate bond between a man and the thing he has created.

She startled him with a little cry. "Look, oh look! I do believe the old weather bureau was wrong! There's the moon!"

Sure enough, through a rift in the clouds, the whole disk of the moon, just past full, could be seen.

It was true that the crest of the flood might not be reached until noon tomorrow, but the chances were that the dam would hold if the rain was over. Paul felt like seizing the slender hands of his companion and whirling her round in a dance of celebration. Yesterday he would have done that very thing. But somehow, not tonight.

"I must go back," she was saying. "I—I wonder if you would mind walking up to the top of the hill with me where I can see the light in my window. It's really later than I thought. I suppose—" and she threw a glance up at the big house on the hill where strains of music were floating down—"everyone knows now of Claire's engagement to my brother."

Paul stopped short. "Claire—your brother?"

"Why, yes. That was what the party was for. Abbott told me before he left. But it was to be a grand surprise. Claire loves surprises."

By rights, Paul should have felt as if a knife had been turned in his heart. On the contrary, he felt and he was amazed at the sensation, as if he had just received a reprieve from some dreadful fate.

The rain had ceased. The girl who could never understand what the dam meant to him was going to belong to somebody else, and he had discovered a lovely, awakening woman in the girl who had watched him build it.

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

After one hundred years' of delay following the rebuilding of the Temple, a delay for which the Samaritans, Moabites, Ammorites, Ashdodites and the Arabians were largely responsible, Nehemiah, the son of Hachalish, undertakes the task of rehabilitation in real earnest. Doubtless Queen Esther was in no small part responsible for securing the authority from the King of Persia to restore Jerusalem as a fortified city.

Nehemiah had risen in the Persian court to the position of cupbearer to the King, and as such was very close to the royal presence. Indeed the post of cup-bearer would only be given to one of unimpeachable integrity and trustworthiness, for the King's life was in the cup-bearer's hand.

Hananiah's report greatly disturbed Nehemiah, who loved Jerusalem dearly. When he learned that the remnant left of the Captivity were in great affliction, that the walls of Jerusalem were broken down and the gates burned with fire, he sat down and wept and mourned and fasted certain days, then sought the Divine help in prayer.

When he again appeared before Artaxerxes he was of a sad countenance, a most dangerous thing for his personal safety, or oriental despots were likely to construe such a sign as evidence of conspiracy which meant death to the conspirators, sudden and terrible. Thus when the King inquired the cause of Nehemiah's sadness of countenance, he was sore afraid. However he answered bravely and truly, "Why should not my countenance be sad when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchers, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?"

The King, however, was in generous mood, for we find him replying to Nehemiah on this wise: "For what dost thou make request?" Nehemiah, at this juncture, demonstrates the wisdom expressed in an ancient liturgy, which declares that man before engaging in so great or important undertaking should always invoke the blessings of Diety. "So," he says, "I prayed to the God of Heaven."

Then, after prayer, he requested that he might be sent unto Judah, unto the city of his fathers' sepulchers to rebuild it, and that letters might be granted him unto the Governors beyond the river, and unto Asaph, the keeper of the King's forest, that timber be given to make beams for the gates of the palace which appurtained to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house into which he would enter. All of these requests were granted by Artaxerxes, who also sent a royal escort of captains of the army and cavalry.

Upon arriving at Jerusalem, he reconnoitered the ruined city by night, riding alone about the broken walls and planning their restoration. He met with such opposition both active and passive, from open enemies and secret foes of his own nation. Yet, undiscouraged by the jibs of Sanballat and Tobish, or their wily effort to entrap him and bring his cause to naught, he and his loyal followers toiled on, each man armed with sword and trowel, until the wall was built. For the people had a mind to work. It is this mind to work that not only builds walls but worlds. It may be that God has put us in the world just now to help Him build a better world than the one into which we were born.

Notes on Early Maryland Governors: IV

UNDER FENDALL MILITARY COMMANDERS WERE APPOINTED FOR THE FREEMEN OF EACH DISTRICT

JOSIAS FENDALL, "PERFIDEOUS AND PERJURED FELLOWE"

By KATHERINE SCARBOROUGH,
In the Baltimore Sunday Sun, April 23, 1933.

Josias Fendall, fourth of the proprietary Governors named by Lord Baltimore to administer the affairs of his palatinate, stands out through the recorded acts of his brief interlude of authority far more clearly as an individual than do any of his predecessors in office.

One of the more dispassionate of his chroniclers has referred bitingly to him as the Cromwell of Maryland, but he was more than that. His was a type of turpitude which is as old, probably, as humanity itself and is not confined to any race or nation under the sun. He was resolute, only to cringe. He built up, only to destroy. He was loyal, only to betray his liege. The late Gamaliel Bradford, had he taken note of him at all during his excursions into psychography, must certainly have numbered him among the "damaged souls."

During the welter which attended the rise of the Puritans to power in Maryland and which reached a crisis in the battle on the banks of the Severn during Governor Stone's administration, Fendall was zealous enough in support of the proprietary. Previous to that, little is known of him beyond the fact that he had emigrated to Maryland previous to 1655 and that he spelled his name with a double "ff."

He appears first on the civic scene as one of the leaders of the expedition which descended upon the home of Richard Preston on the Patuxent, and retrieved the records which the Puritans had seized and carried off from St. Mary's. Afterward he fought lustily as a captain in support of Governor Stone at Providence, his conduct on both occasions catapulting him high in the esteem of Lord Baltimore.

Even before the Lords Whitlock and Widrington, Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, had handed down their decision confirming Lord Baltimore's jurisdiction over Maryland, the proprietary had sent out to his colony a commission conferring upon Captain Fendall the Governorship of the palatinate.

Lord Baltimore's commission was dated July 10, 1655, and, in addition to naming Fendall as Governor, it announced the appointment of former Governor Stone, Thomas Gerard, Col. John Price, John Chandler, Luke Barber "and such other person or persons, not exceeding three in number, as the said Josias Fendall should nominate" to be "of his Lordship's counsell in the said province."

HE SPENT THE SUMMER IN JAIL

Before Fendall could take any steps to make his commission effective, however, he was arrested by the Puritans and, on August 15, 1656, was haled before the Provincial Court composed of Capt. William Fuller, Edward Lloyd, Richard Wells, Capt. Richard Ewen, Thomas March and Thomas Meares to answer the charge of "his dangerousness to the public peace." The fledgling Governor haughtily denied the power of the court to try him and marched off to prison to remain "untill the matters of government in the province of Maryland shall be further settled and fully determined by his Highness, the Lord Protector."

But the weather was hot and prison was uncomfortable. It took little more than a month to cure the doughty captain of his heroics and his taste for durance. On September 24 he made his submission, which was couched in the form of an outh binding him to refrain from disturbing "directly or indirectly . . this present government till there be a full determination ended in England of all matters relating to this government."

The "full determination" had been made in England a week before. Lord Baltimore immediately renewed his instructions to Governor Fendall, specifically directing him to see that the Act of Toleration "be duly observed . . and that the penalties mentioned in the same act be duly put in execution upon any offenders against the same or any party thereof; and particularly that part thereof whereby 'all persons in the said province are to have liberty of conscience and free exercise of their religion.'"

Fendall exhibited great gusto in his role of the lord proprietary's personal representative in consummating the agreement by which Maryland was returned from the commissioners of Parliament to the Calverts. He published its terms and recovered from the committee of government the great seal and other evidences of authority.

Coincidentally with his commission to Fendall Lord Baltimore had bestowed upon his own half-brother, Philip Calvert, the post of secretary of the province and sent him to Maryland early in the spring of 1657. Together the new officials had little difficulty in impressing their authority upon the capital of St. Mary's county, but their success ended there. Captain Fuller continued to dominate at Providence and it was probably to seek a solution of this impasse that Fendall, soon after he had assumed office, went to England to consult with the proprietary.

During his absence Luke Barger officiated at St. Mary's as deputy governor and the Puritans again took advantage of the opportunity to insurge. They summoned an Assembly which met at Patuxent September 24, 1657, and proceeded through the enactment of the requisite statutes to confirm themselves in authority. They made it convincing, too, by levying a poll tax to pay public expenses and appointing a committee to collect the fines which they imposed upon the adherents of the proprietary.

But the Puritans had overshot their mark. They had banked upon Cromwell to uphold them in their sedition and Cromwell already was out of love with the Puritane. He had rejected the title of King for the power of a dictator and was engaged in courting the favor of the English nobility. The republicanism of the Maryland insurgents, consequently, wafted no incense to his nostrils. He ignored them.

What transpired in England to undermine Lord Baltimore's confidence in his newly appointed lieutenant is not recorded, but Fendall unquestionably lost caste during his visit. When he returned to America in 1658 he brought with him not only the agreement between Lord Baltimore and the Commissioners of Parliament, but also a document, dated November 20, 1657, curtailing and restricting his own authority in no small degree and directing him to exercise the powers of his office subject to the advice and consent of Secretary Philip Calvert or, in case of the latter's death, of Cornwaleys.

Fendall seems immediately to have set about consolidating the affairs of the province, but, in the light of what happened later, it is obvious that Lord Baltimore's restrictions rankled sore within him and he yearned for revenge. Barber surrendered his power back to the Governor and on March 20, 1658, the followers of the proprietary met the leading Puritans in conference at St. Leonard's Creek.

True to form, the Puritans objected as usual to a clause in the oath of fidelity. Modifications were made to obviate their objections and the compact was designated as "engagement" rather than an oath. They also desired an amnesty for past transgressions and requested not to be disarmed because of danger from Indians. Their demands were met, Fendall's commission read and he was proclaimed Governor.

In July of the same year Fendall, accompanied by Philip Calvert, William Brittain, the clerk, and Councillor Utie, made an expedition to Kent, where they held a session of the Provincial Court and sought to reestablish the supremacy of Lord Baltimore over the island. Here, also, they encountered some opposition, for nine men, including two who had been justices of the peace, refused to subscribe to the agreement surrendering the government to the proprietary "in science" but promised not to oppose him and "to pay lawful taxes." The conscientious objectors in this case are beleived to have been Quakers.

Along the lines of military organization Fendall was both alert and able. The outstanding accomplishment of his administration was the establishment of the militia, which, long before had been permitted to go to pieces, on a sound military footing. Historians agree that its disorganized condition was largely responsible for Governor Stone's defeat at Providence and Fendall, profiting by that experience, lost no time in repairing and reorganizing the fighting machine of the colony.

Under Fendall's direction the whole province was districted and commanders appointed for each district. Two regiments were organized.

The outlook for peace and prosperity appeared more favorable than it had been for twenty years, but Fendall himself was already up to his eyes in treason. Smarting under the restrictions placed upon him by the proprietary and chafing under the latter's criticism of his negligence at courts and his contradictions of court orders, he selected the Assembly of March, 1659-60, as the opportune time to put into execution a plot to overthrow the proprietary government and set up in its place a commonwealth in which the supreme power was to be vested in the House of Burgesses with himself at its head.

The connivance of the Lower House was required, but this was not difficult to obtain, since there was always sufficient number of delegates jealous of the Upper House and ready to extend their own powers. Playing into Fendall's hands, the Burgesses sent to the Governor and council a message in which they declared themselves the "highest court of adjudicature" and "without dependence on any other power in the province." This message seems not to have taken the Governor by surprise, probably, it has been conjectured, because he had conducted it himself to give color to his designs upon the province.

His reply was forthcoming at once. The Assemblymen were informed that there was much in what they said, but that it was the Governor's belief that "the Lord Proprietor, by himself, or his deputy, ought to be present and have a casting voice." He deposed that, as Governor, he had not any power to confirm laws made by Burgesses for any longer time than until his Lordship or his heirs should declare their dissent. He also felt, he said, that the intent of the King in his Lordship's patent was that the freemen by writ assembled, either by themselves or their deputies, should make and enact the laws and those, so made, were to be published in his Lordship's name and then to be in full force. Provided, of course, that they were agreeable to reason and not repugnant to the laws of England.

This preliminary hocus-pocus was followed by much juggling, back and forth, and then, on March 12, 1659, the Lower House declared itself independent of all power and denied the right of the upper house (composed solely of representatives of the proprietary) to sit longer as a branch of the Legislature. To this, Maryland's first declaration of independence, Fendall, of course, assented. Since he had inspired it, his approval was a foregone conclusion. Two days later he disolved the upper house, surrendered his commission from Lord Baltimore and was elected by the Legislature of one house Governor of the Republic of Maryland.

But Fendall had not built his fences high enough. It was easy enough to seduce the requisite number of Burgesses, but public opinion was hostile to his machinations, or indifferent. After a brief effort to establish the authority so doubtfully acquired, Fendall abandoned the attempt and was arrested.

When news of his lieutenant's perfidy reached Lord Baltimore the proprietary blazed. He summarily revoked Fendall's commission and dispatched to the colony a "Declaracon" (recorded among the archives of Maryland) in which he denounced Fendall as a "perfideous and perjured fellowe . . . whom we lately intrusted to be our lieutenant of Maryland" and charged him with making a sinister use of a passage in one of his letters regarding customs "to cloke his treacherous and ambitious designs."

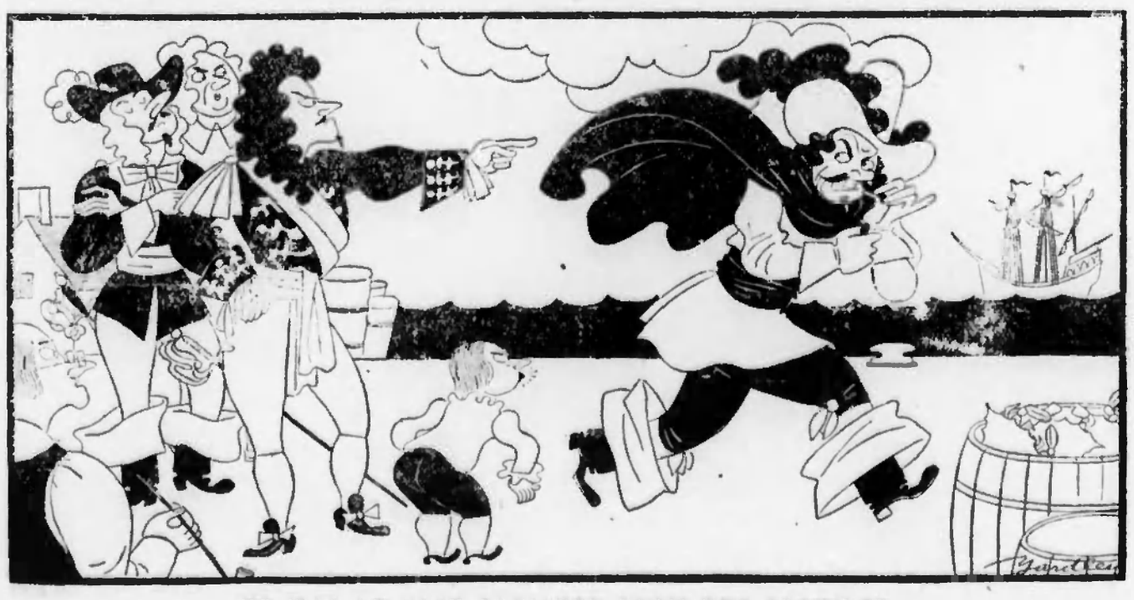
Fendall surrendered abjectly to the Baltimore government when his house of cards collapsed. He was tried and convicted, but after a short imprisonment he was discharged from all penalties imposed by the court except disfranchisement and disqualification for public office. This act of humanity he lived long enough to requite by an effort, years afterward to foment another rebellion in the province.

When he was released from prison he retired to his estate in Charles county—presumably the one which Lord Baltimore had granted to him in recognition of faithful service—where he had a wife, a daughter, a brother and several servants. He seems to have added to his landed possessions in the county by at least one more or less obscure transaction, as Charles Weathers Bump, writing (in 1908) in the magazine of the Maryland Historical Society, refers to one thousand acres belonging to one William Batten "on the west side of the Wicomico river" as having been "gobbled up in some way" by Josias Fendall.

Despite his disgrace Fendall seemed able to convince his neighbors that he was still a fine fellow, for in 1678 the freemen of Charles county proposed to elect him a delegate to the Assembly. They abandoned the idea only when they were informed by the then Governor (Charles Calvert) and the council that, if he were elected, his seat would be declared vacant. The next year he was charged with seditious utterances and a warrant issued for his arrest, but was not found.

Apparently he had fled to Virginia. There, almost at once, he became influential among the followers of Nathaniel Bacon, and had dealings with John Coode, who, a few years later, was the principal leader in the overthrow of the proprietary government. Both Fendall and Coode were arrested in 1681 and Fendall, tried in November, was found guilty of attempting to raise a mutiny in Charles county.

This time he was fined 40,000 pounds of tobacco and was banished from the province. Again he sought refuse in Virginia. Two years later—it was in June, 1684—it was reported that he was on a London ship in the Potomac. The arm of authority reached out once more to sieze him, but without results. Four years later he was dead, but when he entered the shadows or where he is buried, no one knows.



HE WAS AT LAST BANISHED FROM THE PROVINCE

MT. LAKE PARK

Flag Pole Erected

An eighty-foot steel flag pole has been erected on the grounds of the Mountain Lake Park Hotel. Nosing its way high above the tallest oaks it will be a constant reminder that the chief aims of governments is to point the way to a higher and better living experience and when Old Glory is flung to the mountain winds we will be again reminded of all that the flag stands for and that our ultimate peace, prosperity and happiness lies not in sporadic outbreaks against constituted authority nor in attempted intimidation by bombing, but rather in an attempt to imitate our forefathers who fought and died that the Union might be established and preserved. In this valiant, successful attempt Maryland played no inconspicuous part. Garrett county, settled by hardy pioneer stock, is still in the forefront carrying on the ideals of her sires.

And it is no wonder that patriotism and love of country comes so easy to the people of this country when we consider that out of a total population (1900) ten years old and over of 15,544, there were only 604 classed as illiterate. Out of a total of 14,643 white population only 3 percent were so classed. In 1930 there were only 274 foreign-born white persons over ten years of age living in the county, and of that number 119, or 43 per cent were classed as illiterate. Out of 21 colored listed in that year, over ten years of age, 4 were classed as illiterate.

When in the mountains of Garrett revolutionary talk sounds silly and red propaganda gets slight attention.

A swift one has apparently been slipped over on the thirsty again by the brewers. It is now said, based on a number of analyses, that the beverage now being sold throughout eastern United States, is not even 3.2 percent but a weaker substitute that is but little stronger in alcohol content than near beer. Well, Barnum was right when he said that the American people just loved to be fooled.

Wedding bells rang out in Loch Lynn when Mr. George M. Brown and Mrs. Lena Sterling were united in marriage last Saturday evening. The ceremony was performed at the Presbyterian parsonage in Oakland, Rev. W. B. Brock officiating.

Mrs. C. L. Graff, of Chicago, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Enlow.

Miss Octavia Hicks is here to open the Deaconess Home. Miss Hicks is spending a few days with Mrs. Winchell and with friends in Oakland this week.

Mrs. Smouse, of Fairmont, is the guest of her sisters, the Misses Hamill.

Miss Rozelle Brenneman has returned to Cumberland after a few days' visit with Mrs. Frank Murphy and other friends in the Park.

Miss Bertha Warnick and Albert Cook, of Lonaconing, were business visitors to the Park this week.

Miss Bonnie Calhoun has opened her store for the summer season.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Leighton and son Herbert, Jr., and Mrs. John O. Morgan and son David, motored to Fairmont and spent Sunday with relatives and friends.

Mr. Creed Dunnington, Mt. Lake Hotel proprietor, is here for the summer. Until the hotel opens, Mr. Dunnington is a guest at Hopewell Cottage.

Mrs. Samuel Cole and daughter Willoughby have returned from a trip to Baltimore.

Miss Rachel Weems is recovering from a recent illness.

Mrs. William Anderson has returned from Washington, where she spent the winter with her daughter, and has opened her home in Loch Lynn. Mrs. Anderson's success with and artistic arrangement of her flowers makes her property an attractive spot in the summer.

We learn that a truck load of boys from this immediate section will join the bonus marchers on Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Branch, of Charleston, W. Va., have rented the Kimmell cottage on H street and Miss Rose McGraw, of Washington and Grafton, is considering renting a cottage here for the summer.

Mr. James A. Enlow is somewhat improved in health. He received a large bunch of flowers from his Sunday school class and also a potted plant from the Bible class of the M. E. Sunday school.

At Harwichport, Mass., two Cape Cod brothers, an unemployed chauffeur and a mechanic, confess to kidnaping Peggy McMath, 10-year-old school girl, who was returned home unharmed after payment of $60,000 ransom, which sum was recovered.

At Warm Spring, Ga., troops have been stationed at President Roosevelt's "Little White House" to prevent souvenir hunters from carrying away shrubbery and furniture and other things.

Burt Wilson at Leesburg, Florida, writes: "Reports reach me that ramps are ready to pick and whistle pigs have ended their long sleep so we propose to come back to our habitat at Wilson Park, so please send The Republican to Wilson, W. Va."

We don't know anything about whistle pigs, but if it takes rain to ripen ramps, then they were ready to pick long ago.

A party of Gypsies, traveling thru Preston county last week stopped at a store in Kanes Creek and robbed the proprietor of $11. The storekeeper telephoned to Morgantown and had them apprehended and he proceeded to the scene himself.

Upon seeing the woman who had robbed him, he grabbed her by the throat and made her give him his $11 back and another dollar besides. He said the extra dollar was to pay him for his trouble and transportation.

Much like the ones who come thru Oakland. It's a rare Gypsy who isn't a gypster.

One of the most conscientious workers at her job seems to be Miss Lily Grace Matheson, secretary of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Believing that Americanism cannot be preserved in alcohol, she is patronizing establishments where intoxicants are not sold.

Going into a restaurant on Baltimore street, Cumberland, last week she inquired of the proprietor, "Do you sell beer?"

"Yes, madam, we have several kinds, what kind would you like?"

"In that case, I'll dine elsewhere."

And it's the same way at filling stations, and other places where beer might be sold.

If those who were not in favor of beer would observe the same practice, maybe one wouldn't see so many places breaking their necks to sell the stuff.

An account of the world's champion pessimist was handed to Archibaldson the other day, and although it runs in my mind it has been published in this column before, I will repeat, even tho Shakespeare didn't.

A citizen was told he had only one month to live so he called in a lawyer to put his affairs in order.

"Fix it," he said, "so that my overdraft at the bank will go to my wife—she can explain it to them.

"My equity in my automobile I want to go to my son. He will then have to go to work to keep up the payments.

"Give my Good Will to my friends. They took some awful chances on me, and are entitled to something.

"My equipment give to the junk man; he has had his eye on it for several years, and I want six of my creditors for pallbearers. They have carried me so long they might as well finish the job."

The following is being told about Mayor Grover Stemple when he made a recent trip to the zoo in Washington:

Hizzoner came upon the gentleman in charge of the elephant house who was peeved because the pump wasn't working and he had to carry water to feed his unquenchable beasts. He usually answered questions of strangers with the politeness of Charlie Riley, but this day he felt like Bill Whorton. He staggered past and the mayor asked "Can you tell me about that hippopotamus there? I wish to know whether it's a male hippopotamus or a female hippopotamus?"

"Sir," he ground out between his teeth, "I don't think that would be of interest to anybody except another hippopotamus."

Exit Mayor Stemple.

The Fable of Riding the Skyrocket

By GEORGE ADE

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ONCE there was a Man who played safe. He preferred to not lay down a bet unless the Odds were approximately 1,000 to 1 in his Favor. Before he tackled any Proposition he liked to gaze at it from all Angles and get the outward Aspects and Inside Dope.

All of that Bunk about "Nothing venture, Nothing gain" had not been in his Copy Book but he remembered a luminous Page devoted to "Be sure you're Right and then go into the High."

Mr. Dawdell had always been cautious that way. He was not an ambitious Explorer, a reckless Experimenter or an Intrepid Pioneer. For Instance, he didn't go in for any new-fangled Didoes until they were five or six Years old and had been thoroughly tested and approved by all the Neighbors.

He never bought a Bicycle until after Autos came in. He wanted to be sure that they were safe to use and would stand the Wear and Tear.

Up to last Fall he wore a Derby. He didn't want to buy the Soft Kind until certain that the Fedora was more than a transitory Fad.

His Excuse for wearing Detachable Cuffs is that the Style may change back at any time from Attached Cuffs to Detachable Cuffs and if it does he wants to have a lot of Detachable Cuffs all ready to wear. Here we have a Brand of Intelligence often encountered but seldom understood and appreciated.

Once he served on a Jury and held up the Verdict for Two Days because he felt sure that all of the Witnesses on Both Sides had perjured Themselves, consequently he was not in possession of any accurate Information upon which to base a definite Conclusion.

Hatching Out His Roll.

The only Reason he is alive now is that so many Drivers are good Dodgers because, when Mr. Dawdell gets out into the Street and it becomes a Question as to whether he shall hurry on across or beat it back to the Sidewalk, that is a Problem which cannot be settled offhand. He has to get out a Pencil and a Pad of Paper and work on it for quite a While.

Possibly you have heard of his famous Wager. On a certain Wednesday he laid Odds of 2 to 1 that the next Day would be Thursday but that Evening he heard a Rumor that the World was coming to an End, so at 11:30 P. M. he hedged.

Even from this Blue Print you may be able to corral a correct Line on Mr. Dawdell, otherwise known as Safety First. All he wanted at any time was a lead-pipe Cinch which did not involve any Element of Risk.

The Bull Market and the Real Estate Boom were simply made to Order for Birds of his general Description, it being a well-known zoological Fact that the Village Miser who is afraid to put any Coin into the Building and Loan will always go to the County Fair and fall for the Shell Game.

It is the Concern promising Ten Per Cent a Month that brings all of that mildewed Money out of the Stockings. To the Sure-Thingers all that is Real looks Counterfeit whereas the Phonies seem to be not only plausible but absolutely gilt-edged.

Mr. Dawdell had pinched out a Bank Roll and he was sitting on it to keep it warm. He was waiting for a Chance to double his Money over Night but he didn't propose to rush into any speculative Deal until he knew that it was air-tight, sound and guaranteed. In the meantime he was watching the Stock Market and the Guardian Angel supposed to take care of Suckers was on a Vacation.

Everything had been going up and up. He watched the Ticker and the Black Board and the Newspaper Quotations and he could not refrain from making Mind Bets.

All Set for a Killing.

As, for Instance, if he had bought 1,000 Shares of Milk Can Preferred on July 1st and held it until September 15th, he would have cleared enough to permit him to take on 5,000 Shares of Bohunkus Steel Coil Common at the Low Point and hold it until just before the Holidays and then, by slapping all of the Velvet into Gilhooley Oil, Gas and Vapor he could have closed out early in February, just before the Break, with a total Profit of, say $630,000, or in Round Numbers $650,000, if not more. Making the Whole Thing well worth his time.

The only Reason in the World that he hadn't Played his Hunches and cleaned up a Ton of Jack was that he wanted to watch the Market for a considerable Period of Time and make sure that the Bull Movement was to be continuous and perpetual instead of a Spasmodic Reaction to certain evanescent Conditions, if you know what that means. If you don't, the Author will be unable to give you any Help.

Well, the upward Trend had been so continuous that even Mr. Dawdell finally knew that the Psychological Moment had arrived and that everything was set for a Killing. As nearly as he could learn Every One Else in the World had been loading it into Trucks and carting it away and now it was Time for him to get His.

So he conferred with some of those wise Insiders who did not know how to talk above a Whisper. They were shrewd Tipsters who got all of the good Information within a Day or two after it came out in the Newspapers. They asked Mr. Dawdell if he had come in Contact with the Rumor that the Inert Motor Co. intended to double Production, Declare a Stock Dividend, absorb the Dinkus Interests and close a Ten Year Contract with the Bazinsky Factory.

No, it seemed that Mr. Dawdell had not succeeded in dreaming any of these Pipe Dreams, but they were right in Line with the general Optimism of the Market and helped to confirm his Belief that Inert Motors would continue to jump, possibly for Years to come.

On the very Day on which he decided to set in his Stack, about 10,000 other cautious Gamblers, every one of whom had a Head shaped exactly like the Citrus Growth, which was balanced on Mr. Dawdell's Shoulders, arrived at the same Conclusion by the Exercise of the same kind of Almost-Reasoning Powers.

There comes a Time in every spectacular Orgy of Inflation when a vast Flock of Lambs appears on the Highway, capering gaily and bleating in unison as it heads for the Slaughter House. The Appearance on the Scene of these innocent and trusting Fauna is always a Cue for the Thimble-Riggers, Manipulators, Bandittl, Second-Story Men and Yeggs, who are carrying big Lines which cost practically Nothing, to slip the Green Goods to the Yokels, get from under and hot-foot to the Woods with the Swag. The Idea being to Cop while the Copping is good.

How happy were all of those eager Doodle Bugs when they learned that they could still purchase some of the desirable Stock! They took it as rapidly as the polite and respectable Burglars could shovel it out to them.

Came a Day when those who had once owned the beautiful lithographed Certificates were in the dreamy Southland listening to cracked Ice, raving Promoters and moaning Jazz, while the would-be Wallingfords were in their respective Cellars counting the Lumps of Coal and wondering if there would be plenty of Reading Matter at the Poor House.

When the Dirigible exploded and the light-hearted Passengers were strewn all over the Landscape, it was then that Mr. Dawdell, following his usual deliberate Methods, refused to believe what he had seen until there had been more or less Corroboration.

After the Stock dropped about two Miles and the Parachute refused to open, Mr. Dawdell, ever controlled by an Instinctive Caution, said to himself, "This may be just a temporary Slump, so I had better not do anything rash now or I may regret it Week after next."

He decided to watch the Market for a couple of Months and then, if there was no Recovery, he would know for sure that the Bears had control of the Situation and it would be time to duck and, afterward, take a Lead Pencil and figure how he stood, if at all.

So he carefully avoided any headlong or hasty Procedure, waiting until Inert Motors had tobogganed from 181 to 64 before sending Word to the Broker.

He is now saving up another Roll, but when he gets it he is going to be more careful and not go against any Game of Chance unless he has a sure-fire System.

CASHIER OF KITZMILLER BANK TOOK LIFE MONDAY

Robert L. Wilson Dies Twenty Minutes After Firing Bullet Into Brain At His Home

FUNERAL WAS YESTERDAY

Robert L. Wilson, 35, cashier of the First National Bank at Kitzmiller, Garrett county, committed suicide at nine o'clock Monday morning when he fired a bullet from a .38 calibre revolver through his head. He died twenty minutes after the shot was fired.

Andrew W. Gonder, justice of the peace of Oakland, who acted as coroner, after conducting an investigation surrounding the tragedy, stated that the cause of death was a self-inflicted wound.

Left No Message

No mesages to his wife or to any of his friends were left by Mr. Wilson, but Mrs. Wilson said he remarked to her Sunday night, "I don't see how I can stand it any more."

The bank at Kitzmiller had been under Mr. Wilson as conservator since the closing of all banks on March 5 and bank examiners arrived in Kitzmiller for the purpose of making an investigation of the bank's affairs and the possible re-opening of the institution on a one hundred per cent basis shortly before the act was committed.

Mr. Gonder and Deputy Sheriff Clarence Spear made the investigation of the cause of death, which occurred in the bathroom of the family home, located on the second floor of the bank building. The bullet after passing through Mr. Wilon's head pierced a a linen closet door and fell on a shelf inside.

Mr. Wilson is survived by his widow, two children, Robert and Mary Ann; his mother, Mrs. Charles M. Wilson, Kitzmiller; three brothers, W. Lyle Wilson, of Keyser, W. Va.; Hollis Wilson, of Tunnelton, W. Va., and Harry Wilson, of Kitzmiller, and a sister, Miss Virginia Wilson, also of Kitzmiller.

Mr. Wilson was a member of the Democratic State Central Committee of Garrett County and he also served as a member of the Garrett County Board of Education from 1922 until 1927 and had been cashier of the bank for about fifteen years. He was a member of the Masonic lodge at Westernport.

Funeral services were conducted yesterday, with interment in the cemetery at Elk Garden, West Va.

"It is a symbol of remembrance for the World War dead, and when seen on the coat will show that we still remember and honor the supreme sacrifice our war dead made for America," a member of the auxiliary stated.

"A country which remembers deeds such as theirs cannot be indifferent to present calls for patriotic service and America can be confident that heroic service will come from its citizens in every hour of need."

With the poppy contributions the auxiliary is helping to carry on the disabled veterans and fatherless families.

Continuance Granted in Hearing for W. H. Smouse

Continuance in the hearing of a case against W. H. Smouse, of Oakland, who is charged in a warrant for his arrest issued at the instance of Mrs. Bertha Hoye with assault with intent to kill, was granted last Thursday by Justice of the Peace W. A. Gonder when State's Attorney W. W. Dawson stated he was unable to get all the necessary witnesses.

The defendant is alleged to have thereatened Mrs. Hoye with a revolver at her home on Sunday, May 7.

Monday evening charges of reckless driving and carrying concealed weapons were lodged against Mr. Smouse by Corporal Thomas Currie of the State police. Mr. Smouse is also alleged to have threatened Officer Currie, Walter W. Dawson and Justice Gonder with assault.

BILL INTRODUCED WOULD DEVELOP YOUGH RIVER

Pennsylvania Representative Wants $3,500,000 Spent

A bill providing for the improvement of the Youghiogheny watershed was introduced in the House of Representatives at Washington last Friday by Congressman J. Buell Snyder, of Perryopolis, Pa. It was ordered printed and was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

The measure provides for the expenditure of $3,500,000 for the construction of at least four dams which are to be operated by the Government on a similar basis as those at the Muscle Shoals project in "order to encourage local, agricultural, industrial and economic development."

Congressman Snyder stated that he felt the bill "is in keeping with the present-day demand of the people that the water power of the nation be harnessed and operated directly to benefit the working man, the farmer and the home owner."

"This project, if completed, would furnish power, light and heat and fertilizer for not only Western Pennsylvania, but a radius much greater. Where we now have depleted forests, barren hills and hundreds of thousands of acres of starved surface, we could have rich fields, comfortable homes, bountiful orchards and valuable forests."

The bill authorizes the expenditure of the sum of $3,500,000 for at least four dams in the Youghiogheny River watershed (not now utilized by public utilities) located above Connellsville, Fayette county, Pa., which includes the Upper Youghiogheny River, the Casselman River, Laurel Hill Creek and all other mountain streams in said watershed; two of these dams to be built between Connellsville and Confluence on the Youghiogheny River; one in the neighborhood of Somerfield on the Youghiogheny River and a fourth on the Casselman River at a most appropriate place between Confluence and Meyersdale.

MORE R. F. C. PROJECTS ARE BEGUN DURING WEEK

Six New Ones Added Since Last Thursday—Work Is Now Going Ahead in Fifteen Centers

350 ARE NOW EMPLOYED

In spite of the unprecedented rainfall throughout the county, R. F. C. work relief projects continue to mount and increasing numbers of men who are heads of needy families are being put to work. The payroll for the week ending May 13, which will be distributed this week, includes six additional projects since the preceding week.

The number of men receiving relief through this medium tripled in this period, according to Charles W. Ream, of Crellin, chairman of the Garrett County Welfare Board, the disbursing agency of R. F. C. relief funds in the county.

Work is now going ahead in fifteen centers throughout the county, the last being a community project within the incorporated limits of Oakland. Such projects are also under way in Mountain Lake Park, Loch Lynn, Deer Park and Grantsville. By the time the payroll for the week ended May 20th is released, it is estimated that approximately 350 men will be receiving aid through work relief.

Garrett county will not only be helping her needy men through this method and benefiting by the much needed improvements effected in town and county areas but all the people of the county will benefit indirectly by the money which is being released and put into circulation each week.

Community groups are eagerly presenting work projects to the Board each week. Miss Wilcox, administrator for the Welfare Board, spoke of a group of women representing a far distant Civic Club who came to Oakland to appeal for necessary labor in repairing the road leading to their local cemetery. The proposal will be put before the Board this Thursday evening at their regular weekly meeting, and men of that community who have qualified for relief will probably be put to work shortly, Miss Wilcox stated.

The whole scheme is unquestionably the sanest and most constructive possible, according to a business man of the county, for it accomplishes several things in one operation: relief to the needy of a type that helps men to keep their own self respect and not ask for charity; great benefit to the county in public improvement and indirect benefit to the public at large by the release of large sums of money spent by the workers.

Wholesale quantities of garden seed have been shipped to the Welfare Board for distribution to families whose heads are on work relief. A group of women are now employed in packaging these seed in small containers. The seed will be distributed through local registration centers. In the case of widows or in families where the head is incapacitated, seeds will probahly be given. "It is not possible to give garden seed to everyone applying," Miss Wilsox stated, "as our supply would not permit of such general distribution, the number of families being limited to possibly one thousand. It is hoped the seed will be ready for distribution the first part of the week. Distribution has been delayed because the full shipment of seed has not yet been received in Oakland."

Girl Scouts Must Sign For Registration Tonight

Girl Scouts desiring to remain active for the ensuing year must sign for registration tonight, the girl scout captain has announced. Dues for the annual re-registration must be turned in by next week, it was also stated.

Girl scouts are re-registered each year with national headquarters so that an accurate check may be made on active troops, and tonight is the deadline for signing up. At present there are about thirty members of the local troop.

County Emerges From Rainfall

Garrett county emerged yesterday and today from the continual rainfall which has dropped 4.31 inches of water here since May 1, and weather predictions were favorable for an improvement in conditions.

The largest amount of rainfall recorded in any one day was 1.05 on Saturday, May 6. Deep Creek Lake lacks one and one-tenth feet from going over the spillway.

The thermometer dropped to 37 degrees last night, only 5 degrees from freezing, which was the coldest morning recorded for May.

FOUR CONSERVATION UNITS ARE ASSIGNED IN STATE

Two Companies to Come To Garrett County Within Few Days

Partial selection of Maryland companies of the Civilian Conservation Corps, to be sent to reforestation camps in the state was made yesterday by officers at the headquarters of the Third Corps Area.

The men will be sent into the field after receipt of orders, expected today or tomorrow, and as soon as arrangements for transportation are completed with the railroads.

The companies so far selected are the 324th company from Fort Howard to State camp No. 2 in the Green Ridge forest, fifteen miles west of Hancock; company No. 326, from the Holabird camp, to state camp No. 1, in the Savage River forest, near New Germany, nineteen miles west of Frostburg; company No. 304, from Fort Humphreys, is assigned to state camp No. 3 at Swallow Falls, eleven miles northwest of Oakland; and the company No. 377, composed of men from both Humphreys and Holabird, will go to camp Ritchie.

All of the companies will consist of 185 men except the last, which is to have seventy-five. This company will be filled to authorized strength of 215 from the next increment of Maryland men to be recruited for the conservation corps.

Oakland Hi Has Largest Number of Graduates With 82—99 Girls and 86 Boys

ALL SCHOOLS INCREASED

One hundred eighty-five seniors of the six high schools of Garrett county will be graduated during the middle of June, providing they complete the remainder of the requirements, according to F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools. This is the highest number ever to be graduated from the high schools of the county and every one shows an increase. Last year 130 seniors were graduated, which was 10 less than the previous year.

Friendsville, with 17 graduates, shows an increase of 10; Grantsville, with 27, shows an increase of 16; Accident, with 27, shows an increase of 11; Oakland, with 82, shows an increase of 5; Kempton, with 9, shows an increase of 1; and Kitzmiller, with 23, shows an increase of 12.

Girl graduates outnumber boy graduaes 99 to 86, and Kitzmiller is the only school wherein there are more boys than girls, 13 boys graduating as compared to 10 girls. Including those who are expected to be graduated this year, the number of students going out from the high schools of the county since 1912, when the first class was graduated from Oakland High school, totals 1,301.

COMMITS SUICIDE AFTER KILLING HIS SON, AGE 6

Samuel Bowman Found Hanging From Tree by Suspenders After Three Hour's Search

TRIED FIRST TO USE GUN

Samuel Bowman, 68, who shot and killed Harry Phillips Bowman, 6, an illegitimate son, at the home of the boy's grandmother, Mrs. Delphia Brant, about nine miles north of Oakland, Wednesday morning, and who then turned the gun on himself which failed to explode, was found about 11 o'clock of the same day hanging from a tree by his suspenders, by Corporal Thomas Currey in company with county officers. He had been dead about two hours.

He had been charged with being the father of a second illegitimate child of Edith E. Brant Bowman, about two weeks ago, and he appeared at the house shortly after wanting to settle the matter. He was told "I can get along better if you stay away from here," and so did not appear again until Wednesday morning.

Coming to the house he entered and took the boy on his lap, and had been there only a few minutes when he fired a .38 calibre bullet through his heart. He then put the gun in his own mouth and pulled the trigger but on account of a broken trigger spring, it failed to explode.

John and Charles Brant, 26 and 19, respectively, sons of the grandmother, took the gun from Bowman following a sharp tussle, and notified authorities when Bowman fled. The child died almost immediately.

Walter W. Dawson, State's attorney; W. A. Gonder, coroner; Clarence Spear, deputy sheriff; and Corporal Thomas Currie, state police, investigated the murder and discovered the man's body on a hillside, about one mile from the house, three hours later. They rendered a verdict of murder in the ease of the boy but held no inquest in the death of Bowman. He was found so close the ground, it was said, his knees almost touched.

Bowman has a wife, five sons and two daughters, and lives about three miles from the Brant home. He is a State game warden on Meadow Mountain, near the Thayerville tower.

In the house at the time of the murder were John, Charles and William Brant, the latter 15 years old, sons of Mrs. Delphia Brant; Mrs. Edith E. Brant Bowman, widow of James Bowman and mother of George Bowman, aged 10, and the two illegitimate children of Samuel Bowman.

Samuel Bowman pleaded guilty in the Circuit court here on December, 1926, concerning the first child and had planned at one time to adopt him.

Tracks along Deep Creek Lake shoreline, identified as those of Bowman, were found which indicated he had paced up and down for some moments, but whether they were made before or after the murder, was not known.

New Fishing Laws To Go Into Effect June 1

On June 1 the new fishing laws go into effect in the State. The law relative to Deep Creek provides that anyone holding an angler's license may fish this lake without any additional license or cost.

A non-resident license may be secured at a cost of $5.00, which, however, is State-wide, and not only includes the lake but all other waters in Maryland.

The new law also provides a non-resident license for three days at a cost of $2.00. The lake licenses entitle the holder to fish on Sundays in Deep Creek. Children under 14 years of age are not required to take out a license.

Grand Lodge Officers To Visit Local K. of P. Organization

On Friday night, May 19, the following Grand Lodge officers will visit Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias: Grand Chancellor Ben P. Sandy, Baltimore; Grand Keeper of Records and Seal, A. Elwood Martak, Baltimore; Supreme Representative, Nelson W. Russler, Cumberland; District Deputy Grand Chancellor, Odith M. Brotemarkle, and Joseph W. Snyder, of Cumberland.

All members of the local lodge are requested to attend tomorrow night.

Lesson for May 21

JESUS ANSWERS HIS ADVERSARIES

LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:13-44.

GOLDEN TEXT—The officers answered, Never man spake like this man. John 7:46.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Talking With Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Answering Hard Questions.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Way to Meet Opposition.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Deal With Objectors.

I. Jesus Silences His Enemies (vv. 13-34).

1. The Pharisees and Herodians (vv. 13-17). In order to destroy him they sought to discredit him among the people. To this end they sent representatives of both factions (v. 13).

a. Their question (v. 14). The Pharisees contended that since God was the real king of Israel, it was not obligatory to pay taxes to a heathen king. The Herodians were supporters of Herod. They came to him with flattery on their lips with this subtle question. For him to answer yes would have discredited him with the people, and to have said no would have made him liable to arrest by the Roman authorities.

b. Jesus' reply (vv. 15-17). He asked for a coin to be brought and inquired whose image and superscription it bore, declaring that those who accept the coin of Caesar should pay taxes to Caesar. In this reply Jesus escapes their trap and enunciates a principle which applies to all time and conditions as to the responsibility of Christians to civil government. Those who accept the protection and benefits of civil government should support that government. However, being a loyal citizen is not enough. There is a duty to God.

2. The Sadducees (vv. 18-27). The Pharisees and Herodians being silenced, the Sadducees came with a question which involved not only immortality but the resurrection of the body.

a. The case proposed (vv. 19-23). The law of Moses made it not only legal but morally binding in the case of a man dying without children for his brother to take his wife (Deut. 25:5). They proposed the case of a woman married successively to seven brothers. They asked whose wife she shall be in the resurrection.

b. Jesus' reply (vv. 24-26). By a quotation from the Mosaic law (Exod. 3:6), he proves the resurrection of the dead and their continued existence beyond death as human beings. He showed that marriage is for the present life only. In this respect human beings will be as the angels in the resurrection life. He pointed out that their gross error was due to two things:

(1) Ignorance of the Scriptures (v. 24). In the very Scriptures which they professed to believe was positive proof of the resurrection (Exod. 3:6).

(2) Ignorance of the power of God (v. 24). God is able to provide a life where there will be no death, no births, or marriages.

3. The scribes (vv. 28-34). Perceiving that Christ had effectively answered the Sadducees, one of the scribes came with the question as to which was the great commandment. Jesus summed up man's whole duty in one word, love—"love to God and love to man."

II. Jesus' Question (vv. 35-37).

He now turned upon his adversaries with a counter question. Its answer involves the central problem of Christian philosophy, indeed of all rational thinking. Christ's place in the scale of being is the foundation truth of all right thinking. "Is Jesus Christ man or God, is he God and man?" David spoke of the coming Messiah as both his son and God. There is but one answer to this question—the incarnation of God in Christ.

III. Jesus Condemns the Scribes (vv. 38-40).

The attitude of these people toward Jesus was not determined by insuperable intellectual difficulties, but by their moral nature.

1. They loved to go in long clothing (v. 38). This means they loved ostentation and display.

2. They loved to be saluted in public places (v. 38).

3. They sought to occupy the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts (v. 39).

4. They devoured widows' houses (v. 40). They lined their pockets at the expense of helpless women.

5. They offered hypocritical prayers (v. 40).

IV. Jesus' Praise of the Sacrificial Giving of the Widow (vv. 41-44).

These words of Jesus reveal unto us the fact that in God's sight a gift is measured by the heart motive.

ELECTRICITY is [illegible] your cheapest servant

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

May 9, 1933

A great thing has occurred amongst us. We have made a complete turn-around, and at last America's face is toward the future.

Three years---1929 to 1932---wo Americans looked backward. All our old financial and political machinery was geared to pull us out of the depression by the same door through which we entered. We thought it simply a case of going back the way we came. It failed. We now realize that the way out is forward---through it.

Thanks for that belongs to President Roosevelt. Inauguration Day he turned the Ship of State around. Having observed the failure of sincere efforts to haul us back the way we came, he designed a new method---new political and financial machinery---to pull us out the way we are going---forward. He is clearing international obstacles out of the way; he does not stand in awe of tariffs. The people begin to feel that he does not take advice from the "interests"; that he has courage and loyalty to work for one supreme interest only---the welfare of the American people. That is a big achievement for two months in office.

And now we all look to what is coming; we grow less and less concerned with what is behind. We are looking for a hand-hold on the haul rope. Every man wants to do what he can, and all he can.

The best thing I can do for the Country is to create industry by building good motor cars. If I knew anything better to do, I would do it. Industry must be my contribution. Motor cars must face ahead to the future, like everything else. They are so much a part of the Nation's daily life that if they lag behind they hold the Country back.

General Items

Considerable work has been done under the supervision of the community relief committee in putting the community park into good condition. They have trimmed the trees, removed dead trees and stumps, are building driveway and tennis courts. Grading is also being done on the school playground.

The Cemetery committee urges all lot owners in the Grantsville cemetery to clean their lots preparatory to Memorial Day. Much more interest has been shown during the past few years resulting in a neat looking cemetery, and the committee hopes to retain cooperation of all lot owners to continue this favorable condition.

Church services will be conducted in the Methodist church, Sunday morning following Sunday school. All are invited to attend.

Baseball Game

The Grantsville tossers took another game from the Addison team at Addison, Sunday afternoon. The score was 18 to 7. Batteries for Grantsville were Miller, Metz and Fazenbaker; for Addison Burgard, Barley and Kurtz. Rodamer, playing for Grantsville scored four hits at five trips to the plate.

TYPHOID PROTECTION IS NEEDED BY VACATIONISTS

See Doctor Before Starting on Hiking or Automobile Trips

As the summer approaches thoughts of holiday trips and of week-ends out of doors loom up pleasantly. In preparation for such trips, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, says to boy and girl scouts, to prospective campers, and hikers, and to other vacationists, "If you are planning to go camping or hiking or on long automobile trips, and have not been vaccinated against typhoid fever within two or three years, go to your doctor and be protected against the disease before you start. If you have no doctor, ask your health officer to do it. Three inoculations a week apart are necessary to complete the immunization. The protection lasts for a certain period and then must be repeated.

"Typhoid fever," Dr. Riley explained, "is one of the diseases that flares up during the summer and early fall. Therefore this is the season when we want to take all possible precautions against it.

"The disease usually is contracted," he continued, "by way of the mouth from the use of water, milk or other foods that have been contaminated by the disease-producing germs. Every case of typhoid fever is linked either directly or indirectly with some previous case or carrier. The disease producing germs are discharged with the body waste of the person who is ill with the disease or who has had it at some time and is a carrier of it. Unless great care is taken to disinfect the urine and other body waste discharged by such persons, before it is disposed of, the germs pass into and pollute the soil, or into streams and wells and pollute the water supply. Milk and other foods may be contaminated if handled by carriers who are careless and not clean in their personal habits.

A carrier is a person who is apparently well, but who has had the disease at some time—possibly years ago—but who still continues to excrete the typhoid germs. Very often a 'carrier' does not know that he or she is a source of danger to others and takes no precautions to protect others.

"Typhoid fever is not the menace it was before ways of preventing the spread of the disease were understood as they are today, and before precautions were taken to protect public water supplies, milk and other foods from contamination by the disease-producing germs. But as I have pointed out, there are still insidious sources of danger that can be best warded off by the individual by vaccination against typhoid fever within two or three years, and are going on a trip during which you are likely to be exposed to these dangers, go to your doctor, or your health officer, and have it done."

Farm Relief Bill Passed

The new farm relief bill, which has been pending since shortly after the present administration came into power, has been enacted and plans for putting at least a part of its provisions into effect are being worked out as rapidly as possible by both Federal and State authorities.

The declared purpose of the new farm act is to increase the purchasing power of farmers. By this means it is intended to afford more than farm relief by making it possible for farmers to buy the products of industry.

Several methods for bringing about an increase in rural buying power are provided in the act. Just what is to be done this season will be determined immediately in hearings called by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

The alternative methods made possible by the act are:

(1) The Secretary of Agriculture may arrange with individual farmers to reduce their acreage or production by a specified amount, and to compensate them either by paying rentals or by making direct benefit payments. This would be immediate relief, with only the participating producers receceiving the benefits.

(2) By entering into marketing agreements with processors and others to reduce wasteful and price-depressing competition, excessive handling charges and so on, the Secretary may bring about better prices to farmers.

Funds to pay rental and benefit payments would come initially from the Federal Treasury. Subsequently, they would some from an adjustment tax levied on the first processing of the basic commodity. The basic commodities named in the act are cotton, wheat, hogs, field corn, rice, tobacco and milk and its products; but the Secretary may exclude from the operation of the act any of these commodities if its inclusion would not further the purpose of the act.

Refinancing of farm debts at lower rates of interest is also provided for.

THE MARYLAND BIBLE SOCIETY'S CORNER

"The Word of Our God Shall Stand Forever"

The Book of Esther tells the dramatic story of one of the great women of the Bible, whose loyalty to her people and unselfish devotion to duty saved the Jewish nation from destruction. The authorship of this book is unknown.

The message of this book is to be found in its veiled teaching of an overshadowing providence in connection with God's people, and the retribution which is sure to overtake their enemies. Its leading topic is the deliverance of the Jews by Queen Esther.

Ahasuerus made a great feast for all his nobles. In the midst of their revelry, the King commanded his queen, the noble Vashti, to appear in the banquet hall, that her charms might be displayed before the drunken revelers. Vashti refused to be thus humiliated, and as a punishment to her and a warning to all disobedient wives, is divorced and cast out.

The dramatic incidents of the book center in Haman's unreasonable hatred of Mordecai. Mordecai, a Jew, succeeds in having his niece, a young woman of rare beauty and equal discernment, elevated to the throne in Vashti's place, but the fact of her Jewish nationality is not revealed to the King.

Haman, the King's prime minister, has been steadily advanced from honor to honor, until he ranks first in the court of Ahasuerus; but Mordecai, the Jew, refuses to do obeisance before him, and daily treats Haman in contempt.

Haman is so exasperated by Mordecai's conduct that he plans not only his destruction, but that of all the Jews—which, of course, would include the Queen. This plot becoming known to Mordecai, he urges Queen Esther to intercede with the King on behalf of her people.

Esther bravely approached the King unsummoned, an act which might have cost her life. Ahasuerus, touched by her beauty, extended his golden scepter as a sign of recognition and clemency, and asked: "What wilt thou Queen Esther, it shall be thine to the half of my Kingdom."

The Queen's request was in the form of an invitation to a banquet, to which Haman was also invited. The banquet was highly successful, Haman returned home elated, and told his family of the exalted honor he had received. "But," said he, "all this availeth me nothing so long as Mordecai the Jew sitteth at the King's gate."

Haman thereupon erected a gallows upon which to hang Mordecai. That night the King could not sleep. While reading the Chronicles of his nation, he discovered that Mordecai had unearthed a conspiracy to assassinate the King, and that no recompense had been made to him for so valuable a service.

The next morning the King called Haman and asked: "What shall be done with the man whom the King delighteth to honor?" Haman, puffed up with pride, thinking only of himself as the recipient of the King's honors, replied: "Let the royal apparel be brought which the King useth to wear, and the horse that the King rideth upon, and the crown royal which is set on his head,, and let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the King's most noble princes, array the man withal, mount him on the King's horse, and proclaim before him: "Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the King delighteth to honor." All this was done, but to Mordecai, the Jew.

The next evening at her second banquet Esther requested the life of her people. Her request was granted, and the wicked Haman was hanged on the gallows he had built for Mordecai.

The last great lesson of the Book of Esther is that hate destroys the hater. Among the Jews their deliverance is still celebrated in the feast of Purim.

Notes on Early Maryland Governors:

PHILIP CALVERT AND CHARLES, WHO SAW THE END OF CALVERT RULE

By KATHERINE SCARBOROUGH
(In The Baltimore Sunday Sun, April 30, 1933.)

The fevers and seditions which had agitated the colony of Maryland for nearly two decades following the death of Leonard Calvert, first of its proprietary Governors, subsided like a tropical storm sated with its own fury when Philip Calvert, half-brother to Cecil, the second Lord Baltimore, assumed the government in the autumn of 1660.

Philip Calvert had been secretary of the province for several years. At the instance of Lord Baltimore he had served as a balance wheel to his predecessor, the erratic and unscrupulous Josias Fendall, until that rogue went completely berserk and attempted to set up a Republic in Maryland with himself as chief potentate. It was only logical, therefore, that, in stripping the rogue of his honors, Lord Baltimore should elevate to the highest position in the colony his young kinsman whom he knew he could trust.

The proprietary's commission to Philip Calvert was dated June 21, 1660, and by October of that year the government was functioning smoothly under his leadership. Like his brothers, the new executive seemed to have been endowed at birth with a talent for government. Cannily he developed the military organization which had constituted Fendall's sole contribution to statecraft, and popularized it by establishing a system of pensions for soldiers wounded or disabled in the service of the colony. In May, 1661, the Assembly, at the instance of the Governor, passed an act for the setting up of a mint in Maryland, the need for a sound currency being consequent upon a fearsome shrinking, due to overproduction, in the value of tobacco.

There is no evidence that such a mint ever was actually operated in Maryland, but rather it seems as if all the coins which made their appearance in the province after the act was passed had been struck in England upon designs worked out by Lord Baltimore himself. In order to establish their circulation every householder was compelled to secure ten shillings from the mint for each taxable in his family at the rate of two pence a pound for tobacco.

So tranquil and so prosperous was the colony at this time that immigrants began to pour into it. Many were Quakers who had been expelled from Virginia and who settled on the Eastern Shore, their presence there precipating an acrimonious boundary dispute whereby Maryland ultimately was to lose to the Penns and hence to Delaware thousands of acres to which, experts agree, she was by virtue of her charter entitled. Settlements were begun, too, near the head of the bay, and one of the most valuable citizens the colony was to have arrived at this time. This was Augustine Heermans, "late of Manhatuse, merchant," to whom Lord Baltimore granted six thousand acres of land which Heermans—soon Anglicized to Herman—erected into the famous Bohemia Manor.

Governor Calvert, who also became the first chancellor of Maryland by virtue of his position as head of the Provincial Court, lived for a while in St. Mary's, his home there being known as St. Peter's. Later, it was was occupied by Lord Baltimore. When it was occupied by Sir Lionel Copleyfi as the Royal Governor, it became known as the Governor's Castle and remained the executive mansion of the province until the capital was removed to Annapolis.

More particularly, though, is Philip Calvert identified with that lovely projection of land south of St. Andrew's creek which is still known as Chancellor's Point. Fragments of the home he erected there were to be discovered as recently as 1913, when James Walter Thomas mentioned them in his Chronicles of Colonial Maryland. Perhaps a careful search would disclose some of them today.

Concerning Philip Calvert's personal history, little is known. There is a record of his two marriages, but that is about all. His first wife was Anne Wolseley and his second her cousin, Jane Sewall. The latter marriage, incidentally, precipitated a curious tangle of relationships, as Jane Sewall's mother, after the death of her first husband, Secretary Henry Sewall, married her son-in-law's nephew, Charles Calvert, then Governor of Maryland, and, later, the third Lord Baltimore.

Charles Calvert (son of Cecil), who had come out to Maryland some time before and had made himself universally popular, succeeded his Uncle Philip as chief executive of the province in 1661. This scion of the Baltimores seems to have inherited an extraordinary degree of statesmanlike qualities of his projenitor, but the tide in the affairs of men had begun to run too strongly counter to the feudal idea which permeated the Calvert thinking to be successfully checked or resisted. Had the third Lord Baltimore been as wise as the Biblical serpent or as tender as the Scriptural dove he still would have been unable to avert the catastrophe which overtook him finally and put an end forever to Calvert rule in the New World. As it was, he maintained and defended his authority until 1689, when the King arrogantly, ignoring the provisions of his charter, stripped him of power and the lion's share of his revenues of the province upon which he and his ancestors had expended a fortune.

During the first years of his administration the great influx of foreigners which had swelled the population during the brief regime of his uncle continued and, characteristically, Maryland assimilated them, at the instance of Governor Calvert, by the passage of the first naturalization law formulated by any Colonial Assembly.

Thanks to the Governor's administrative ability, too, court houses and jails went up all over the colony soon after he assumed the government, and the first State House was built. Coroners were appointed in all the counties, the duties of Sheriffs were regulated and vital statistics were begun, with a provision for the publication of marriages. Roads were laid out, some of them surviving still beneath the concrete and asphalt of modern progress, and ferries were established to operate at fixed schedules.

Never had Maryland known such felicity and progress. Then, on November 30, 1675, Lord Baltimore, father of the Governor and proprietary of the colony, died. Governor Calvert, after assuming the titles and estates of his father in the province, set the affairs of the colony in order, appointed Thomas Notley to act as deputy on behalf of his Lordship's infant son, Cecil Calvert, and sailed for England.

Scarcely was he out of sight of land when trouble recurred on the score of religion. Like England, Maryland had become passionately protestant and a Rev. Mr. Yeo, apparently grieved at the lack of an Established Church in the colony, wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury complaining that Maryland had become "a Sodom of uncleanness and a pest house of iniquity."

Lord Baltimore was able fully to refute the charges made by this clergyman, but his blast was a warning of worse things to come. The new proprietary when he returned to Maryland in February, 1680, endeavored to forestall his critics by proposing laws for the speedy suppression of crimes and to restore, by a practical system of agriculture, the prosperity which had departed with the overproduction of tobacco.

His activities served far a time to placate the restive element and they delighted his adherents to such an extent that the Assembly of 1682 voted him 100,000 pounds of tobacco as an expression of gratitude. This gift was tactfully refused, his Lordship explaining that "considering the great charge of the province, he did not think fit to accept thereof." This was the act of a man familiar with a court where plunder was a synonym for perspicacity and where the King himself was a pensioner of France.

But this display of magnanimity was not enough to allay the unrest which fermented from one end of the colony to the other and which was fomented by Fendall, with the assistance of John Coode, "a wretch with no common share of villany." Their plot failed and Fendall was banished, but Coode, who was let off, continued to stir up the malcontents. Using the Indian bugaboo, he managed to work up a hotbed of sedition on the Severn and to frighten the simple-minded settlers in the outlying districts half out of their wits. Troubles also arose in connection with the royal revenue officials, two of whom were killed while on official business in Maryland, and Lord Baltimore was accused of obstructing their activities in the collection of duties imposed by Parliament. Even the King took occasion, in this instance, to administer a stinging rebuke to the proprietary.

New boundary disputes—this time with William Penn—made it imperative for the proprietary to go back to England once more. This time he set sail, never to return. To administer the government during his absence he appointed a regency of nine counselors, with William Joseph as president, to act under the nominal governorship of his infant son, Benedict Calvert.

The Protestant Revolution of 1688 in England furnished the restive element in Maryland with the very opportunity for which it had been praying. Rumors sprang up simultaneously in all directions of a Popish plot whereby the Protestants (who outnumbered the Catholics thirty to one) were to be exterminated root and branch by the authorities with the help of hordes of Northern Indians who were said to be awaiting the signal to swoop with intent to kill.

The credulous quaked with terror. Coode and his fellow-conspirators had no trouble in raising volunteers. The authorities, at the first hint of trouble, renewed with the Indians the treaty of peace which had been in force for years and began to collect arms and ammunition for defense. Many were arrested on the charge of "spreading false news." Excitement increased. So did tension and suspicion.

The accession of William and Mary to the throne of England precipitated further complications. The messenger whom Lord Baltimore dispatched to President Joseph with orders to proclaim the new sovereigns unfortunately died on the way and consequently delay in the acknowledgment of the Protestant King and Queen militated still further against the Maryland proprietary.

The cry of "No Popery" gathered incredible momentum. Coode and his followers, pretending to the gullible that the Indians were on the march and to others that they had organized merely to proclaim William and Mary descended on the capital and forced its surrender. Then they pursued its handful of defenders to the garrison at Mattapani, to which they had retreated, and succeeded in forcing them to yield. The terms of surrender included the one demand, "that noe Papist in this province (be)in any Office, Military or Civil as by their Majesties' Proclamation & the laws of England."

Lord Baltimore in England brought all possible pressure to bear at court for the vindication of his policies and the restoration of his authority, but his race in Maryland was run. The provisions of his charter were just so much eyewash in the view of a monarch who delighted in the soft insinuations which Coode and his party lavished upon him and who lusted after the revenue of the English colonies overseas. On February 1, 1689 (Old Style), the King recognized the insurgents, though he did not actually go to the length of revoking the Maryland charter, and empowered them to continue the government. On August 26, 1691, he added the finishing touch to the defeat of the proprietary's hopes and sent over Sir Lionel Copley, the first royal Governor, to administer the affairs of the colony.

Charles Calvert's regime as a benevolent landlord was over. He lived for years afterward, but he never returned to Maryland, though often, as he sat by the fire through the long English twilights, beaten in life and broken in fortune, he must have mused ruefully upon the land to which he had given so abundantly and which returned his tolerance with rancor and his mood with insurrection. But if he was bitter, he gave no sign. In all respects he stands out, at a distance of more than two centuries, as the embodiment of that Chancerian apostrophe: "He was a very parfit, gentil knight."

HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS WAS THE COLONY

BITTINGER

The daily rains of last week delayed further work of seeding the spring crops and many farmers are becoming disheartened with the prevailing conditions.

MT. LAKE PARK

Mrs. Margaret Jane Grove

When Mrs. Margaret Jane Grove died, a great personality passed into its long sleep. Last Thursday morning about five o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Manley, in Fairmont, West Va., at the age of 101 and three weeks, Mrs. Grove passed peacefully away. While she had been failing steadily for some time, her strong vitality held out the hope that death would not come so soon. Her mental faculties remained keen to the last and she was fully conscious of what was going on around her.

Mrs. Grove had been a widow since her early womanhood, her husband, Martin Grove having died 65 years ago. She was a native of Frederick county, a daughter of the late John Harn and Charlotte Hay Harn, an early historic family of the Liganore Valley, and was the last surviving member of a family of nine children, six daughters and three sons. A sister, Miss Ella Harn died three years ago, April 30, in Nebraska, at the age of 101 years and three months, and another sister, Mrs. Corilla Shearer died less than four years ago at the home of her niece, Mrs. McClellan Clayton, at Mt. Lake Park, at the age of 99 years.

The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Woodlawn chapel, Fairmont, with the Rev. Clarence W. Brickman, rector of Christ Episcopal church, officiating, and interment was made in the Woodlawn cemetery.

Mrs. Grove had a loveable, gentle manner and a keen mind. She was the first president of the Political Equality club in Fairmont and maintained until the last year before her death an interest in political affairs locally and nationally..

Mayor and Council Meet

The Mayor and Council met last Saturday evening, when bids for the removal of garbage during the summer months were opened. Mr. Hugh Echard was awarded the contract.

The 23rd, 24th, and 25th, inst., were designated as Clean-up Days in the Park. The town pays for the hauling, so the property owners will be at no expense—only the time and effort to gather the stuff together. There is only one requirement and that is that all rubbish, so far as possible, be placed in containers and conveniently placed along the alleys or streets so as to be easily gathered. Nothing detracts so much from the attractiveness of a town, especially one that aspires to be known as a summer resort, than unsightly piles of rubbish, tin cans and what not. And nothing is more unhealthy and unsanitary than refuse hidden away in dark and out-of-the-way places. So, let's help the authorities make this an attractive place in which to spend the summer. If you have a place to rent, cleanliness will help you rent it. If a place to sell, cleanliness will help you sell it. If a place in which to live, cleanliness will help you live comfortably.

And while we are on the subject of cleanliness, we want to take a poke at the trash and rubbish dump pile near the west end of the Park. There is everything in it from rotting vegetables to discarded automobile fenders. When the wind is right, the odor wafted to some parts of the Park is certainly not that of new mown hay or sweet violets. It ought to be gotten rid of. And we understand it will be.

* * *

The Council decided to install another fire plug, and we understand it will be placed this week. That is good news to property owners. The more water plugs the better the fire protection and the lower the fire hazzard. Then the insurance rates should be lowered.

* * *

More power to the Mt. Lake Ball club, although the boys did get trimmed last Saturday. Deer Park 14, Mt. Lake Park 11. But it was a 50-50 break, as Mt. Lake won the first game of the series. Our club hopes to come out in new uniforms soon. The members of the team should be encouraged in every possible way. It is a good advertisement and a depression blues modifier.

Personal Mention

Mr. and Mrs. MacClellan Clayton have returned from Fairmont, where they were called by the illness and death of Mrs. Clayton's mother, Mrs. Margaret Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Harvey and child were the week-end guests of Mr. Harvey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Harvey.

Miss Sara B. Huff and Miss Vivian Clary are spending a few days at Jackson Mills, West Va.

Rev. E. T. Mowbray and brother, Rev. A. S. Mowbray are in Baltimore. They will return later in the season.

Mr. and Mrs. William Grimes and children are here from Pittsburgh, getting ready for the opening of the Mountain Lake Hotel the last of this month.

SCOOP'S COLUMN

By Scoop Himself

Hard as it is to do anything on an empty stomach, I must grind out a column before breakfast this morning to keep down the murmurs of discontent among The Republican readers.

It would be as much of a shock to the people here not to see this column as Hitler's peace speech was to the world. And notwithstanding the peace talk of Hitler, Roosevelt and those of other countries, I am armed to the teeth this week, and probably from now on. Look for the bulge in my pocket. And I suggest that Currie, Dawson, Gonder and others follow suit. "Seems like 'taint safe no more" for people to run around loose unless they get a pistol pulled on them.

It really would be safer if he had a water gun or cap pistol. The trigger might accidentally be pulled one of these days.

* * *

The popularity contest is postponed at least one week, to see who is the most popular with the undertaker.

* * *

Women in Chicago met recently and resolved that the new beer is unconstitutional, that it will not end depression and that it will "make 'em fat.". The first two reasons don't mean so much, but the last is a knock out argument. Women will not be beer drinkers.

* * *

The 3.2 question isn't causing as much stir as pee-wee golf did one summer, or nearly as much as cross-word or jig-saw puzzles did in their day. The stir is over already. The beer barons of Oakland have already become quiet. Unlike Castoria, they have ceased to cry for it.

* * *

Since money stopped flowing so freely around Oakland a lot of us are finding that one way to find contentment is to realize that we don't need half the things we thought we needed back in 1929.

* * *

And why does Hank the dog have to get all wound up in the grapevines almost every night and howl until he gets me out of bed.

Lack of sleep is what's the cause this week. That and an overworked office force. Those are two pretty good excuses if you believe them.

And what if you don't? See if I lose any more sleep over it.

MARRIED

Holtschneider—McAbee—Miss Nellie Celia McAbee, daughter of Mrs. Catherine McAbee, Dixie, W. Va., and William Henry Holtschneider, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Holtschneider, of Deer Park, were married Monday at St. Anthony's Catholic church, Ridgeley, W. Va., by Rev. Robert Kilgannon. The attendants were Mrs. Thos. Brailer, sister of the groom, and Henry McAbee, brother of the bride. The trainbearers were Mary Frances and Betty Hill. About sixty guests attended a reception at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony. The couple left on a wedding trip to Eastern cities.
